TORONTO PUG FAVORED OVER BRITISH HEAVY

Press and Fans of Old Country Acclaim Larry Gains

OFFERS SIDE BET

Phil Scott is Matched for Bout in London, June 13th

London, Eng., April 13—Acclaimed over here as a terrific puncher and one of the greatest colored heavyweights, Larry Gains, Canadian heavyweight champion, rules a strong favorite in the bout with Phil Scott, the British heavyweight champion set for June thirteen. Gains signed for the match today.

The critics don't think much of Scott's chances and on Gains' showing here this winter he certainly looks to have the wrong sort of opponent, for the climb back into the pathway to fistic fame. He himself claimed he was in splendid condition and offered to make a side bet of $500.

VIOLENT DEATHS TAKE 3 IN NORTH

Drowning, Suicide and Falling Tree Fatalities Reported

Cochrane, April 13—A series of tragedies in the district are reported here, in the drowning of a prospector, a death from suffocation under a fallen tree, and a suicide through drinking poison. All the victims were men.

Stanislaus Holdys, Polish by birth, a laborer employed by the Spruce Falls Construction company at the Abitibi Canyon, fell into the river while at work there, was swept away and drowned. His body was not recovered.

John J. Hamilton, 38, married with two children, was injured from Gilbert Plains, Man., recently to settle on a farm seven miles from Opasatika, was pinned under a huge tree when it toppled over the wrong way while he and Hector Buchanan were felling it. Buchanan could not lift the trunk alone, and Hamilton died of pain from suffocation when help came.

John Schiak, a Russian, about 40 years old, who owned a bush lot near Smooths, drank half of the contents of a ten-ounce bottle of sulphuric acid in a cache on the farm of Valentine Kroudachuk with whom he lived, and died in agony after telling of the deed.

CUT TOP OFF 24 FOOT HILL

Lingham Street Operations Well Consume Month

Lingham Street opening is an operation which will take the better part of a month, stated City Engineer Mott today. Work started with the gang working for three days at a time.

Part of the bluff which has stood on the street in the state in which nature left it thousands of years ago except for occasional excavations by Emily Street, is being taken off and the material therefrom is being used to fill hollows to the standard width of road twenty-four feet. This will be graded with crushed stone for macadamization.

The highest point of the bluff is 24 feet. Sidewalks will be built for the convenience of pedestrians.

There is at present a sewer running from the top of the bluff south early to Meyers street. About one hundred feet of this will be raised and a manhole put in one hundred feet from the present northern end. The portion of the sewer remaining will be used for the movement of sewage southward. The riddel sewer and the sewer to be laid from this point will drain to Emily Street.

KING CONTINUES TO IMPROVE

(Canadian Press)

Windsor, England, April 12—Official bulletin—Sandringham, Windsor Castle today said the King was continuing his improvement. He has been ill with sub-acute bronchitis.

LATEST PORTRAIT OF KING GEORGE

The news that His Majesty King George has so recovered from his indisposition that he is able to attend to matters of state, is very welcome news in all his subjects through the information that he was unable to attend the Easter devotions through the Christian communities throughout the world. This is one of the latest portraits of the King, taken two months ago, showing him in the resplendent uniform of a Field Marshal of the British Army.

MINOR MOTOR CRASHES HERE

Traffic on the King's Highway was especially heavy all day yesterday but drivers were careful and no accidents of a serious nature, was reported. Traffic Officer Ryles was called east on the highway last night when a car owned by Nick Gurniak of Point Anne, sideswiped a car owned by C. Wright, of this city. The Gurniak car was travelling east, while Mr. Wright was proceeding towards the city. It is alleged by Officer Ryles that the Gurniak car had but one headlight lit and that both cars were travelling well to the centre of the road. The cars were not badly damaged and were able to proceed on their respective ways under their own power.

Information was secured that a car was abandoned on the King's Highway east of the city and Traffic Officer Ryles went down in the police gute. He found a Chevrolet sedan license number 9-D-307 on the side of the road with a tank full of gas but the meter in the centre broken. The car was towed into Bellevile and the Toronto authorities notified as it is believed the car was stolen from that city. A note was left in the car asking that the police in Belleville be notified.

Considerable progress was made in testing brakes on Saturday on the highway and many of the cars tested were found defective to a slight degree, but not sufficient to cause summons. This work will be continued during the week.

NEW AERIAL RECORD IS SET AT DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., April 13. — Ruth Nichols, Rye, N.Y., set a new air speed record for women here today in three kilometer course here this morning at the rate of 200.4 miles per hour. Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam held the previous record of 181.157 miles per hour.

Up to the age of eleven, the average boy is taller and heavier than the average girl.

BOARD OF HEALTH ADOPT RIGID SANITATION MEASURES

Hope McGinnis Takes Samples of Cream From Vendors

Samples of cream offered for sale on the city market were collected on Saturday by the sanitary inspector, Mr. Hope McGinnis, and shipped to the district laboratory at Peterborough.

Mr. McGinnis stated today that he was empowered recently by the Board of Health to inspect the milk and other places of producers of milk and cream offered for consumption in the city. Inspections will be made at irregular times so that visits can be made without opportunity to see conditions as they generally are. This sanitary measure has been adopted for the purpose of improving conditions under which milking is conducted and to eliminate any possibility of conditions which might not be deemed to the best interests of the consuming public.

Rigid stand will be taken by the health authorities and where improvements are found advisable the producer will be given opportunity to make corrections. On a second warning without action on the part of the producer the sanitary inspector is authorized to put a ban on the sale of milk and cream offered for consumption in the city. Inspections will be made at irregular times so that visits can be made without opportunity to see conditions as they generally are.

CHURCH FLOOR COLLAPSED UNDER FUNERAL THRONG

Otter Lake, Mich., April 13—(AP)—More than 150 persons escaped injury in the collapse of the main floor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, during a funer al Sunday afternoon.

The weight of the building began to sway and the floor collapse ed, precipitating the entire congregation into the basement. Only the pulpit and that part of the church containing the casket remained in place.

The pastor ordered the choir to sing, and the casket was removed from the church safely and funer al service were concluded in the cemetery.

HOME IGNITED, SEVERE LOSS

A. Stapley, Johnson Street Was Loser in Morning Blaze

The fire brigade had another busy week end, having been called out no less than four times between Saturday afternoon but only one call was serious, a home owned by A. Stapley, Johnson street, being badly damaged by fire, the loss consisting of roof, walls, kitchen and attic were destroyed, the cause being from the high wind which prevailed there blowing the sparks on the roof from the neighboring chimney. The house would have extinguished the blaze with much less water had information was given that the fire was on Cathline Street. The brigade went soon at the scene mentioned but there was no fire and when the correct address was obtained the fire had gained considerable headway. It is understood the loss is partially covered by insurance.

Early today, the brigade was called to a blaze smouldering in a saw dust pile at the rear of the property at 83 East Moira street. Extinguishers were used to quell the fire. On Saturday evening the brigade attended a grass fire at the rear of the home of Judge Fralick's residence on West Moira St. There was no damage at this fire.

Shortly after the lunch hour today the brigade answered a call to the rear of the old Anglo American block on the north side of Bridge street. It being burned and the blaze gained considerable headway before reaching the pile, believed they could not cope with it and a call was sent in. It was quickly extinguished by the firemen. Any kind of a blaze which is underwind is hard to fight as the velocity of the wind was high and anyone burning rubbish or cleaning away dead grass should be in constant attendance in order to prevent it spreading too rapidly.

REUNION HELD AT MISS JONES'

One of the happiest family reunions of the Easter season was held at the home of Miss B. Jones, east Bridge street, on Saturday afternoon last when old acquaintances were renewed and a pleasant social evening held. It is fully thirty years since members of the family started out of meeting the folks back home. Guests were present from Belleville, Toronto, Oshawa, Brighton, Trenton, Madoc, Kingston, Picton, Bloomfield, Wellington, Mountain View and Demorestville numbering almost eighty in all. Dancing was held and prizes given. Some months ago the party enjoyed themselves at Pedro. At midnight a luncheon was served by the hostess and all present voted to just such occasions. The entertainment did not break up until the small hours of the morning.

SETTLE DAMAGES BETWEEN SELVES

Cars Owned by George Bradshaw and W. Howell Collide

There was no session of the police court today as all was quiet over the week end. Two accidents were investigated by the police, but neither of the cases were serious. Constable Evans investigated an accident late Sunday afternoon at the corner of Bridge and Front street. Wellington Howell, Prince Edward County, was travelling west on Bridge street in his car, while George Bradshaw, Dundas street, was travelling in the same street intending to turn north on Front street. The cars were collided, the Bradshaw car striking the left rear wheel of Howell's car sending the fender and the Bradshaw car had the bumper knocked off. The parties settled the damages between themselves.

On Saturday afternoon an accident occurred at the corner of South Church and Dundas street which was investigated by Constable Izzard. The parties settled the damages between the parties involved. James Wilson of Wilson's car was sitting in the car in his car and was turning the dum my to come back up Front street, when he saw the front end of a car driven by Harold Rupert R.R. No. 6 Belleville, driven by Mrs. Hannah Rupert of Thurlow township. Mrs. Rupert thought Wilson would drop before turning and stopped her car and he attempted to pass as he thought Wilson was making a turn.

Neither car was badly damaged as both were travelling at a slow rate of speed at the time.

LOCAL DELEGATE TO ARGENTINE ENJOYED HIS SOUTHERN CRUISE

John Elliott Says Canadians Were Royally Welcomed

ANXIOUS TO TRADE

Canadian had Finest Exhibit at Buenos Aires, says Former Bank Manager

Bronzed from exposure to the southern sun, looking hale and hearty, John Elliott, retired manager of the Standard Bank branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and one of Belleville's leading citizens, arrived to Belleville at seven thirty last night after a tour of South America with the Canadian Chambers of Commerce delegation and the Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Elliott was gone for seven weeks and stated to the press this morning that it was one of the most successful trips from every standpoint upon which he has ever embarked.

"We had a marvelous time, and had the usual annual meeting in the Argentine and in every country which we visited. They could not seem to do too much for us."

Continuing, according to Mr. Elliott, had the finest exhibit to be seen at the British Industries Fair at Buenos Aires. For ten whole days the entire party of one hundred and fifty were in Buenos Aires and were royally feted. "Why, they even had a band of one hundred and twenty pieces out to meet us," said Mr. Elliott. "Many of the prominent men of the oldest inhabitant has such a reception been given to a visiting delegation."

"The Argentine is anxious to trade with Canada," said Mr. Elliott. "They certainly made that apparent to us. They say that they are glad to see the English, tolerate the Americans and even like the Canadians."

The government was represented on the trip by Sir George Perley and Mr. Elliott. The first stop was made at Havana, Cuba. From there the party went to Port of Spain, Pernambuco, Brazil, Montevideo, Uruguay, Buenos Aires, Argentine. On the way back they visited Santos and Paulo, and the last stop was made at Bermuda. The boat docked at Halifax, and Mr. Elliott came right home and was in the office bright and early this morning.

The only sad part of the expedition was the death of a member of the party drowned at Rio De Janiero. Two others who were with him almost drowned at the same time.

MUST NOT DUMP REFUSE ON HILLS

Health Inspector McGinnis stated today that some citizens are in the habit of dumping grass, ashes and other refuse on the side of the hills and this habit has brought many complaints to the sanitary authorities. On Saturday afternoon one of the hills used was badly scarred and the hill on the east side and the invector also presenting about the littering of the hill.

The city has a garbage system to take care of all such refuse, which if scattered as has been done in the past, would affect the beneifts of collection.

It is also pointed out that it is illegal to throw any refuse into the Bay of Quinte, or on the ice which is popular on the breach than in the observance.

CITY IS PLUNGED INTO DARKNESS

Hydro officials are investigating today the sudden failure of the street lights last night. All street lamps in the city were suddenly extinguished twice and the second occurance about seven-thirty and again about eight-thirty. The hydro men were clinging to the burning fuses running in near shore. I did not know there was anyone drowned for I threw them life rings."

The motor launch and two smaller boats belonging to Coleman, were engaged in sarious liquor thrown overboard last week when the prohibitionists raided them.

AUTO BURNED, GARAGE SAVED

Burning into flames on Saturday evening, a car owned by P. Rosetti, chef at the Queen's Hotel, was totally destroyed, Mr. Rosetti had parked the machine in his garage at the rear of his home on Herchimer Ave. about nine-thirty in the evening. Around midnight a neighbor, Wilfred Logan, returning home, saw flames coming from the roof of the garage. Some help he managed to push the car out on the road where it burned up. The flames in the garage roof were extinguished with water. Mr. Rosetti stated today that his car was covered with the insurance.

MAN IS DROWNED OFF RUM LAUNCH

Owner Charges Coast Guard Left Companion After Blast

Tiverton, Ont., April 12—One man was drowned in Mortimer's Bay on Saturday night when a rum launch owned by Alexander Coleman, 45, was blown to pieces by a dynamite bomb, Provincial Police Officer O'Brien of Tiverton, today announced after an inquest had been held.

Coleman charged that Chief Petty Officer Elsworth Lonsdale, in command of the patrol boat CG-2343, had left him and a companion, Constable O'Brien of Tiverton, to drown after the explosion had sent the boat to the bottom.

In turn, Lonsdale answered Coleman's charge blaming him for the death of O'Brien. "Constable O'Brien could not swim," Lonsdale said. "It's Coleman's fault. When I last saw the two men they were in the water, they were clinging to the burning fragments of the boat. I did not know there was anyone drowned for I threw them life rings."

The motor launch and two smaller boats belonging to Coleman, were engaged in sarious liquor thrown overboard last week when the prohibitionists raided them.

NO NAGS FOUND IN CIVILIZED SUDBURY

SUDBURY, April 13.—This week a business man in Sudbury had an important trip to make to a neighbouring town on skis. The sporting break-up is on, making it impossible for a car to negotiate the distance. A tour of Sudbury elicited the fact that there was not a driving horse and buggy in Sudbury for hire. The city was fine-combed for an outfit. "There's a camp horse and saddle, if you want it. It's the best we have," said one man. So off he went down to Lake Ramsay and took an airplane", was the rejoinder.

WEDDINGS

MACMULLEN—SAUNDER

RAWDON, April 11.—(By Mail)—A very quiet but pretty wedding ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Saunder, 81 Lonsdale Road, Toronto, on Saturday, April 4th at 4 p.m., when Miss Mabel Victoria Saunder, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Saunder of Oshawa, became the bride of Mr. James Edward MacMullen formerly of Rawdon, Ontario. The ceremony, Sidney Lambert of Toronto, officiating. The bride looked charming in a gown of brown georgette with hat and accessories to match. After a buffet lunch for the happy couple left by motor for Toronto, the bride donning a light fawn coat and hat for. During this week they visited the groom's parents in Stirling and his brother at Mount Pleasant and other relatives nearby. Later they will take up residence near Campbellford.

"I Must Look Into This $100 a Month Idea"!

What is the use of saying this to yourself from time to time yet never doing anything about it?

2,000,000 persons over 45 years of age on this continent have "put it off" in just the same way—and are now dependent upon others for support. And they "Are they having a good time?" They are not. They are not even comfortable, in mind or body. You probably know several old people who are poor, still trying to work, but often helpless.

BRONSON FARMER'S LOSS

A fire which had its beginning in the farm dwelling of Mr. Wm. Smith of Bronson had gained such headway before being noticed that Mrs. Smith had barely time to rescue her baby and flee from the burning structure before it collapsed. Mr. Smith was at a neighbors when the fire broke out and before he arrived the flames had spread to nearby buildings, making a clean sweep of everything household effects, machinery, feed etc. The loss is a heavy one as the farm was only partly insured. Mr. Smith resides on what is familiarly known as the Payne farm at Bronson.

BOY LOSES LIFE AS HOUSE BURNS

Runs to Save Himself While Father Aids Mother and Babe

Gaskita, Ont., April 13—A five-year-old boy was fatally burned early this morning in a fire that razed the home of Wilfred Allison. Allison awoke to find the bedroom in flames. He succeeded in helping his wife out of the window and dropped a younger child after her, but when he returned for his son, Billy, 5, the lad had disappeared. This morning the floor fell away and the father had only time to leap into the second story before the building collapsed. The surviving members of the family are in a serious condition from burns and shock.

Awakened by cries of the infant, a boy of 18 months, Allison carried his wife and two children to the window. After dropping Mrs. Allison and the baby to the ground, he turned to rescue Billy, but the boy had apparently sought other means of exit. As the father frantically searched for his son, the flames covered nearly the first floor and forced beneath his feet. Severely burned about the hands and face, Allison staggered through the smoke to the window and fell to the ground.

After the blaze was extinguished, Allison's neighbors recovered the charred remains of the child. The father is the most severely burned, although Mrs. Allison and the baby are also in a dangerous condition from burns and shock.

SEIZE $2,500,000 LOTTERY TICKETS

Held "Immoral Articles" by U.S.—Epsom Derby Draw

New York, April 13—The customs department Saturday revealed it had seized a huge lottery ticket for the next Irish Free State Hospital Sweepstakes on the Derby at Epsom Downs, June 3.

Agents said the tickets were taken from the baggage of Lt. Fitz Gerald, described himself as a theatrical promoter, who arrived here from the Aquitania. He was not arrested but was ordered to appear in court today Monday.

The seizure was made under the Tariff Act of 1930 which bars "immoral articles. Solicitor of Customs Walter H. Eaton said it was not customary to search in such cases, but said he may decide, because of the size of the stamp, to lay the papers before the United States district attorney.

SISTER OF KING VICTIM OF COLD

Good Progress Reported Both by Her and His Majesty

Windsor, England April 13—While the King was officially reported to be improving from his attack of bronchitis, it was revealed tonight that another member of the Royal Family, Princess Victoria, the King's sister, has been suffering from a bad cold.

The Princess was confined to bed for a day in her Buckingham palace home. She is attended by Sir Milson Rees, noted laryngologist who was among the physicians attending the King. She was reported to be making good recovery and left her bed today.

The King passed a good day at Windsor Castle and his recovery is assisted by bright sunshine. Sir Milson Rees and Dr. Harry Martyn visited the royal patient this morning but Lord Dawson of Penn did not come here from London. The doctors expressed satisfaction over his progress.

TORONTO YOUTH DIED OF WOUNDS

TORONTO, April 13. — Shot through the abdomen when he scuffled with one of seven companions for possession of a .22 rifle, revolver while roaming the Don Valley Flats Saturday afternoon, Keith Miller, 15, of 243 Withrow Avenue, died yesterday in the Toronto East General Hospital. No date for an inquest had been set but last night Coroner Cecil Kelly after investigation by Dr. E. C. McLean, coroner of East York, decided an inquest touching occurred shooting recently after 3 o'clock Saturday, that York police were not interested until after the youth had expired at the hospital. Questioning by investigations of the youth were then gathered together by Dr. E. C. McKay of the East York police force, and questioned. The seven companions of the boy were also the witnesses of the Sunday school which they attend together, all being members of the Bible class. They were grief-stricken when they learned that they had been the witnessing a close friend of the dead lad who Keith Miller and could hardly discuss the incident.

They Do Us More Good Than any other Medicine

Says Toronto Man Of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mr. McMullin Always Keeps a Box in the House

Toronto, Ont., April 13 (Special)—What more people want than the duty is a medicine that they can turn to with perfect confidence in time of need. Mr. McMullen, 341 McRoberts Avenue, Toronto, has found such a friend in Dodd's Kidney Pills. He writes.

"We are never without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever we feel out of sort we take them and find they do us more good than any other medicine. We have used them for six years."

Your health, strength and vitality depend upon the condition of your blood. For it is through the blood that every part of the body is nourished and built up. To enjoy good health the blood must be kept pure.—Dodd's Kidney Pills are an excellent blood purifier. They do not affect the Liver or Stomach, they are just an effective Kidney medicine.

CAPTAIN HOLT CENTURY OLD

Centenarian Has Never Used Rum or Tobacco

A little hard of hearing and eyesight not as keen as when he traded in the West Indies, Capt. Holt spends his days in a comfortable arm chair in the living room of his home at 10 Gould Street.

Today he expects a strenuous time opening letters of congratulations, welcoming friends and a family reunion of his three daughters and son, his eight grandchildren and his three great grandchildren.

Holder of a 50-year old jewel in the Rhode Island Odd Fellows Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Capt. Holt was among those present at the laying of the cornerstone of the lodge's new building last winter, scarcely a week goes by that he does not inquire about the city especially over on the Point, where he recalls the scenes of his childhood, now greatly changed and shifts the salt air from the waters which he knows like a book.

His long life, he attributes to abstinence from tobacco and alcoholic liquor.

Born in Newport, March 27, 1831, Captain Holt was the sixth generation of the Holt family which came from London to America aboard the "Three Love," a fast sailer in the early 1600's. The family eventually settled in Rhode Island.

At an early age, Captain Holt obtained a captain's ticket and a pilot's license and for many years was a familiar figure along the Newport waterfront. Although he served in the coastal trade for several years between southern ports and the West Indies, the greater part was spent fishing locally.

During the season, he pulled his lobster pots from Block Island to Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard and at other times engaged in deep sea fishing. At all that time he attributed to his income by piloting big vessels through the harbor.

Early in life Captain Holt joined the Pyramid Church where for many years he was superintendent of the Sunday School, while not as active as formerly, he still maintains his interest in that church.

MONTHLY MEETING BRIDGE ST. W.M.S.

On Friday, April the tenth, the monthly meeting of the Bridge St. W.M.S. was held with the president Mrs. Bishop in the chair. "Faith of Our Fathers" was sung and the opening hymn followed by prayer by the president. In the absence of the secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Wilfrid Smith read the minutes of the March meeting and Mrs. Stoneberg acted as treasurer. Mrs. Hunt reported having written letters of sympathy. Mrs. Bishop then requested Mrs. H. Morgan to be leader of the program with India as the subject for study. Mrs. Monck read an Easter message from Matthew 28th chapter 1 to 10 and Mrs. Youngs offered an earnest prayer for our foreign missionary work and workers.

Mrs. E. H. Dickens pictured India as a land of great rivers, lofty mountains, rain, plains, powerful and noisy animals, large and poisonous serpents; a land with history 2000 years before the birth of Christ; a land with magnificent temples and palaces where the native princes live in a splendor not equalled in any other country in the world. The chief religion of India is Hinduism with its deplorable caste system, one of the great obstacles to progress. The establishment of Christian missions in the country is helping to break down the caste system and Gandhi the great Nationalistic leader has also committed himself to the same task. The United Church of Canada is carrying on Missionary work in six mission stations.

Mrs. John Houston and Mrs. Fred Houston sang a most appreciated duet, "He Lives."

Mrs. Simonds spoke on "Our Responsibility to India." She said that we had received a great inheritance and that we were responsible for sharing it with others not as favored as we. The field is white unto harvest and it is our responsibility by our money, our prayers and our work to help to lead India's millions into the "light and liberty of the sons of God."

Mrs. Bishop closed the meetings with the use of the hymn, "We have Heard the Joyful Sound" and prayer. A social half-hour followed with the ladies of Mrs. Morgan's group serving light refreshments.

MADOC JCT.

Madoc Jct., April 11—Eggleton W. M. S. accepted an invitation to Mrs. Harry Clarke's to hold the April meeting at her home and a very successful meeting is reported.

Meeting opened with hymn "Lead on O King Eternal" and prayer.

Scripture lesson Mark Chap. 16 (sixteen) Hymn "Lord Her Watch Thy Church is Keeping." Reading by Miss Eliza Livingston, "My Easter Thank Offering."

Reading Mrs. Beaudrie, "A Missionary Baby." Others taking part were Mrs. Sam Stapley, Mrs. O. Clarke, Mrs. Russell Stapley, Mrs. M. Wilson, Mrs. Livingstone and the hostess.

Several led in spedial prayers for our missionaries and a number of items on Temperance.

Mrs. Oliver Stapley read the minutes of the last meeting and during the business period quilt blocks were handed in for the bale quilt. Five dollars was handed in for the sale of quilt and this with the collection made another splendid addition to the W.M.S. funds. Hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" followed by serving tea and a delicious salad with sandwiches and cake and the quiet shine outside was no brighter than the rooms of this cozy little home on Thursday afternoon.

Stomach Troubles Headache and Dizziness

New York, April 11—The butterfly life of Vivian Gordon, slain Brentwood playgirl, netted her just a pitiful $200, it was revealed today when application was made to Surrogate James A. Foley for letters of administration in her estate.

Instead of $100,000 which the "White Light" district had taken for granted as the minimum of her blackmailing and other nefarious profits, Public Administrator James F. Egan, in asking the letters, revealed she had no real estate whatever and that the personal property she was known to have left would not exceed $200 in value.

Police believed that the shrunken condition of the estate furnished a motive for the slaying.

Detectives said she had depleted her own estate to finance shady transactions for underworld characters to such an extent that she had little or nothing left when she was slain. She was killed, they asserted, when she demanded some return on her "investments" and threatened to expose her associates to the police when no dividends were forthcoming.

Her diary revealed she had financed a trip abroad for several men when police believed, were seeking to dispose of $70,000 in stolen securities for her.

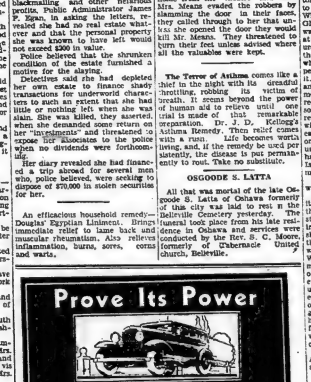
LOOT SECURED IN STICK-UP

Four Robbers Fled With Jewelry and Other Valuables



(Canadian Press)

Chicago, April 11—Threatening death and torture four robbers, two of them masked, held up Frank W. Means, President of the Chicago Towel Company, and his wife, in their home early today and fled with jewelry and other valuables, valued at $20,465. The quartette greeted Means as they returned home from the theatre and after Mrs. Means evaded the robbers by slamming the door in their faces, they called through to her that unless she opened the door they would kill Mr. Means. They threatened to turn their fire unless advised where all the valuables were kept.

The Terror of Asthma comes like a thief in the night with its dreadful throttling, robbing its victim of breath. It seems beyond the power of human aid to relieve until one trial is made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Then relief comes with a rush. Life becomes worth living, and, if the remedy be used persistently, the disease is put permanently to rout. Take no substitute.

OSGOODE S. LATTA

All that was mortal of the late Osgoode S. Latta of Oaks, formerly of this city was laid to rest in the Belleville Cemetery yesterday. The funeral took place from his late residence in Oshawa and services were conducted by the Rev. S. C. Moore, formerly of Tabernacle United church, Belleville.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking and ma said, if Gladdis isent careful she will spoil that grandchild of ours. Wellington. A child shouldent be given everything it cries for, thats the first fundamental of the esseptials of child training.

A child shouldent be given anything it cries for, thats the ABC and the entire book of rules, pop said. Any child that cries without a reason, mick ake is an abomination and a pest and a confounded nuisance, and 10 times out of 9 its the parents fault, he said.

Thats precisely my outlook on the subject and thats exackly what I told Gladdis and in fact I proved it to her, ma said. This afternoon While I wanted a lump of sugar and Gladdis gave him a lump as a reward for pronouncing the word sugar at his age, which was altogether natural and quite well and good, and then he wanted another lump and when he found he couldent get it by peaceful means he started in cry for it. In fact he started to howl for it, and when that child howls its no more play on words because he's ready got an exceptional set of lungs. Gladdis gave him another lump to restore a little order, and thats where she made her mistake, because each time he finished a lump he automatically started in howling again until Gladdis equall automatically handed him another lump. I guess is that any way to bring up a child? ma sed.

The question when brawn to a vote was ansered in the negative, pop sed.

Meaning no, and ma sed, Of corse its not and I proved it to Gladdis rite there and then. The next time Willie started to howl, wich was practically immediitly, I spoke to him quite sharply, I sed to him. Now Willie, that will do, youll get more sugar when you stop crying. Rite Gladdis. Well, the result was he stopped like magic and I promptly gave him another lump, and after that each and every time he howled I gave him to understand that he would get another piece the moment he stopped. In other words, although in the end I gave him as many peeces as Gladdis had given him, I was rewarded by him for being good and not for being bad, wich is far different influence on a childs growing mentality, ain sed.

And the point is, O mabel, pop sed and he got behind the sporting page and stayed there.

CHATTERTON W.M.S.

On March 11th the W.M.S. held a "pep" supper at Mrs. Mitts.

The supper was well attended and a good time was enjoyed by all.

The President, Mrs. B. Mitts then called the meeting to order. After the opening hymn, Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Merle led in prayer, Miss B. Bleeker then gave a very nice solo.

The minutes were read and it was decided to have an old time concert on the 10th of April. Another solo was then enjoyed by Miss A. Horton

The meeting closed with "Blest be the Tie that Binds" followed by prayer.

The April Easter Thank-offering service at the home of Mrs. J. Fredericks was well attended. An interesting programme was given. Mrs. F. Campbell favored us with a solo. After the close of the meeting the hostess served candy and social time was spent.

SUMMER WEEK-ENDS

The decision of the railways to give week-end return trips for one and a quarter single fare is welcomed as a means of increasing the revenue of the railways and of providing outings for people who would not otherwise have the opportunity. For some time there has been felt the competition of trucks and motor busses and the present reason may be a first step in the railways' entry upon direct competition with busses and later of trucks.

The fare for the trip to Toronto and return will be $4.95 as compared with the present $7.10. Whether this will mean that many who have been using motor cars will take to the trips by train or not must be proven. But that there will be a great increase in the Friday-to-Monday travel in May, June and July is the belief.

It is only expected that the cheaper rate will mean a greater week-end exodus into the country. If it brings that result, it will be worth while for a greater acquaintance with the country is much to be desired.

It is well known that the earnings of railways are being cut into by motor cars and by busses and if the summer week-ends prove profitable there is no doubt that they will become a fixture for subsequent summers. Many remember the days when there were a good many excursions on-cut rates, and they were profitable for trains were crowded.

A LESSON

If the present era of depression which many believe is showing signs of disappearing is to have any value, it must bring men to realize more and more the need of some changes which will make for a little easier for some people to make a living. During this spell in which industry has been resting there has been poured out a great deal of human sympathy upon men out of work or those working on short time and it should seem strange if this experience did not lead to some improvement which would make these conditions less severe in the future. How to get at a solution of overproduction and under-consumption when the public mind turns on credits and confidence take a flight, is a great problem upon which the greatest minds in the financial world are working.

SOUTH AMERICA

Canadians should take a deeper interest in South America after the goodwill tour of prominent Canadian business men, including our own townsman, Mr. Jim Elliott. Recently our evangelist who has been engaged in the work of Christian Missions in the Southern continent said that he discerned in the South American a very evident desire to be more closely knitted with Canada for trade and other purposes. Canada's good name in business stands high in good stead as she reaches out for trade.

CROSSING THE STREETS

Still a few people in Belleville will cross Front Street and Bridge Street intersection diagonally — surely this is the height of danger and of risk with the pedestrians at a loss to know what way to turn if cars approach and with car drivers puzzled to know what the jay-walkers are going to do.

The habit of suddenly popping out of a line of parked cars and trying to dodge the traffic proceeding between corners is another one which forces the the motorist to take extreme care. Fortunately these careless folk have not been hurt as they do it but so far is no guarantee that some day an accident will not happen.

Saturday's change in temperature upheld the contention of weather prophets that thunder in spring spells a drop in temperature.

One should expect that earlier than usual the outdoor games will begin, baseball, bowling, and tennis as well as golf.

The call of the outdoors has been powerful this week for the thousands of boys and girls out of school for the Easter week. No more ideal weather has favored Eastertide.

Canadian National Railway passenger trains are to be speeded up in an effort to meet the competition of motors and to provide a more convenient service. First it was the motors and the busses which cut into the railway's earnings and now the railways are going not only to meet this competition but also to profit by this very rivalry.

Toronto Telegram states that the King of Siam being an ardent golfer may be able on his visit to Canada to provide local amateurs with some new words to address to the pesky pellet. It is assumed be of course that the royal golfer will not learn anything from Canadians in the way of epithets for the elusive ball.

The low price of eggs has one benefit as far as unpopular speakers are concerned that people do not treat their unpopular speakers heteabouts as they do in some places) — a ruffian does not have to hunt for rotten ones, fresh ones are so cheap. It is said that a blow from a fresh egg is not nearly so unpleasant as a splash from a rotten egg. If there were a few more fights with good eggs, the price of eggs might be higher. But the law-abiding bend to the law even if it means cheap eggs.

Fear and anger jet fat into the blood and give great strength for the moment. Doctors have cut out the sympathetic nervous system of cats and they do not get frightened at a ferocious dog. This proves that nature in the sympathetic system lent the animal a defence which would aid in self-protection. Under normal conditions the cats showed no deficiency, but they are abnormal conditions in life and for these nature has provided.

NINETY-NINE

When, fighting the worry insomnia brought,
On my pillow I tumbled and tossed.
While moment by moment the slumber I sought
Seemed more irretrievably lost.
On orthodox lines I endeavored to find
A treatment to combat the way.
My eyelids, though out of a dissolute kind,
Were turning the night into day.

On orthodox lines — as I said I began.
Intent upon falling asleep,
To follow the old immemorial plan
And take to the counting of sheep;
In thousands and thousands I watched them advance,
And, when this seemed wholly in vain,
Accepting a hint from the proverbs of France,
Returned to my muttons again.

At last, ere the darkness was totally gone,
To the notice that sin soothed me before.
I fearkened by turning the gramophone on
Then turned to my census once more:
I had wholly forgotten what words to expect
And I couldn't but deem it a sign
That the course I was taking was strictly correct
When it told me to say ninety-nine."

ANTON J. CERMAK has assumed the position of Mayor of Chicago. He is said to be elected by a vast majority of the citizens of that city tired of the big talk, turmoil and inefficient government of Big Bill" Thompson and his associates. Mayor Cermak finds the city finances in a deplorable state and immediately lops 2,000 names off the payroll at the same time ordering the city treasurer not to honor any bills incurred by the above administration without close scrutiny. Mayor Cermak is said to be a very wealthy man and will have plenty of time to apply business principles to the city government as he is not hampered by the political machine. Of course one mayor cannot make a city and unless his policies have the support of his colleagues he will find he can not accomplish much. However, any change in Chicago must be for the better, and the buffoonery of Big Bill" Thompson will be kept from in the spotlight will be buried with him in obscurity.

TAXI-CABBING NOT BIG BUSINESS

The taxicab is beginning to loan large. In 1930 the taxicabs of the United States carried more than a billion passengers as against only 786,000,000 carried by the railroads And the gross revenues of the taxicabs was $550,000,000. This is exclusive of a roughly estimated $100,000,000 in tips, and compares with gross railroad passenger revenue of $876,000,000. These figures are published by the Statistical Department of the United States Motor Transit Committee which is trying to determine the national importance of the taxicab as compared with other standard forms of transportation. Besides the figures for the nation, there are this item of information about the metropolis: "380,000,000 passengers rode in New York City's 20,000 taxicabs last year and paid fares and tips totalling $157,000,000."

THE SEVENTY-SECOND FORD

Canada about a quarter of a century ago marched in the parade in honour of the millionth car of that make turned out and now on a publicity tour. The seventy-second Ford was an aristocrat of its day and generation and bears marks of luxury in nickel plating, brass lamps and horn. The great advance in everything the past twenty-five years is well typified in the difference between the seventy-second Ford and the millionth Ford.

that in all the improvement in machines in the past twenty-five years that there hasn't been a corresponding improvement in human bodies. Motor cars have stronger chassis, developed scientifically, why not human bodies. When one come to think about it there has been a decided movement in that direction, what with gymnasiums and swimming pools and golf courses, though seen only a minority of the have bodies that their parents never had. Gymnasiums were scarce in the old days and swimming pools were few and far between. There could be a chance rigged up in the barn for exercise and the old swimming hole for swimming lessons, but outside of those and the family woodpile physical developers were scarce.

FIVE MILLION DOLLARS

for a six-weeks' leisure tour is said to have been offered Mahatma Gandhi, the Nationalist leader in India, whose ability to direct his campaign from a prison cell has been so marked. Gandhi turned down the offer saying he had work to do which a leisure tour would not assist, and money does not appeal to him. He is going to England to attend another round-table conference and interest in the negotiation eclipses but draws the line at stiff shirts and dress suits. It may not be generally known that Gandhi is a graduate in law of an English University which adds a touch of culture to his otherwise bizarre personality as depicted in type and picture. That he has backbone and determination behind his apparently simple character has been proved by his success in curbing the extremists in his own following and making his policy of non-violence the policy of the party.

HAPPY SYMBOL

The Count of Paris has planted a lilac bush in Lorraine as Palermo, Italy, in soil brought from France. The Count and French Royalists regard this as a happy symbol. NEARLY $5,000,000,000 OF GOLD HOARDED IN UNITED STATES

Despite all the discussion that has taken place regarding the unwholesome hoarding of the world's gold in the United States, that nation's store of the yellow metal continues to mount. On April 9th, the Federal Reserve Board of Washington announced that its monetary gold stocks had reached $4,700,000,000, the highest on record for all time. One reason, and probably the chief reason, for this continued accumulation, is found in the fact that the neighboring Republic is importing fewer commodities from outside, and that as a consequence adverse balances do not make payment in gold. Another reason is, of course, found in the heavy war debt payments made from time to time by the Republic's former allies in the Great War. As the world's total monetary stock of the metal is only $10,900,000,000, the present situation is most remarkable. It depicts many nations of adequate currency for their monetary and credit machines. The main reason, however, is found in the fact that the gold hoarded in the United States is practically distributed in some measure at least a long step would therefore be taken towards the re-establishment of world prosperity. That was the truth behind Sir Thomas Wilfe's recent poem.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE ART OF RESTING WISELY

One of the good things that came out of the Canadian Conference of Ontario Educational Association was a suggestion that the schools should teach people how to enjoy their leisure. One has in the weariness and stress of the majority of grown-up folk is the method of spending their holiday season arrives, and the rush begins. Everyone has to get away from the office grind, the first train or steamer, the first train to another city and mingle with other people during a week or fortnight's holiday refreshed and invigorated, while the restless traveller, who considered every mile he travelled on his map, comes back badly in need of a rest. KEEPING A SECRET

Those women who have up to this, meekly accepted the statement, "If you want a thing kept from news, telephone or tell a girl" will no doubt be glad that they have a champion in no less a person than Mr. Justice Sir George Acton, formerly of the British Air Ministry, Commissioner. He says in his recently published book:

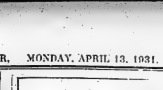
I agree with those who maintain that the newspapers are of national importance better than men for Christian Science Monitor.

A FARMER'S PROBLEM

From our exchanges from all parts of Ontario there are evidences of farmers protesting against the keeping of dangerous highway obstructions and trucks, and preventing passers from all the highways and byways. Some of the farmers are willing to reach the highway-in a car or motor during the winter months. Once he reaches the highway he finds many stretches so bare that his horses cannot pull and his sleighs. The sides are piled high by the snow thrown off by the Government plow. The St. Mary's Journal in an editorial on this subject says:

"And the farmers are not the only ones to suffer. Business men are losing business owing to the difficulty their customers have in getting to town. It is bad enough at present, but it will be worse if the days, leaving the roads perfectly dry with the concessions impassable for motors. It is time that a very pointed protest was made in regard to the handling of snow on the rural Provincial Highways."

It might also be pointed out that so far as the small town merchants are concerned the maintenance of the highways leading to the cities open, means a big loss of trade, because so long as cars can reach the city, they will go there, and while there, those who travel in by car spend money for goods they could get just as well at their home town if the cars were laid up.



On the whole, it is doubtful if the tremendous expense of keeping open the provincial highway is justified.—Winchester Press.

PIGEONS AND THEIR SERVICE IN GREAT WAR

"The story is told of an American army division which, having just landed in France, was gratified by the receipt of a basket of carrier pigeons from an English commander, says the Hamilton Spectator. "The war, and thought the Americans, was not such a bad thing after all, but the English officer was convinced its horrors had increased when he received a polite note from the United States officer, saying how nice the pigeons tasted. We are reminded of this story by the report of the decay of pigeon-flying in England. Another pigeon carrier of the war fell into the clutches of a cat and now there only remains Old Bill, who was attached to G. H. Q. in France. Pigeons were the best form of carriers the armies had, and the best of them were bred in England. They are still, for that matter. When the Canadian fanciers want good birds they take a trip to the Old Country and the pigeons are French with the value of pigeons during the war, and the lessons have not been forgotten. The birds are now used to carry the pool, in connection with the air service up north in Manitoba and British Columbia. We do not hear very much about what England is doing to develop the pigeon corps, but the multitude of racing pigeon fanciers in the Old Land gives assurance of a good reserve, and England is not prone to drop about her plans. It is safe to say that she has not overlooked the pervenance, that all except two or three per cent. of the pigeons in the war got through with their messages, and if they were insured but could make any progress at all they may have been late, but they got to their destination. It necessary, and they got there. Especially in peace time pigeons may have domestic employment. Some of the birds have arrived in Hamilton in the end of a pigeon race with less than one hour to spare. Nevertheless, and the universe is that they have fallen a prey to some sort of "sporting" proposition when a gun, the National Museum of America has no pigeon-shoot was founded. Anti, with a shuttered lot and a bullet-proof breast. In Belgium, where modern pigeon-racing was founded, they have a monument to the war pigeons. Enough pigeons died during the war that they should erect one there.

NOBEL PRIZES IN 1931 VALUABLE

STOCKHOLM, Sweden.—The five Nobel prizes will be awarded during the year, the Nobel Foundation has just announced. Each award, beginning with 1932, one year after the prizes awarded in 1931, will be worth $46,230 each and in 1929 to $46,230.

Originally in 1901 they were worth $40,511, but after the war they were shrunk as low as $30,802, the figure for 1920. The Nobel Foundation has also revealed that its assets now reach $5,540,000 against $11,664,729.

MONSTER SKELETON MIGHT BE CYCLOPS

ATHENS—The legend of the Cyclops and Ulysses is refuted by Homer may have had some basis in fact, judging from a bone skeleton discovered in an ancient manger south in the district of Kozani.

The description, which is the fact that the skeleton, which is enormous, has a single eye socket in the skull, in one enormous hole in the middle of the forehead. This, the contends, substance to Homer's Odyssey.

The fact, or rather the hypothesis, which have very long history and fields—the bones alone measure about 12 inches—contradicts this contention, tending rather to give the Cyclops amongst the antediluvian monsters.

The skeleton is about 10 feet long, with a head which is larger than that of any prehistoric bull. Behind the single, huge, round eye-socket is an excellent cooling.

NEW PISTOL JETS DISABLING GAS

Working models of a pistol of revolutionary type which shoots gas instead of bullets and is designed to disable temporarily without doing permanent damage have been completed by the inventor, J. W. Van Kerner of 118 West 49th Seventh Street, and are expected to be demonstrated soon in the presence of Police Department officials in New York City.

Mr. Van Kerner said that the pistol would be useful chiefly to policemen and other peace officers, who would be able to subdue dangerous criminals at a distance and take them alive. The pistol also could be used to fire signal flares, as the new lights are used in the war, and would be valuable to aviation, the inventor said.

The weapon used to fire charges of gas resembles superficially a Colt automatic pistol with a multiple barrel. The working parts are made of an alloy similar to aluminum, instead of steel, because gas corrodes steel. The multiple barrel is removable, so that several barrels, each loaded with several gas cartridges, can be carried and inserted just as a clip of cartridges is inserted in an ordinary pistol. The same trigger fires each of the barrels in the multiple barrel pistol.

The gas cartridge consists of the concentrated gas contained in a paper container, and a charge of powder. The powder drives the gas, freed of its paper container, through a nozzle like a gigantic bullet. The gas expands immediately after leaving the gun to a diameter of about three feet, Mr. Van Karner said, and it plunges through the air like a stream of water at a speed of 300 feet a second.

Mr. Van Karner said he had tested the pistol on animals, disabling them for a few moments but causing no permanent harm.

"The gas gun accomplishes what other weapons now in use set out to do—that is, it protects the user and places the object at attack in a temporary defenseless position — but because it does not injure permanently and cannot cause death it is an absolutely safe weapon to handle," said Mr. Van Karner. "It eliminates all danger of death or disablement. It enables the officer of the law to subdue the criminal without taking life, and saves the criminals for the courts to deal with.

"The ordinary revolver, which too freely used, makes for crimes and criminals of the worst sort instead of defending the law enforcement. Arming the police with the gas gun will help to put an end to the unwholesome gun because his own life would be safe in the hands of the police, and thus the lives of many citizens and policemen would be saved."

Mr. Van Karner said the report of the gun's sounds like the discharge of a 15-pound cannon, but it make is impractical for the criminal to use, and the gas cartridges are not to be sold over the counter.

Mr. Van Karner was in the American Aviation Service during the war, and has since been working to perfect his gas pistol ever since.

Bankers' Journal Sees Trade Gains

Conviction that the depression which began in 1929 was definitely suppressed in the current issue of The American Bankers' Association Journal. This publication, in its "Survey of Business," points out that the general level of business activity has shown little change since the first of 1931, according to usual seasonal tendencies.

"There is a growing confidence," the journal says, "that the period of decline from the eighteen months ended in the end last December and that the most important move will be upward. So far there is no evidence of any material expansion in production and sales, save in certain lines, as for example, cotton goods. Nevertheless, the least disturbing trend of iron, steel, building and a sizable list of lesser industries are about to begin but definite gains.

"If general business activity should hold at around its present level for the remainder of the year, every month would show a definite gain in the spread, as compared with the corresponding months of the preceding year, while if a moderate upturn should develop the aggregate trend of 1930 would be quickly surpassed. It is generally conceded that the recovery back to theoretically normal is not likely to be achieved this year, although many economists look for the beginning to question whether the normal is not a thing of the past in modern used indexes of business is not too high. Possibly the unusual expansion during the period 1915-1930 has given the country an unusual rate of growth too sharp an upward curve, and the future years will have to be readjusted downward to a more level and slower rate of growth than prevailed up to the time of the war.

"Back demand for money for commercial purposes and the continued large accumulation of idle funds have reflected in record-low interest rates for funds placed on call and on 90-day-or-less use of Federal Reserve Bank credit. Heroic imports of gold have raised our already excessive holdings, but this need not be considered a major problem for the reason that the world supplies of gold have a tendency to redistribute themselves automatically to the countries where they are needed and can be safely used. Encouraging developments in the political situation in Europe, South America, Australia and India justify the hopes that the way has now been cleared for stability and improvement in the economic condition.

"A discouraging feature of the past month or more has been the reduction of the circulation of credit by a considerable number of the railroad and industrial corporations. In some instances the action of the borrowers came as no surprise, but in a few cases the fact that a credit was made at this time primarily believed to be the final stage of the liquidation provided an unpleasant shock to their large body of stockholders and of course had a depressing effect upon Wall Street. It is natural that, if the guiding heads of the largest organizations in the country feel that the outlook for the next several months does not justify the continuance of a dividend that is not being amply earned, the smaller business man should be inclined to proceed more cautiously than before with their own plans."

CHINESE BURN BUDDHIST CLASSICS

SHANGHAI. — The last complete set of the Chinese Buddhist classics, the Tripitaka, consisting of 30,000 volumes was burned by order of the Educational Board of Shantung Province when the ancient temple at Yihsien was converted into a normal school. The Educational Board declared the removal of the bulky volumes would have been a difficult task and argued, moreover, that the teachings therein were no longer useful, and that the space was needed. So the board consigned the treasure, to which scholars from many lands, volumes were printed in the Ming dynasty, to the flames, thanks to the Shantung destruction only six very incomplete sets exist.

Fashionably Speaking
By Lucille

Dear Readers — And now Spring clothes have had another setback. Just when the mellow weather of the early part of the week had put every one in the mood for Spring apparel, along come April showers and high winds to bring out the winter coats again. The styles this season are so pretty that it seems a shame that they can not be indulged in at once.

Belleville women have certainly that flair for wearing clothes. A stroll downtown on a sunny afternoon or a glance at theatre crowds any evening reveals chic that would rival that of any fashion centre. It is not the hat and coat alone, and these are smartness itself, but it's that painstaking attention to every costume detail that captures the effect of "that elusive thing called style", Shoes, gloves or hosiery of the wrong colour can ruin the appearance of the most exacting dress, coat, and women with a true sense of the artistic in dress, realizing this, pay strict attention to these important accessories. That is why on Belleville streets one see so many smartly dressed women.

Women, and men too, are quick to notice an unharmonious note in a costume. A woman will see that shade of colour in a hat just misses the mark in matching the dress, or that the black shoes with the costume that borders on brown spoil the whole effect. A man will know vaguely that there is something wrong with the picture without realizing just what it is. Men, you know, are supposed to be at a loss in describing or defining the colour or style of a dress. You know how it is when you ask him what she wore when he has been lavish in his praise of some one else's smartness and he answers "Oh, it was a blue dress," "Blue", with dozen of shades of blue.... and just "a dress" when you are aching to know if it had frills, or long sleeves, bolero jacket or what to give it smartness.

But whether you choose your costume with exacting care or simply put on your clothes and hope for the best, you will be looking forward with satisfaction to warmer days to wear your Springtime finery.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

Good Manners

A Perfect Pixie—If Bride and Groom Wish It

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is engaged to my husband's brother and they are planning to have an informal church wedding. She intends to wear a hat and dress, and be a business suit of dark blue. Is it improper for me to be matron of honor and my husband, best man? They have been told that it is very bad form to have a married woman as matron of honor, and that I should be a bridesmaid, in this correct? I thought that as long as I am the only sister of the bride-to-be and my husband the only brother of the groom, it would be nice for us to stand up with them. The bride is not planning to have any bridesmaids or ushers, only the matron of honor and best man. Will you please let us know as we have had quite a discussion on this?

W. C.

If this is the plan that most pleases the bride and groom, it is an excellent plan, and thoroughly correct But let me emphasize that it must be what the bride and groom wish.... that is, your plan must exist or have you as her matron of honor, and the groom must want to have his brother as his best man.

You see, I am all confused by your statement, "I thought that it would be nice for us to stand up with the bride and groom." I like to plan the attendants of the bride and groom, except the best man and groom.

Very often the chief attendant of the bride, or the one attendant if she is to have only one, is a married woman, a matron of honor. Certainly there is no rule that should seem to me, if the bride and groom with this arrangement, that it is the perfect plan especially under this consideration of relationship of the couple and their attendants.

Don't Take Coffee—If You Don't Want It

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I very often when I have gone to parties my hostess serves coffee as a beverage. As I do not like coffee, I do not take any. I am frequently embarrassed as I am usually the only person at the party who does not take any. When I refuse coffee, am I being rude?

J.

2. When I am offered it I say, "Thank you, but I do not drink coffee." Is this correct?

J.

1. There isn't a reason in the world why you should feel embarrassed. You aren't rude in not taking any coffee.... It would be highly ridiculous if you did take it. Since you do not like coffee, there is no reason about it, and very casual, and put from your mind any thought of even need for embarrassment.

2. It isn't necessary to make this explanation. Just say, "No, thank you," graciously, and with no apology. Nel Gaily Mad Nassman—But a form of Cruelty

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know your sentiments along this line. A former atlter, a college graduate, thinks she should correct an older sister who does not speak good English. The older sister made a short visit with her sister and aside from her errors made an error in conversation, the former corrected would mention it.

What is your opinion?

Mrs. P.

Few things are more unkindly and unattractive than the error of correction. Indeed it is a form of cruelty that is especially difficult for the person to bear. I'm sorry for the constantly-corrected sister, and I hope that the smart college-graduate sister will mend her ways, and not feel that she must spoil her relation so cruelly. After all, education isn't only a matter of what we learn, but it is also an appreciation of the feelings of others.... or, at least, should be.

Managing the Baked Potato

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the proper way to eat a baked potato on your plate when served in the skin? Is it being in order to scrape the potato from the skin or is it better taste to divide the potato in half, letting it remain in the skin.

Puzzled.

Open the potato, if it is not already opened, and with your fork, scoop out the "inards" to your plate placing the skin on your bread and butter plate. Then, also with your fork, add the butter, salt, pepper, and, if you wish, paprika. Then eat it ready. And, if you don't eat the skin.... and it is good.... divide the potato to each half and the condiments, and eat the skin.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

80TH BIRTHDAY MARKED AT FULLER

A very interesting and pleasant surprise took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Hollinger on Thursday, April 9th, it being the eightieth birthday of Mr. David Hollinger. The family of five girls and one boy and the families are all living able to be present of whom were:

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dafoe, Foxboro; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Burke, Fuller; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gray, Roblin; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fuller; Mr. and Mrs. W. Plitchett, Rawdon; Mrs. Ed. Cook, Joseph Hollinger, Foxboro; Mr. and Mrs. David Hollinger at the home. Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. David Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hollinger of Moira and Mrs. M. J. Hallett of Thomasburg, sisters and brother of Mr. Hollinger. At 12.30 all sat down to a real sumptuous dinner. The birthday cake which was made by Mrs. Gray looked most beautiful with its eighty lighted candles.

The dinner over the presents were taken of the guests and a real sociable time was spent as well as messages of which baseball was played by Mr. Hollinger though he far advanced in age proved himself a real batter. At 4 o'clock they all started for their homes wishing their father many more happy birthdays.

If Your Ears Ring With Head Noises

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get a 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint hot water and 4 tablets sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous in the throat loosen. Parmint is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

NOTED ETHNOLOGIST A SAMOAN DANCER

New York, April 13—Before it or after, Dr. Margaret Mead, brilliant young ethnologist of the American Museum of Natural History, is a Samoan dancer. Had she not been able to dance so beautifully that the Samoans anointed her with palm oil upon her recent expedition there, and made her a princess, her American college degrees would have proved as useless as her Phi Beta Kappa key.

The Samoans don't like intellectual women.

Dr. Mead is now planning a return to the South Seas, and she is practicing up on her dancing steps. She is small and graceful, and if she wants to, she can wegre her swaying skirts with colorful flowers and shells all over the staid old Museum. Even in the hall of the dinosaurs and whales. She said yesterday:

"The career of anthropologist is drawing women in increasing numbers, for museum and field. Women are needed to do field work, but they go venturing alone they are constantly annoyed by fresh-water boards and government officials who consider it too dangerous for them.

"Field work makes heavy demands on the health and tact. You must eat anything, sleep anywhere, fraternize with all types of unwashed, like people as people, and forget prudceries. There isn't any field work left for girls in United States so one has to go to Africa, South America, the South Seas, or Asia. Then, and I'm married, in order to be happy, you must be married to an ethnologist, a natural scientist, or another anthropologist—someone whose work carries him into similar fields.

At thirty Dr. Mead has written several books among them "Coming Of Age in Samoa" and "Growing Up in Old Guinea." She is the wife of Dr. R. F. Fortune, who, as you would know by now, is another anthropologist. And so perfect is her digestion that she is able to eat "native" fare, tastes and looks like soap, but which is really a terrible potato.

Skating rinks, says a news item, are to have colored ice. Will hockey players henceforth win or lose by a shade?

RUN-DOWN IN HEALTH AFTER A DIFFICULT WINTER

Mrs. Elizabeth Fenton, Pickerel, Ont., Needed a Spring Tonic —Says Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (Tonic) Did Wonders For Her

"It's fifteen years now," writes Mrs. Elizabeth Fenton, "since my first trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am thirty now, but I never will forget what those pills did for me when I was just a girl, so run down and weak from sickness. When I had tired out and nervous and need a good tonic I always go back to the old standby, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am never a victim of ill-health. I enjoy all sorts of sports and especially hiking. Health is next to happiness and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the key to health."

Mrs. Fenton is right! Think of the people you know who are hapeless—who get the most fun out of life. Strong and well, aren't they? Able to enjoy a day's work — and have strength to spare for social pleasures. They look well, too, and people like them.

That's what health does for you!

If your blood is thin and poor, as it often the case in the spring, you can't be happy. The iron and other elements in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) increase the red corpuscles in the blood, giving color to the face and lips. At all Druggists—50 cents a box. Or write to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville. Be sure to say "Dr. Williams'" so that the druggist will know exactly what you want.

THREE TEAMS ASSURED FOR CENTRAL ONTARIO BASEBALL LEAGUE; OSHAWA POSSIBILITY

Annual Meeting Will Be Held Here on April 25th

Although only a formal discussion took place at the meeting of the C. O.B.L. held Saturday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A., baseball fans of this district are assured of three summer pastime. Belleville, Peterborough and Kingston have signified their intentions of entering the loop and it is more than likely that Oshawa will come in when the situation is explained to them. The annual meeting of the League will be held on April 25th at which time, the officers will be elected and a schedule drawn up.

President R. A. Elliott of Delora was in attendance and representatives from Peterboro and Bellefield. Secretary Johnston represented the newly formed Ranger Club in the Lift Lock City and Walter Grove and Ernest R. Colling the Belleville organization. There were also present a few interested in ball from this city and a formal discussion took place without calling the meeting to order as the secretary Trevion Thompson was unable to attend through business reasons. When Kingston decided it did not pay in an appearance, a phone call was put through and Mr. Murray answered the 21st Batallion Club stated that his team was ready but asked that a few more days grace be given to line matters up satisfactorily. This was welcome news to all present and it was thought advisable to humour Kingston. The Motor City is going to be without baseball if things materialize in that town unless a team is entered in the Central Ontario. These issues are not known at present if Cobaya does not see its way clear to come in. It is the general opinion that the league will form and open at the appointed time, May 24th.

A suggestion was made that one of the leagues in Toronto form an interlocking schedule with the Central Ontario but President Elliott, who is also head of the O.B.A.A. told those present that all schedules had been drawn up for Toronto and in any case the Toronto teams could not stand the expense as their gates were small at all times. It was clearly shown unless the league operates this season, it will be a long time before sufficient interest could be put back of the proposition to start the ball rolling again. The delegates realized that the pressure of hard times was not altogether eliminated but there were prospects that it was just around the corner and that the league would be a success the same as it had been in many years past. There is another incentive in that the league a going concern this year as Mr. Elliott explained the idea of sending the winning senior team in the province to the Olympic Games in Los Angeles but not altogether been abandoned. At the present time it is almost assured according to the O.B.A.A. proxy. The delegates present felt that the team that could beat the C.O.B.L. winner would be the team to make the journey.

From all accounts every team that has signified their intention of joining has the making of a real baseball machine. Peterboro will undoubtedly be strong for all the locals have amalgamated their strength in one senior team and there is some splendid material in the Lift Lock City and under "Shiner" Johnston, who has been appointed manager and coach, they should go somewhere in the race. Naturally a few of the old guard will turn out but there is a wealth of material in the intermediate league which is ready to take the step up. Johnson assured the delegates that his team would not be a stepping stone to higher things for other teams in the league.

Walter Grove mentor of the Belleville squad is not given to lay all his cards on the tables but it can be depended upon that if the league operates, the Nationals will still be the same hard nut to crack. All of last years team is available, while there are many ready to try for places. Point Anne will play some baseball this season but Mr. Legate stated that those who were good enough for senior ball would not be deprived the privilege. If this statement materializes then there are four or five boys from the Point Anne squad that can be used and to advantage. Kingston had a smart team last year and it is stated there are a couple of new faces in the Limestone City that are ball players. Mr. Murray seems to think his team will not be a stepping stone either and with this enthusiasm prevalent at the start of the campaign, there is no reason why fans should not have a real summer.

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back. If you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the lower rectal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak, baggy, almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct these conditions. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered one, Internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 900 cases, he named it HEMROIDS. S. McKeown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

YANKS ABSORB ANOTHER LOSS

Robins Again Beat Yanks

Brooklyn, April 13.—The Brooklyn Robins made it two straight victories over the New York Yankees by winning the final pre-season exhibition game of the two teams, 11 to 7. Lazzeri of the Yankees, and Frederick of Brooklyn, hit home-runs apiece, and second baseman for the Robins, was forced to retire in the eighth inning when spiked by Hoag, Yankee outfielder.

Batteries—Weiland, Pennock, and Dickey; Heimich, Mattingly and Picinich.

Costly Wild Pitch

Baltimore, April 13.—The Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Baltimore Orioles of the International League in an exhibition game here yesterday, 4 to 3.. Hurst scored the winning run on a wild pitch by Clarkson in the ninth inning.

Red Sox Blank Braves

Boston, April 13.—The Boston Red Sox made it two straight in the inter-city series with Boston Braves here yesterday, 4 to 0 in the second and final game at Braves' field before a crowd of 1,000 fans.

Three Sox hurlers — McFayden, Gaston and Lisenbee — were sent in the mound, and managed to hold the Braves to four scattered hits.

Reeves opened a four-run spree in the fourth inning with a triple that scored Webb and Miller. Tom Oliver second-year outfielder, led the American League team's assault, driving out three hits—two doubles and a one-sacker.

Cubs Play Good Ball

Kansas City, April 13.—The Chicago Cubs, playing the best brand of ball they have displayed so far this season defeated the Kansas City Blues of the American Association, 13 to 1 here. Kansas City made only two hit off of the pitching of Raschi and Warneke, and was not credited with a safety after the second inning.

Hartnett, Chicago catcher, hit a home run in the third innihy with Stephenson and Hurnsby on base. Kansas City's lone run cams as the result of a Chicago error.

Kansas City used three pitchers, all of whom were easy for the Cubs.

Fischer Baffles Wings

Washington April 13.—The Washington Senators closed their Spring exhibition season here with a 3 to 1 victory over the Rochester Red Wings International League champions, before an attendance of 2,000.

Carl Fischer, former International League strike king, went the route for the Senators, limiting the Red Wings to eight hits and fanning six.

The Senators finished the training season with a record of ten victories 15 out of 21 games. They lost four and played two ties.

COUNTY JUNIOR LEAGUE STARTS

The Hastings County Junior Baseball League will meet a week from Tuesday at the Y.M.C.A. at 7.30 p.m.

Representatives will attend from Point Anne, Stirling, Belleville Amateur Athletic Association and Belleville Junior Moose.

Wellington will decide definitely whether they will enter a team or not. At present they fear that they haven't enough players to play junior ball and are not fast enough to enter Intermediate "B". However if they can find a fairly good battery they will enter.

At present the league is composed of Point Anne, B.A.A.A. and Belleville Junior Moose. These teams would like to see Wellington enter and make it a four team group.

VICTORIAS TO OPEN PRACTISE

The Belleville Victorias will hold their second meeting this Friday evening at 7.30 p.m. in Delaney's Fur Store. All players who have been interviewed and assured the management that they would sign up will be welcomed.

The coach who has been appointed will give the players an outline how practices will be held and what he expects of the players.

Practices will be held shortly and anyone wishing to play must attend this meeting. The club has ordered the equipment for the team so practices will not be unduly held up. The Victoria's club will carry fifteen players on the active

Series Comes Through

New York, April 13—The New York Giants won their Spring exhibition game series with the Chicago White Sox by winning the final game 7 to 6. The victory was the Giants' ninth in the 16-game series.

Batteries—McKain and Tate; Berry and Hogan.

CHRIST CHURCH PROVED SERIOUS THREAT TO BRIDGE ST. IN LEAGUE BASKETBALL

Bridge St. 29, Christ Church 28

During the early stages of the opening basketball fixture between Bridge St. and Christ Church at the Y.M.C.A. Gym. Saturday evening it looked every much as if the former aggregation were due to absorb their first defeat in the Church Loop from the West Hill Anglicans, Christ Church took an early lead and maintained the same for a good part of the opening period only to have the former McDonalds overtake them near the conclusion of the first half The score for the first period stood Bridge St. 13, Christ Church 13. Through the second canto the Christ Church Quint pressed hard and had a much larger percentage of shots on their opponents goal but failed to sink the sphere as consistently as the winners. In this session the losers were able to find the inside of the hoop on only three occasions as against seven shots that found their mark by the Bridge St. Quint. Certainly the Christ Church boys experienced the worst kind of luck on their shots. On several attempts the ball rolled along the edge then fell to the floor to be grabbed by a waiting Bridge St. Guard. However, much of their trouble is weak shooting and that is really what lost them the game. Any team which can miss the hoop on three successive attempts from right underneath it, hope to win championships, and that happened to the losers on many occasions. Bridge St., on the other hand, although not playing sensational ball were much steadier and made the mallerity of their easier chance count although they did not get nearly as many shots as their opponents did.

Christ Church—Barriage 6, Adams 3, Edwards 1, Scott 4, Potter 3, Saunders, Royle, Powell 3, Angell—Total 22.

Bridge St.—Ostrom 3, Buck 12, Cole 8, Morgan 4, Cowain, Bell, Cunningham, Henry 1.—Total 29.

St. George's from St. Andrew's by Default

Saturday evening saw the first defaulted game of the series when St. Andrew's passed the game to St. George's and participated in an exhibition fixture only. With the assistance of George Pepper, a member of the Scout's team, the Presbyterians were able to hold the Station Road Quintet to a tie game at twenty all. Inability to field a team was the reason given for the action by the Church St. Quint. This however was passing strange in that the necessary fifth member of the team witnessed the play from the gallery. "A pressing social engagement" did we hear as the reason for that? Yeah! Well, anyway a good time was had by all including Donald only one of the rail birds was inconvenienced enough to remark, "Applesauce."

St. George's—Embury 2, Burley 14, Flagler 4, McLean, Morris, Chantler 11—Total 30.

St. Andrew's—Ritchie, Pepper 4, McCreary 12, A. McCreary 2, Fisher 2—Total 20.

(St. George's took game by default)

Hockey Has Jadeaux 8

The battle which Judeaux put up against the winning Hockey team was one of the surprises of the series to date. The former were playing minus the services of their flashy forward and high scoring member, "Zeke" Tobe, but in spite of such a handicap, managed to hold the Hockeyy boys to but a small lead throughout the piece. Another note worthy feature was the outstanding contribution of Langsdorf of the winners. This boy, although a defence player, showing his alight inclination towards the scoring end of the game in all previous fixtures, broke loose in the game Saturday night and sank four nice field goals With all the promising youthful material at hand it will indeed be strange if the city is not represented by some exceptional teams within the next few years. Certainly the popular games is expanding and that rapidly.

Hockeyy — Burns 2, Binfield 4, Twiddy, Langsbeer 8, Phillips.—Total 12

Judeans—A. Tobe 2, J. Goodman 2, L. Yanover 2, Vechter, B. Yanover Samuels.—Total 8.

WILL REPAIR BASEBALL PARK

Expect to Rebuild Alemite Grounds for City Teams

The City Council has practically assured the Belleville Amateur Athletic Association, Belleville Victorias, Belleville Junior Moose and Belleville Ki-Y League that they will fix the Alemite Recreational Park into a first class ball park. Belleville has long been wanting another ball park as games may be played will be came to a climax this year, when it became known that at least four city teams would represent Belleville in the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association. The Belleville Ki-Y Juvenile League may also enter the play-offs.

At present the work of fixing these grounds is in the hands of a committee and it is hoped by the teams interested that the ground will be ready by May 15th at the latest, if possible May 1st.

Tigers Carry Punch

Detroit, April 13.—Timely hitting in the pinches enabled the Detroit Tigers to defeat the Pittsburg Pirates 10 to 5 in the final game of their exhibition series today. Meine, Alsbaugh touched for 15 hits, went the route for the Pirates.

Batteries—Meine and Hemsley; Sorrell, Herring and Grabowsky.

Reds Kicking Up

Cincinnati, April 13.—The Cincinnati Reds defeated the Cleveland Indians 8 to 7, yesterday in the final pre-season exhibition game of the two teams. It was the Reds' second consecutive victory over the American Leaguers.

Y'S MEN PRESENT AMATEUR PLAY

On Tuesday night, April 14th at the Collegiate Institute, Belleville, "A-Comin' In" will be presented under the auspices of the Belleville Y's Men's Club. The proceeds will be wholly devoted to the boys' work and those of it will go to the Community Camp at Moira Lake. This play is entirely local talent and the well known local talent will take part. The cast has been devoting considerable time during the last few weeks to the perfection of the various characters and the play will undoubtedly be a success. The play sponsored by the Y's Men's Club last year was a pronounced success and this year's event will be even better than its predecessor. Special entertainment is offered between the acts. "Summer is A-Comin' In" will doubtless be a decided hit and deserves splendid patronage from Belleville

RADIO FANS CORNER

"Reception took a bad spell last night between the hours of 8 and 9 and lasted just long enough to spoil the program of Chevalier. West Indian fans report the sledding good but not as the Hart mill fans, too bad such things will happen. Conditions cleared up after 9 a.bi and we carried on.

Hope you took my advice and listened in Saturday night to the program from WJZ. If you did you surely missed a mighty interesting program. The Circus Parade and Skinners Club was in full swing from midnight until one and then silently folded their tents and pulled out for another year. The bears were short and sweet and several well known circus men, including Major Pellowes, the publicity man, for the big show has been in Belleville several times and his voice was heard last night also that of Stanley Dawson who it will be remembered was as the circus padre at the impressive funeral that took place in the circus tent at Bleecker Ave. for the fallen trouper, Bruiser, Jim Ross. That was the one-summer of '27 or '28. The fat lady of the side-show, who is a fine soprano, the tattooed lady had tonsilitis and begged to be excused. Major Bowes and Gypsy Nina, the giant, Courtney Riley Cooper, famous circus author, spoke and the radio audience and Frank Buck, the man that catches all the wild animals for the circuses was also heard.

Monday night and it isn't a half bad night on the air the program to look good. Andy Sanella at 8.15 from WEAF, the Gypsies at 8.30 from Pittsburg at midnight and Fibber McGee at 9.45 comes a program of interest to the baseball fan. It's called "Batter's Up" and Babe Ruth is to speak also Lefty Grove, Dazzy Vance and Hack Wilson.

Ohman and Arden ride into town on the last express tonight and are more that master of the saxophone Rudy Weidoft will be heard at 9.30 when he played one of his own compositions "Saxophobia" and was it keen. WJZ at 8.30.

The Maytag program is heard at 9 and at 9.30 Real Folks. For the lovers of ex-chauffeurs the radio purpose will be heard in a program of these rollicking days at 11.30 WJZ. Cab Calloway at midnight. Guy Lombardo can be heard at 10 from WABC tonight and Arthur Pryor's Military Band at 11.15 same station.

Madoc Junction writes in again after a long silence and tells us that we heard Ruth Chatterton in the Musical Cocktail program and that we liked it. We certainly did and thought she was just as sweet off the screen as she is on it, at least judging from her voice. Missed the Barrie Hall program you were speaking about and recently heard Barrie hearing the Cabtercade program and agreed with you. Cert. You're right I anybody has any complaints to solve just write into the Sisters of the Skillet they'll do your worrying for you. Ethel Barrymore Hopper is heard in the afternoons but's one so far I haven't heard her program.

The speed of light never changes

BALL SEASON OPENS TUESDAY

Major League Teams Ready for the Long Grind

Chockful of Southern climate and pennant ambitions, 16 major league baseball teams polish off a week end for the annual plunge into the gay whirl that has named 1931.

The last of the barnstorming clubs have completed the long trip from the championship sector and are ready to go, Tuesday they will forget the arduous preliminaries before roaring crowds in eight cities of the National and American leagues.

Headlining the opening program will be Opening Day in Washington between the two time world champion Philadelphia Athletics and Walter Johnson's Senators, by popular consensus the A's most dangerous rivals for the 1931 American League crown. President Hoover, following an old pre-festival custom, will toss out the first ball and the affair will have all the trappings.

Favorites to win their third straight title, the Athletics will slip into the race at full strength. This was assured in the signing of Al Simmons, slugging outfielder and the return of George Earnshaw, right-hander, in good condition.

Elsewhere in the American League the Chicago White Sox will meet the Cleveland Indians at Cleveland, the Detroit Tigers will go against the St. Louis Browns at St. Louis and the New York Yankees will engage the Boston Red Sox at the Yankee Stadium. Since both Ruth and Gehrig have this special brand of homers with regularity, Yankee officials have visions of a 60 home run season.

Chicago fans will witness the feature game of the day, the National League's menu.- Rogers Hornsby's Chicago Cubs, choice of the consensus to finish second in their circuit, will engage the New York Giants in another strong unit.

Gabby Street's champion St. Louis Cardinals will without the services of the recalcitrant outfielder, Chick Hafey, invade the home lair of Col. Dan Howley's Cincinnati Reds. The Reds have been closest to repeat last year's triumph in the National League, but the Reds a wind around the cellar.

The boisterous Brooklyn Robins crippled by the injury of Adolfo Luque, veteran Cuban pitcher, and their new batting punch against the ambitious Boston Braves at Boston, while the Philadelphia Nationals are down to entertain the New York Giants at Baker Bowl.

Brooklyn, with George (Lefty) O'Doul's big bat in its line-up, has been established in the forefront of the National League contenders, and Boston appears stronger than last year. The Giants enter the race with their star shortstop, Travis Jackson on the bench with an ailing elbow.

BASEBALL LOOP IS ASSURED

Strong Intermediate Group Will Operate This Year

On Wednesday evening, April 15th a new baseball league will be organized. The meeting will be held at the Y.M.C.A. and delegates from Belleville, Trenton, Bridgewater, Deseronto, Point Anne, Corbyville, Trenton, Picton, and Belleville will be there. The league will be classed as Intermediate "B" Baseball and will be composed of teams which will give them the advantages of belonging to an Intermediate "B" League. Delegates are to be present at this meeting giving the delegates executive authorities and clothing them the advantages of belonging to an Intermediate "B" League. Belleville Victorias and an amalgamation of Tweed and Eldorado are to be starters in the league. Madoc, Marmora and Trenton are definite starters while it looks as if Picton will go softball unless the Deseronto Hockey sponsors the team.

WALTER GEROW TO COACH THE JUNIOR MOOSE

Sometime next week a meeting will be called by the Junior Moose Hockey Club at which time the date will be announced later. All those who have played with the Moose in the past few years and any new players who want to get a team on a first junior team as well as any member in the order who has a desire for playing will be welcomed. Walt Gerow has been asked to coach Belleville this season and with his consent the team will be handled by the best coach in Central Ontario.

The Junior Moose will be opposed by stiff opposition. Teams will have to fight for the membership against Point Anne who have their team in fast form as well as the new team in Belleville Amateur Athletic Association and Wellington. Delegates from the Junior Moose's hardest opponents in the league will be named late for intermediate "B." However they have defeated Regis, Leal and Bourdeau to help them out.

APPOINTED TREASURER

Appointment is made of D. M. Wright, local manager of the company, that Goldwin B. Todd had been appointed treasurer of the Ontario Furniture Company, Limited. Mr. Todd, who will assume his new duties shortly, will have charge of the office.

CANADIENS STAGED STIRRING FINISH TO DEFEAT CHICAGO

Flying Frenchmen Outscored Black Hawks to Even Series

Montreal, April 13—Driven to the wall by the fastest and best coordinated attack seen on Forum ice for months, the Chicago Black Hawks were forced last night to bow to Montreal Canadiens, four goals to two, in the fourth game of their series for the Stanley Cup and world professional hockey honors. A fifth and deciding game will be played here on Tuesday night as the teams have each won two games.

Canadiens, one of the greatest money teams in the history of the sport, found themselves facing a two-goal deficit at the end of the first period but opened up in the second with an attack that was irresistible. They rolled the overcharging Chicago front line back, cut the deficit in half, then added a pair of scores to date. The three previous games ended with the winning team one goal ahead and two of the Canadiens' victories.

Four Canadian Stars

Out of the struggle emerged four heroes for the local team, Johnny Gagnon, Pete Lepine, Aurel Joliat and Marty Burke. Gagnon it was who set the stage for Montreal's scoring scored both the goals which equalized the struggle; Lepine in the last 13 minutes of the game went berserk swinging his stick all over center ice to break up Chicago plays and dash in on Gardner, scoring two goals; Joliat was a constant threat, whirling his way in for dashing shots and Burke was steady as a rock on defense, covering opposing forwards deftly and breaking up dozens of attacks in each period.

Chicago fought a game and courageous battle. In the first period they swarmed over the Canadien defense and outclassed the Habitants completely, turning every opportunity to goals through Goitsedig and Arbour. They appeared to be getting high towards their first world's hockey title victory when Joliat would have given them the cup.

As the inspired Canadien attack began to falter in the second and third periods the youthful Hawks found new fury and furiously made it up but the drive was so powerful that it carried it to the limit and their efforts went for naught.

Substantial praise for Canadiens' win was the return of Albert Leduc to the forward line. Leduc proved to be shaky from the results of a concussion sustained in the Detroit-Montreal game and returned immediately to his best form and gave the Canadien defense of Mondeau and Burke adequate relief. Leduc also made the play for the first Canadien goal.

TULSA CAPTURE HOCKEY HONOURS

Kansas City, Mo., April 13—The Tulsa Oilers recaptured the Dixie Hockey League championship by defeating the Kansas City Pla-Mors here this afternoon, 2 to 1, in the fourth and decisive game of the playoff series. The Oilers won the three games to one.

Ken Reiser, who lost the title to Kansas City last year, clearly demonstrated right to the championship and the accompanying Skelly cup by scoring the winning goal in the second period and adding a third count in the final session to give the Oilers a safe margin. The visitors gained the advantage in the second period by sending the Pla-Mor sourians on the rushes. Throughout they carried a strong and well-coordinated attack into Pla-Mor territory. The line-ups:—

Highway construction in this county this year will exceed by far the Government over $650,000,000.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

"One Flash From Her Eyes and Say Man is Sunk!"

"What is the name?"

"Kitty—Katherine Mabe," I stammered.

The woman in the employment bureau of Hunter's Department Store seemed unutterably bored.

"Age?"

"Yes—" I giggled and felt my face turn, I mean eighteen," I answered.

The woman looked up and tapped the heavy imitation tortoise-shell rims of her thick glasses as she stared at me.

"Are you sure?"

"No, I only gave the record in the family Bible and the words of my parents for that."

"Flippant can never be tolerated in this establishment young person."

That frightened me. I wanted to work in Gunner's. I had to work somewhere.

"I didn't mean to be flippant, it struck me as funny, asking a girl if she were sure of her age," I explained.

"We cannot employ anyone under sixteen, we have to be sure about that. You look—rather young," she answered, seemingly mollified.

"I am eighteen, I was eighteen last week." I insisted and almost took out a little vanity case that Peter Thompson had given me for my birthday, as if that would prove it.

"Have you had any experience?"

"No, but I expect to have in a few weeks—I shall work very hard."

"If you do you will be a curiosity," she remarked. "Girls today seem to think life consists of just playing around."

The woman herself looked like one who had never played around. I felt sorry for her. She was beckoning to another girl and motioning me away.

"But—how about my application? Do I get the job?" I insisted.

"Come back in eight, Miss, but we prefer to call it a 'position'—not for Mr. Gunner."

I thanked her. I was so excited because I had actually landed a job that I hurried to reach home and tell about it. I heard the woman asking the same questions and I caught the name Philip Parsons."

Part way to the subway entrance I discovered that I had left my bag behind. No woman consider miscarriages! Anyhow I had to go back and get it.

The woman at the desk didn't seem to see me as I picked up my bag. She was questioning still another girl and the one who gave her name as Molly was just leaving. She winked at me as we went down the service elevator together and went on the street she stopped me and began to laugh.

"I thought I'd scream when you handed Wesley Price that line about how old you was," she cried.

"Did you get a job, too?"

"Uh huh."

A FRIENDLY PARTING

"Good. I'll see you Monday. I hope we get work in the same department —something told me that the clerks are awfully snooty to the beginners."

"Yeh? All right Kitty—that's the name you give her, ain't it?"

I nodded.

"All right, Kitty, we'll snoot right back at 'em."

"Sure we will, Molly!"

We grinned at each other, and parted.

When I got home and told the good news to my widowed and invalid sister, Cora, she choked up and started to cry.

"Forget it," I pleaded. "I was sick and tired of school. I wanted to go to work anyway."

"It's tough, Kitty, to be so helpless that your little kid sister has to help support you. When I get well I'll make it all up to you."

I comforted her as best I could.

That night father patted my shoulder when I told him.

"I'm not worrying about you, Kit, you are too bright to ever be a failure—before long I expect you will own a half interest in the store."

Father smiled but I knew that he was feeling mighty blue because he had refused to send me to college and now with his own work slack and sister Cora and her two kiddies to look out for, there wasn't a chance.

Peter Thompson came in Sunday evening. He didn't create any particular riot because Pete had been coming in to see me almost every Sunday evening for a year.

We went out to a neighborhood movie and I told him about going to work next day.

"That's all right with me, Kitty," he said. Pete always talked as if he already owned me.

"And if it wasn't? I asked teasingly.

"Aw now Kitty, you know soon's I finish my apprenticeship and get to be a real plumber I'll start out at once a week-end.

"You've mentioned that before," I reminded him.

"And then we'll get a little three-room flat and start housekeeping—it'll be married first thing after I start out as a real plumber."

"I'll be looking for a chauffeur, butler and lady's maid."

"Aw, Kitty—don't be like that. We can get along fine on what I'll make."

"Sure—we can play around all the time."

"Who wants to play around all the time?" he demanded, a tone of pain and surprise in his voice.

We had reached home before the argument ended.

"Don't you love me, Kitty?"

1930 DISCOVERIES MARKED PROGRESS IN STUDY OF STARS

New Bases For Study were Found By Astronomers

Cambridge, Mass., April 13.—Astronomers peering deep into interstellar space during 1930 drew from those unbounded depths new secrets, evolved new bases for study and formed new theories of the makeup of the universe.

Harry Hemly Plaskett, professor of astrophysics at Harvard University, has summed up the year's progress seven high lights that stand out in the year's record of astronomical research.

"For the first time in many years" said Professor Plaskett, "progress in our knowledge of the solar system has been comparable with that of the stars." In this field he pointed out the discovery of Pluto—at first called Planet X—swinging in its tremendous orbit far out on the borders of the solar system. Pluto is so far about the size of the earth and, Prof. Plaskett said, may possibly be only an adopted child of her sun—a wan derer picked up as it passed into the sphere of the sun's influence. It revealed, he said, the possibility of finding still other planets.

Another event, he said, was the preparation being made to re-measure the distance between the earth and the sun. This will be made possible this month by the close approach to the earth of the tiny planet Eros.

Next, he named what he considered the most valuable astronomical contribution of the year—the evolution of a new way of studying the strange halo that surrounds the sun. This method was evolved by the French astronomer B. Lyot. The halo is known as the solar corona and heretofore the only opportunities of studying its mysteries have been two-minute intervals a year apart, during eclipses. Lyot developed a very sensitive apparatus for the detection of polarized light which has enabled him to observe the corona without the aid of an eclipse. Since the sun is by far the nearest star to the earth, Prof. Plaskett said, methods of studying it are of prime importance, Professor Plaskett said.

In the study of stellar astronomy, Professor Plaskett continued, Professor E. A. Milne of Oxford, evolved during the past year a new basis for the study of the interiors of those enormous blazing giants called stars. Professor Milne demonstrated to the satisfaction of a number of experts that two main types of stars may be expected to exist. One would consist of stars like the sun with an exceedingly dense core whose temperature might be ten thousand times forty million degrees Another type would be the so-called white dwarfs with a density so great that one cubic inch would weigh a ton.

A new theory has been advanced in 1930, Professor Plaskett said, to the effect that the absorption of light in space was far more marked than had hitherto been suspected. This theory, propounded by Jan H. J. Trumpler of the Lick Observatory, if proven, would profoundly affect astronomy, for by far the greater part of the exploration of distant space is based on determination of distances from the apparent brightness of stars," Professor Plaskett said.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, pointed the way to a new conception of the Galactic system in 1930. The net result of studies by Shapley in 1918 was to dethrone the sun from its position as the centre of the universe and reveal it as an insignificant member of a star cloud away off at one side of the huge Galactic system of which the earth is a part. Professor Plaskett pointed out. Dr. Shapley's studies led to an increase in the astronomer's conception of the size of the Galactic system from 6,000 light years in diameter to 200,000 light years in diameter. (A light year is the distance light, travelling 186,000 miles per second, moves in one year. One light year is approximately 5,865,690,000,000 miles.

The theory was evolved that the center of which the earth is a part was a spiral nebula similar to other nebulae observed in space. The trouble was that our system was known to be five to six times larger than such other nebulae, "This year, Dr. Shapley pointed out that there existed in galactic system.

"The year 1930, Professor Plaskett added, brought forth further development of theories relating to the nature of the universe as a whole. These revolved in part around the apparently amazing behavior of the spiral nebulae which appear to be travelling away from the earth at 3,000 miles per second.

PREMIER MAKES SLASHING CUTS IN ESTIMATES; NEARLY EVERY DEPARTMENT IS PARED

National Defence Bears Brunt of Federal Reductions

HARBOR ESTIMATES

Govt. Expenditures Must Be Cut to the Bone, is Ultimatum

OTTAWA, April 14—Reduced nearly 40 million dollars below last year's level, the main estimates for the fiscal year starting April 1 which were tabled by Premier Bennett in the House of Commons last night, show better than words can tell that the Prime Minister has spared nothing in his endeavour to carry out his declaration that Government expenditure must be cut to the bone.

Every department but agriculture trade and commerce and labor has felt the ruthless slash of the paring knife. The brunt of the Premier's heavy hand has been felt by the departments of National Defence, where militia and aviation expenditures are heavily reduced; civil government, out of which most Ottawa civil servants' salaries come, and railways and canals, where the expenditures on the Welland Canal have been knocked down from $9,800,000 last year to $2,000,000 in the coming twelve months.

The total of the estimates presented by Mr. Bennett is $380,294,648.63 in comparison to the total of $423,-722,163.35 voted last session for the expenditures of the fiscal year ending March 31 last. It will thus be seen that the contemplated expenditures for the twelve months period are $37,527,754.72 below last year's appropriations.

Electrified Again

A house barely cool enough filled was electrified with expectation last night at 10.40 when the Prime Minister, who had been out of the chamber during the evening, strode in with a pile of blue books under his arm. Rumors in circulation all day that

FIRE DAMAGED SCHOOL ROOM

Hamilton, April 14.—Damage estimated at $1,000 resulted from fire of unknown origin which occurred Monday afternoon in the printing department of the Wentworth Tripartite School.

At the time the large room was unoccupied and the blaze was discovered when teachers investigated a strong odor of smoke.

The fire gongs were sounded, and 1,200 boys filed out of the building to the street. A few moments later the firemen arrived.

The flames originated in a large cabinet used for the storing of paper and other material. The printing department was filled with smoke and the blaze destroyed the locker and all its contents. A large glass partition was smashed and the ceiling was damaged.

NAVIGATION OPENS AT NORTHERN PORT

S. S. Marie, Ont., April 14 (CP)—The steamship Ann C. Minch arrived in the locker passing navigation from the east. Steamers Donnacona and Westmount were the vanguard of the fleet which led way from the head of lakes this season. They arrived over the week end.

In February, 1909 President Roosevelt created a temporary newspaper sensation by covering 88 miles on horseback between Pine Bluff and Hot. He made use of three horses in his 17 hours of riding.

WOUNDED TWO, SLEW ANOTHER, AND KILLED SELF

WOOSTER, Ohio, April 14.—(CP)—Ellis McGregor, 63, living near here, ran amuck at his home today, pouring gasoline on his wife and stepson, set them afire, fatally stabbed a neighbor with a butcher knife, then committed suicide. The mother and son were taken to the hospital in critical condition and doctors said they probably would die. McGregor's body was found in a shed behind the house, strung by the neck with a log chain to the roof.

Windsor, Eng., April 14— King George continues to make good progress in shaking off the bronchial attack which brought him down ten days ago, it was announced today.

ESCAPED WHEN CAR WAS HIT

Peterboro, Ont., April 14.—Constable Patterson, Road Superintendent of North Monaghan, had a narrow escape from death today when the car in which he was riding was struck by a railway train.

Although the car was hurled thirty feet, Patterson came out of the crash with only a few minor injuries.

EARDLEY WILMOT TAKES POST WITH BRANTFORD FIRM

Popular Ex-Mayor will be Associated With Plow Co.

The removal from Belleville of Mr. C. E. Wilmot is a distinct loss to the social and financial interests of the city of Belleville. Mr. Wilmot leaves an influential circle of friends who in the future, he will be associated with the Cockshutt Plow Company and carries with him the best wishes from a host of Belleville friends.

Mr. Wilmot entered the Bank of Montreal, in Belleville as a youth, and after serving for a few years in that institution, he joined the Ford Motor Company, in which he served the Toledo Branch, and entered upon other activities in the motor car business.

When war broke out, he joined the Royal Air Force and was flight commander and a brilliant pilot, receiving the Air Force Cross for his services. At the conclusion of the war, he went to the Argentines, with a mission established by the British Government, in which his services were more than satisfactory. Returning to Belleville he went into the automobile business establishing the Belcrita Motor Sales.

In 1926, he was elected Alderman for the city of Belleville, and served as Chairman of Finance. In 1927 he was elected Mayor, in a three-cornered contest.

Mr. Wilmot has been a good citizen, and financier in all his many ways, and in sporting circles has done a good deal of his time. He was president of the Bay of Quinte Rowing Club and a member of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

TEN TRAPPED IN CHICAGO TUNNEL DIE

Eleven Fireman and Six Workmen Rescued from Underground Tomb

PATH OF SAFETY

Secreted Selves From Poison Gas in Air Chamber

(Canadian Press)

Chicago, April 14.—Eleven firemen and six workmen emerged alive today from the blazing Sanitary District Tunnel that had been a tomb for ten of their fellows during the night.

The heat that melted the rubber suit of the diver and the fumes that choked and blinded daring rescue squads had forestalled a thorough search of the bore until some new eigeting device rushed here from Kenosha, Wis., was applied to the air shaft. Its double-barrelled prongs sucked the smoke from the chamber fifty feet underground and forced the compressed air down, clearing the path to safety for the entombed men. Once on the surface they were rushed to a hospital where twenty-eight other firemen already were patients. The survivors descended through the shaft that had been an avenue of death for ten firemen and tunnel workers trapped in the lethal gas and the unclearable heat. They had saved themselves through twelve hours' imprisonment by sealing themselves in the safety air chamber.

Bulletin, Chicago, April 14.—Six workmen emerged alive from the smoke filled tunnel shaft today where they had been entombed by smoke and fumes of sawdust fire. Crawling unaided to the surface they gasped that they had taken refuge behind an air chamber at one end of the bore and saved their lives. They were rushed to the hospital.

Ten men were known to be dead as a result of the blaze which trapped and undermined a number of others in the Sanitary District Tunnel.

DRUNKEN MAN STOLE TAXICAB

Montreal, Que., April 14—Pursued by the police a stolen car driven by Stinson Gilchrist, 21, overturned and was badly smashed, after a mad chase through the city streets. O'Connor was alleged to have stolen a car from a taxi driver after he had slugged him over the head with an iron bar. O'Connor was picked up by the police apparently unconscious but a medical examination revealed no injuries. He was charged with being drinking and remembered nothing of the happenings.

FATHER OF REV. DR. SEYMOUR DIES

Rev. Dr. J. A. Seymour, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Belleville, who was called yesterday to Cardinal, on account his father was seriously ill, reached the bedside one hour before the end. Rev. Dr. Seymour accompanied Dr. Seymour to Cardinal.

Mr. Seymour was stricken with a stroke last week.

BRITISH MONARCH FINDS HIS SALARY INADEQUATE

Post-war conditions in England, coupled with traditions which entail vast expenditures on the part of King George and Queen Mary, so reduce his annual allowance from Parliament that strict practice of economy is necessary in the lives of Their Majesties. King George's yearly allowance is $2,100,000 and, stupendous as the sum may seem, it is much less than other less wealthy nations pay, or paid to their monarchs. When one considers that His Majesty is monarch of the British Empire, "where the sun never sets," it is hard to realize that the Kings of Italy, Roumania and Siam get a much larger allowance than our beloved King.

FACILITIES FOR CARE OF SUB-NORMAL CHILDREN IN ONTARIO ARE TOO LIMITED

D. M. Wright M.P., Member of Ross Commission Was Speaker

Two vocational schools for sub-normal children, with capacity of one thousand each, are among the requirements of the Province of Ontario, if existing conditions which call for remedy are improved. So-called sub-normal children can be taught useful trades and become self-supporting and valuable members of society instead of parasitic inmates of institutions supported by the state. This was one of the recommendations of the Ross Commission report to the Ontario Government in connection with public welfare, the entire report calling for a proposed expenditure of approximately twenty million dollars in a program covering five years.

This very interesting report was briefly reviewed before the Belleville Rotary Club, Monday, by D. M. Wright, M.P., of Stratford, who was a member of the Ross Compulsion. The members of the commission made a close investigation of all provincial institutions dealing with public welfare and all matters relating thereto.

The speaker told of experiments already made very successfully in the schools for sub-normal children and their training to become useful citizens. Investigation has found that these children respond readily to the teaching of trades and become very expert and fast workers. This is the result of concentration upon some one thing. The question of reducing the num-

REFUSE TO ENDORSE BEER RESOLUTION

Port Arthur, April 14—Port Arthur City Council last night declined to endorse the beer-by-the-glass resolution from East Windsor. Alderman Jim Gibson said the Windsor beer was being sold here by the glass at prices which made it expensive for the average man. If the city was not prepared to meet the Windsor price it should take steps to stop the practice.

SEEK TO MAKE DECEMBER 26th

Erect-ville Ont., April 16—Activity in response to the petition presented to it by district business men, the municipal council last night decided to join the movement seeking legislation designating Dec. 26 as public holiday. Everywhere the Dominion. A memorial to that effect is being presented to the government.

ALFONSO IS OUT, PRESIDENT TAKES THRONE

(Canadian Press)

Madrid, Apr. 14 (Copyright by Associated Press) — King Alfonso, the last of Scanlon, abdicated at six o'clock this evening, (one p.m. E.S.T.)

The monarch, who was born king and had reigned in the ancient Spanish capital more than a quarter of a century, this evening bowed to the sweeping decision of the people on municipal subjects voted last Sunday, and stepped out.

Niceto Alcala Zamora, the Republican leader, who has so many weeks been in jail for King's activities, a provisional president.

Though the king's abdication has been the unquestionable outcome of the political crisis, for the past few days, it was not until the last moment can be stepped from power.

At 4.45 p.m. Alcala Zamora had found it necessary to send an ultimatum to the king. The ministers saying that unless the republic were formed within an hour, the Republicans would not be responsible for the consequences.

The hour went by and then just fifteen minutes after the ultimatum had expired the abdication became a reality. The announcement was made right after the final session with the cabinet in the royal palace.

The Republican government immediately took charge.

MAY VOTE ON "D.S." MEASURE FOR THIS YEAR

Organizations Favorable Agree to "Name" Polls For Vote

CUT COST OF VOTE

Petition Made For "D.S." From June 15th to Sept. 15th

Voting on "daylight saving" for the period from the fifteenth of June to the middle of September this year will probably come as a result of the offer of the Retail Merchants' Association and the Manufacturers' branch of the Chamber of Commerce and others favoring the measure, to name the polls on the day when the referendum is taken.

Last evening a large deputation appeared before the city council in support of a petition of the Merchants' Association asking for a vote upon the question of Dominion Day.

Mayor Reid asked Mr. F. B. Smith, secretary of the merchants' body, why the date had asked for to-day last December, the reply being that when the weather comes more likely more of such things as daylight saving.

Representing the manufacturers' section of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. T. Webster said that the manufacturers' section was unanimously in favor of such measure at

CLOSING PART OF KING ST.

Instructions Given City Solicitor to Proceed

The Finkle Electric Co., has been awarded the contract of wiring the residence at 14 Bleecker avenue, for $160.45.

R. C. Sprague was granted by the council last evening permission to operate a dry cleaning plant at the southwest corner of College and North Front Street.

The engineer and the chairman of public works were authorized to do the necessary advertising for sale of road oil and make arrangements for the surfacing of macadam roads in the city during the present year.

Private business of further credit was placed to the account of the C.N.A. indigent committee.

Engineer Mott was instructed to call for tenders for the supply of sewer pipe, and gravel, castings and cement required for the year 1931.

The matter of closing a portion of King Street in the rear of the Spring planet was then discussed with the city solicitor who will take all the necessary steps to clear up the matter and prepare the necessary bylaw.

The city solicitor was asked to send to Mr. John Elliot, chairman of the war memorial special committee all correspondence relating to the proposal of Mr. R. J. Graham for the erection of a monument in this city and report thereon.

Alderman Wallace brought the matter of Pinnacle Street repairs to the attention of the council and asked what had been done towards the repairing of the laneway. Mr. Macmillan said that he had heard nothing further about the proposed repairs.

Correspondence in regard to the complaints of police service was placed on the table and referred with a request to have Magistrate Mikel, commissioner of police, to attend the next meeting of the committee of the council to explain what steps are to be taken.

South Hastings is Well Taken Care of in Estimates

DREDGING

Additional Ground is to be Purchased For Public Building

News from Ottawa of the inclusion of an item of $250,000 in the estimates for the year 1931 for work this year at the air camp in Sidney, classed as much satisfaction in this city today. This sets at rest rumors which have been afloat and fears that the work there being would be halted in the drastic cuts expected to be made into expenditures.

A great amount of money has been already expended at the air camp and the expenditure of a further quarter of a million dollars brings appreciably nearer the day when this camp will be in full operation.

Public Building Site

South Hastings has been fortunate in the grants included in the estimates to be passed at the session of Parliament. $20,000 is included in the estimates for an addition to the site of the Belleville Public Building. This provided for the purchase of property between the public building and McAnaney Street. The addition of this land will make the public building site extend from Bridge Street to McAnaney Street. This was done some time ago talk of a new customs house to be built on this property but no mention is made in the estimates for this contingency, this having not yet reached stage for action.

$1,100 is included in the estimates for improvement to the heating system of the public building at Belleville.

Dredging

Fifty thousand dollars is provided for the dredging operations already under way between Trenton and Point Anne.

An interesting item is the provision of $35,000 voted for the work of the recognized branch stationed at Belleville this being an increase of five thousand dollars over the vote of last year.

Close regard over the needs of South Hastings has been maintained at Ottawa by Mr. W. E. Tummon., M.P., and the people will appreciate his efforts to have this riding well looked after in the estimated projects for the year.

MAY RATIFY CASH BONUS SYSTEM

TRENTON, N.J., April 14.—(CP)—Vice Chancellor Backes in an opinion handed down today upholds the stockholders of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation who are opposing the cash bonus system established by Charles M. Schwab in 1921. The court directed the vote might be taken but should not be announced until sanctioned by the court.

CEMENT BOAT AT THE POINT

Kingston, April 14.—The steamer Cementkeeper, owned by the Canada Cement Company of Montreal, under the command of Captain E. Hamilton, cleared Kingston from Kingston at 10 o'clock Monday morning for Point Abino, Ontario. The steamer left with all the customary blowing of horns and whistles that announces a departure from the six-mile limit.

The Cementkeeper, the latest addition to the lake fleet, carried a great deal of interest upon its arrival at this port last December and when it was launched. Everything that can possibly be done by electricity is operated that way. The winches, hoists and propeller are all operated by electricity. The latter being handled direct from the wheel house. By this method the captain can control the speed of the vessel without touching his gear and engineer indicates the number of revolutions the propeller is making. The "double-skinned" hulls of the Cementkeeper prevents any dampness from reaching the cargo of cement in case a hole should be accidentally made in the outer casing. The vessel is self-discharging and equipped with a pump run by compressed air, by which method the cargo of cement is forced through a pipe from the hold into waiting bins or cars.

MRS. F. FITZPATRICK NAMED PRESIDENT LOCAL BRANCH OF CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE

Mrs. J. M. Truaisch Retiring Head Presented With Gifts

At the afternoon meeting of the Catholic Women's League last evening in St. Michael's Academy reports for the year were presented and election of officers for the ensuing year was held. The business meeting was preceded by a very interesting address on methods of teaching the deaf used during the past centuries and those used in modern times given by Mr. E. B. Lally of the staff of Ontario School for the Deaf.

First reference to the deaf was in 500 B.C., when those so handicapped were mentioned in the writings of Hippocrates. In the sixteenth century Ponze de Leon definitely took up the study of education of the deaf, the first system used being to teach them to read and write, oralism not being touched on. The Hermans in the seventeenth century introduced this work but kept their system a secret. Abbe de l'Epee founded the school in l'Epee in France in 1712 to 1788, but these were not known and could not be used today. Mr. Lally described the methods employed in the various schools for the deaf on this continent. These are principally finger spelling, sometimes combined with a system of speech; the oral method which eliminates the finger and entirely through lip reading and speech such is employed by teachers at the O.S.D.; and teaching through the ear. The other method of teaching the deaf is the manual method—finger spelling expressed through signs, but the schools living in a deaf world. This method has long given way to more modern and helpful manners of educating the deaf.

Mr. Lally explained the work car-

MANAGER RETIRING

Miss Margaret M. Richardson, for many years the genial manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company Telegraph office here is retiring on April 30th. Throughout the years Miss Richardson has been in charge of the Belleville office and her efficiency coupled with her pleasing manner has won, made her a host of friends in Belleville, and the district who will regret her retirement.

Miss Richardson has been a most capable employee and on her moving to Prescott where she will make her home, she will take with her the best wishes of all with whom she came in contact. In Belleville Miss Annie Barnum, Miss Richardson's assistant, has appointed manager, with Jack Bingham as her assistant.

CHARMING BRIDGE

A most successful evening was spent last night at the home of Miss Jean Adams, Sidney Township,when Miss Adams entertained a number of her friends to a very charming bridge and supper. Bridge was enjoyed for the early part of the evening, the winners being, Ladies, Miss Ethel Barrett; Gents, Bill Hurst and Consolation, Frank Amey, after which a very delightful supper was served which was followed by dancing which continued until the wee small hours of the morning. Those present included, Miss Barrett, Helen Hurley, Miss Burks, Marion Ketcheson, Helena Kerrigan, Mr. and Mrs. Percy E. Ketcheson, J. McCartney, S. McNarin and Carl Sills. Everyone enjoyed themselves greatly and left voting Jean an ideal hostess.

INSPECTOR HERE

Mrs. Mabel Armstrong, Inspector of the Brownie work of the Girl Guides visited Trenton and Marmora with Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Mrs. Briggs and Miss Macdonald and conducted a class here in the Armouries for various Commissioners and Captains of the Girl Guides in Belleville. Mrs. Rutlie was the guest of Mrs. Ponton.

ENTERTAINED AT TRENTON

Bridge Street United Church Young Peoples' Association spent a most enjoyable evening as the guests of the King Street Y.P.A. of Trenton last night. Belleville furnished the program which consisted of a delightful piano solo by Miss Lillian Baldwin, a reading by Miss Edna Hoyes, a song by Miss Marjory Hall, a tap dance by Miss Mary Proctor, a solo by Doris Hall and another tap dance by Miss Forester and Bruce May. Games and refreshments finished up a splendid evening.

NAME OFFICERS

The lady golfers of the Bay of Quinte Country Club met for their annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Blakely, Victoria Avenue, yesterday afternoon. Officers elected for the year were:

Captain—Mrs. G. Stoble; Vice-Captain—Mrs. J. P. Dolan; Committee—Mrs. Bowerman, Mrs. Tyrrell, Miss Mary Roberts; Handicap Committee, Mrs. Roger Porter, Miss Anne Schuster Mrs. Richard Ponton, Mrs. Roy Stafford, Mrs. Joseph Chard; Junior Captain, Miss Lenore Stafford.

AT HOUSE REFUGE.

The Baptist Young People's Union had a most entertaining time in a charming manner the inmates of the House of Refuge. A delightful programme of hymns, Scripture readings and musical numbers was presented. Rev. A. Hilliard Jones gave a few brief remarks, while a girls' chorus rendered several compositions and Miss Evelyn Minnes sang a solo. The meeting was then closed with prayer by Mr. Joe Blackburn. Mr. Arthur Conner was chairman for the evening. About 20 members of the Union made the trip to the shelter and the visit was much to the inmates. Anne Hogle gave two recitations.

W. E. Sandercock, superintendent of the House of Refuge, wishes to thank for a splendid mess of fish given to the shelter by W. Black and Co., fish dealers.

ORANGE EUCHRE.

Under the auspices of L. O. L. and O. B. A. a most successful euchre was held in the Orange Hall last night. A good crowd was in attendance, a splendid time being reported. The winners at euchre were—Ladies first, Mrs. C. Johnson, second, Mrs. W. Whalen and third, Mrs. A. Buck; gentlemen's first, Mr. W. Gray, second, Mr. A. Grestrix and third Mr. S. Emerson. Winners at running were Mrs. Soules first and Miss V. Keegan second.

MANY VISIT SANCTUARY.

MAY JOIN ASSOCIATION.

The electrical contractors of Belleville and vicinity met at Inspector Harry Thompson's office last night for the purpose of discussing the question of joining the Provincial Electrical Contractors' Association. After a lengthy discussion it was not deemed advisable to join the Association but more information is required by the local contractors, before any action will be taken.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARY WELD

There passed away in the Belleville General Hospital this morning, Mary Ellen Ivory, wife of Robert Weir, fifty-seven years of age. Mrs. Weir, who lived in Madoc, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Connerty and had been ill for but a short time. She leaves to mourn her loss two sisters, Mrs. T. Bailey, Madoc, and John Mcmullen, Port Arthur and two brothers Charles Connery, Madoc, and Peter Conley, Valor, Sask., as well as many relatives and friends. She was a member of the United Church in Madoc and Oakdale Rebekah lodge.

MRS. M. CORKEY

Kingston, Apr. 14. — There passed away at her home, 250 Hamilton St., shortly after noon on Saturday, Mrs. M. Corkey, formerly Susannah Walsh. Deceased had been in ill health for the past eleven years but her condition became critical about three weeks ago and since that time her decline had been rapid.

The late Mrs. Corkey was born at Erinsville, Ontario, but had been in Kingston since 1883. She was a member of the League of the Sacred Heart and of the Orphans' Guild of the House of Providence Hospital. Her husband, one sister, Mrs. Ben Stokes of Kingston and fifteen nephews survive.

The funeral was held this morning from her late residence, 250 Montreal street, to St. Mary's Cathedral where solemn requiem mass was celebrated at nine o'clock. Interment took place in St. Mary's Cemetery.

JOHN HUTCHINSON

John Hutchinson, aged sixty-six years, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ray Whipple, 124 George Street, last night. The deceased, who was a Veteran of Ex-Edward county, had lived in Belleville for about thirty years and was a Great War veteran, serving overseas in the 39th Canadian Pioneers Corps in France for four years. He had been in poor health for some time. His wife predeceased him five years ago.

He leaves to mourn his loss five daughters, Mrs. Ray Whipple, 124 George Street, last night; Mrs. Doherty, Hamilton, Mrs. Peoples, Belleville, Mrs. McDonald, Trenton, and Mrs. Campbell, St. William; one brother, Hutchinson was a member of St. Thomas Anglican church.

VISIT SCENE OF ALLEGED DEPREDATIONS

Raymond Maracle, Brant Brant, Indians, Face Charges

In order to definitely decide whether Brant Brant and Raymond Maracle were trapping on land in the Township of Thurlow or in the Indian Reserve, Tyendinaga Township, which is the Indian Reserve, Magistrate Deroche, Crown Attorney, E. J. Butler, K.C., Indian Agent Lawson Jamieson and Irvine J. Lyons fish and game inspector left yesterday for the land and at first hand inspect the land that is under dispute.

The cases of Raymond Maracle and Brant Brant, each of whom are facing three charges, destroying muskrat houses, trapping out of season and setting fire within five feet of muskrat houses was heard before His Worship today and practically all of the evidence has been submitted. The defence claims that the men caught trapping on the 13th of March were trapping on lands that were on the premises of James Gedes in the Township of Thurlow while the Mr. Butler, defense counsel argued that the broken front along the Bayshore Road belongs to the Indian Reserve. It is believed no decision in the matter will be handed down by the defense or prosecution will appeal on a stated case and thus a decision will be given to go by in other questions of a similar nature.

Mr. Gedder. Mr. Spencer Howard and the game inspector all gave evidence this morning and Maracle were seen by them cutting the muskrat houses and placing the traps beside the houses and that they were constructed later. The men accused, stated they did not destroy the house but stated the "pushes," where the muskrats come up to feed. A blueprint of the land which was drawn and produced in court but Magistrate Mikel was of the opinion that it would be better to view the land before making a decision and the case was adjourned until the point arrived back some time late this afternoon.

AGED MAN'S BODY FOUND IN LAKE

BLACKSMITH SHOP DISMANTLED FOR PARKING PLACE

A landmark half a century old, the blacksmith shop recently purchased by Mr. Geo. Hutton on Pinnacle street, is being dismantled to make way for the ever increasing motor car, as it will be used for a parking lot. The building was built by Mr. Hutton's father and was in the late "Barney" Fox, Hill's and Fox's time and where the sidling now goes into Graham's Coal Shed. Mr. Hutton has also moved to his present location and Mr. Robert Mack is over in 1903 and has run a "smithy" there ever since. When Mr. Hutton first started in the business there were twenty-one blacksmiths in Belleville. The Jackson Bros. and Mr. Clarke being the veterans. Now there are two, Hill's and Graham's. Mr. Graham has opened a new "smithy" but north of Graham's siding on Pinnacle street, where he will continue to operate.

ENGLISH NIGHT CELEBRATED AT MOIRA CHAPTER

Dr. P. G. Campbell of Queen's University was The Speaker

"It is not those of commercial treaties entirely, but our own knowledge that binds together, that will keep the British Empire together," said Dr. P. G. Campbell of Queen's University, speaking to companions of Quinte Friendship Chapter No. 227 R.A.M. last night when "English Night," was commemorated by that chapter. The banquet was a most enjoyable and inspiring address on England and those who were not present, missed one of the finest addresses, that has been given in the city in some time. Rt. Exr. Comp Charles Kinnear, Quebec, District Superintendent of Prince Edward District, was present in an unofficial capacity, but delivered his remarks until he officially visits the Chapter. Rt. Exr. Comp Kinnear has been recently elected to the high office. First Principal Jack McIlwain occupied the chair, both in the Chapter and as the banquet board.

At the fourth degree Professor Wheaton acted as host at the piano and accompanied the gathering in songs of Merrie England, while Harold Howard gave a solo in keeping with the occasion and James Rankier and Geo. J. Howard contributed with a duet. The speaker was introduced by Comp Hall in a happy manner, while Most Ex Comp W. N. Ponton moved the vote of thanks in the usual brilliant manner.

International Peace

"The bond of International peace will come and be stronger, if nations will only study their history," was said Dr. Campbell. "There is a saying, 'Know thyself,' but we must go further than that. The greatest thing in the world is the British constitution. Napoleon called the English a nation of shop-keepers, which was very rude, but the English race is business like. There is not one monumental, while the Irish is not even business like. We hear so much about the United States and only last week at the Ontario Educational Association speaker after speaker stated that we in Canada, should study the history of the United States.

"We all do it all poppycock, as the system in England is most illuminating, and we could gain something from it. Every Englishman is born the duke, and I say without contradiction, that it is the greatest thing in the world to be a citizen of the country. It is zapping its very life blood, if we do not do it, and I say without contradiction, that it is surely darn today and I am not a swearing man, that we will be fought with up-to-date submarines, aeroplanes and poison gas, when the English muddled through the last one and probably will do it again, but we will be fighting the only road that the Persian, Greek, and Roman Empires have fought, the road to destruction.

A Mongrel Race

"What is the English race?" asked Dr. Campbell. He answered his own question by saying it was the mongrel race of the world. "As we look into our own history we find three occasions where the little Isle was invaded. The Romans came, but did not remain. Then came the Anglo Saxons and Jutes, and they eliminated all the natives. Then came the Danes, the Normans and then the Scots and Irish, and Welsh. Then the speaker showed, that the height of the English race was five feet three inches in thirty years after the Napoleonic wars.

Again Dr. Campbell asked the question, "What is the secret of the English National characters? He answered by the spirit of pride. "Englishman never boasts," he said, "he moves slowly and deliberately, but he has the tone watching and waiting. The English-man dislikes anything and the weakness of Lloyd George today is that he boasts. Englishman don't run him because he is Welsh."

The speaker showed the difference in language spoken in different parts of England stating that a Yorkshire resident can hardly understand one who comes from Devon. He showed the wide cleavage between the yeoman and the town and the difference between the rich and the miner, the latter being a specialist as a rule.

"There is no comparison in England with the government class knows nothing about the laboring class. It is impossible for Lord Campbell to read the speech of Sir Oswald Mosley in the House, especially he must be with the downtrodden, but practically he knows nothing about it. One is looking at the English from the inside as it were, and the Scots from the outside or as the world sees the Englishman."

Bulldog Most Significant

"We can get a fairly broad view," continued the speaker, "of what England has done in the past, what she has got to be in the future, we can only hope and pray. First and foremost the English navy. That navy was created by the English without help from any other nation. It was the spirit of high adventure. That sent Drake, Raleigh, Frobisher and many other noted men on the high seas to discover new lands and incorporate them into the British Empire. The English language and one of the three ways that the English are pictured, John Bull, British Lion, Britain, I prefer the bulldog. The bulldog is always ready to face the facts and they never know when they are beaten. The French probably know the English better than any nation and their epigram is "The English is still the dunkard. They have a hypocrisy about them." He said that the government of England is not really a democracy. In the speaker elaborated on these points at length.

At present there is a pupil at the Collegiate who is graduated from the O.S.D. and who is making excellent progress in his work although heavily handicapped, the residents at the Orphanage are pleased with Mr. Lally and spoke to the audience who were accounted as the most interesting and expert lip-reading in answering questions. A vote of thanks to Mr. Lally and the pupils was moved by Miss Margaret Hayes.

Reports for the Year

Reports for the year were given at the annual meeting of the O.W.I. which followed. Mrs. A. M. Truaisch, the retiring president, gave her report summarizing the special features of the work during the past year. Reports were also given by Mrs. Hall, treasurer, and Miss Hayes, superintendent of hospitality; Miss Margaret Hayes on correspondence, Mrs. F. E. Doyle on Social, Service, Mrs. Leo. Callaghan, Miss Lucy Ward, Mrs. C. O'Leary and Mrs. J. Lafferty who reported on the Travelers' Aid activities.

The election of officers was held and Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick was unanimously elected president. The rest of the officers as follows:

Past President—Mrs. Truaisch.

1st Vice President—Mrs. J. M. Truaisch.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. E. O'Leary.

3rd Vice President—Mrs. P. J. Lee.

Recording Secretary—Miss Ireleana Bollis.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. A. Bollis.

Treasurer—Miss Anna Hurley.

Directors—

Foster Ward—Mrs. James Lynch.

Ramsay Ward—Mrs. Thos. Rutland.

Bridge Ward—Mrs. E. Lally.

Baldwin Ward—Mrs. R. J. Black.

Victoria Ward—Mrs. R. Hall.

Murney Ward—Mrs. J. Fahey.

Dufferin Ward—Mrs. Hayes.

Travellers' Aid Secretary—Mrs. J. Lafferty.

A charming incident took place at the close of the meeting when Mrs. Truaisch who retires as president of the League after two terms in office was presented with gifts by the executives of the both years and a life membership in the organization of Mrs. Truaisch's splendid year as president, took the form of two bridge services of china and dainty bridge cloths. Mrs. Truaisch made a gracious reply thanking the members for their loyal support and for their co-operation at all times, which, she said, made her work easy.

FACILITIES FOR CARE OF CHILDREN

ber of sub-normal children being brought into the world is discussed by the report, with the advisability of medical certificates of physical and mental fitness being required before marriage licenses can be issued. Sterilization was discussed. Many of the institutions for mental and other treatment need enlargement and replacement and the speaker maintained that if the recommendations in the report could be put into effect today the accommodation thus provided would be taken up at once, an evidence of present serious over-crowding and the need for new public buildings for public welfare purposes.

Cancer is increasing and steps must be taken to combat this disease and find if possible a cure.

Treatment of drug addicts is at present very haphazard and not effective. An institution is needed where patients may be treated continuously for six months or more if necessary.

A special school for crippled children is needed as an expenditure of approximately $770,000.

The Ontario Hospital for mental cases at London, erected fifty years ago is in need of replacement at an expenditure of $800,000.

The Alexandria Industrial School for Girls which has accomplished a remarkable work, is inadequate.

Girls should be replaced.

Briefly the above represents some of the findings of the Committee of Ross Commission, as outlined by Mr. Wright, and his address showed a close and sympathetic knowledge of the subject.

WHETHER OR NOT TO BE A DOMINION

Many in Newfoundland Favor Retention of Colonial Status

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., April 12.—(By the Canadian Press)—Newfoundland is just now facing a puzzling academic problem. Whether the Oldest Colony shall continue to take pride in that name, or shed its distinction for the newer style of "Dominion" depends on the fate of three bills or resolutions now before the House of Assembly. The first is the proposed Statute of Westminster, repealing the Colonial Laws Validity Act, and permitting a Dominion to maintain laws "repugnant to the law of England". The others would authorize the adoption of a Newfoundland flag, and change the Colonial Secretary's title to Secretary of State.

Second reading of what is known as the "Dominion Status Bill" has been deferred, the supplementary measures being held over until final disposition is made of the central resolution, which, it is announced, will be discussed in camera by a joint session of both parties.

Judging from correspondence and editorial comment appearing in the daily press, Newfoundland wants to remain a colony. The Island has been self governing and a dominion in effect, for years, but has never bothered to assume the titles that go with Dominion Status. Writing in the Evening Telegram, Former Premier W. S. Monroe gives his views:

"At the Imperial Conference of 1926 Newfoundland was created an autonomous community within the empire equal in status to Great Britain and her overseas dominions. This was not acclaimed by the local press, by the people, nor by their representatives at the Conference as being any material advantage to us. My solitude during the conference was that Newfoundland was satisfied to continue relationship with Great Britain as it then stood, and that we preferred to be the oldest Colony to being the youngest Dominion.

"Why are we now bothering about a change of flag? Surely the old British Ensign is still good enough for us?"

Another writer "sees no reason why Newfoundland should not accept the changed status without the necessity of passing special legislation. We have never, since responsible government was granted, felt that we were in any way restricted in scope or subject to interference from the Home Government.. . Newfoundland has always rejoiced in the fact that it is Britain's Oldest Colony. We have never desired to be the newest Dominion. Dominion status, the right to determine our own affairs in our own way, has been ours since responsible government. We have never been denied our right to take our place with the larger dominions at Colonial and Imperial conferences. Since the privileges, if they may be so called, that we would receive by the ratification of the decisions of the last Imperial Conference would not be denied us if the present resolution were not passed, and since these privileges are neither material nor intrinsic gain, would it not be a regretful act for the long vaunted loyalty of Newfoundland were denunstrated by refusing to see the necessity for making further progress in the Assembly with 'the Resolution?'

The Telegram remarks editorially: "Newfoundland desired Dominion status. Will that fact be any the more gratifying because it entailed having to follow the lead of a Dominion that was satisfied to remain in the Family of Nations, and, if it does not see at least demands the right to cut itself adrift? . . . Let those Dominions that so choose adopt the constitutional changes in this resolution. Let Newfoundland once more proudly demonstrate that deciding for herself what course she will follow is the kind of loyalty that is in that would contemplate the passing of laws repugnant to our King! Such is no indication of period readjustation-blood. It shows but the spirit of a swaggering youth, who, feeling his swelling muscles, believes that single-handed he can lick creation."

Discussion on the proposed Statute of Westminster was halted at first time by the Viking disaster, which caused adjournment of the house to deal with the moral and material business of rescuing the survivors. When the legislature resumed, second reading was deferred. The two other bills, dealing with the flag and the colonial secretary's title, appeared on the order paper. The Hon. F. C. Alderdice, leader of the opposition, suggested that as they were supplementary to the Dominion Status Bill, it should be proceeded with first. This met with general approval, pending the announcement of secret sessions followed. "

MORE DISCIPLINE IN MAINE PRISON

THOMASTON, Maine, April 13.—Inmates of the state prison here are beginning to get a taste of prison authority. From now on not more than four hundred love letters week-by will find their way to the cells behind the institution's stone walls, limitation of correspondence to two letters a week was the most vigorous by protested rule of the new regime established by Warden G. E. Linscott a short time ago. Early one morning the prisoners decided to "celebrate" which is equivalent in prisonology for a noise riot. Six hours of yammering resulted only in six of their number going to solitary. Also the new rules, which include compul-

DR. COLLIP TELLS OF DISCOVERIES

Professor J. B. Collip, native of Belleville, who acknowledged the assistance of four doctors in his laboratory who have collaborated with him in the study of internal secretions which he discovered recently, reported on further developments in his research before the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology at Montreal on Saturday. He spoke of another new hormone which he has named emmenin, having discovered it in the placental secretion. He described this new hormone as one having much the same effect as that of the pituitary gland in stimulating sexual development. With it a young animal may be brought to sexual maturity long before it could reach that development normally. Same thing may be done with the pituitary secretions and with those of the adrenal cortex, it was reported. Professor Collip further described his work, his methods and his results. He named as his associates Doctors D. L. Thompson, F. S. L. Brown, M. K. Morgan and J. E. Williams, all of McGill.

SALARIES SUBJECT TO QUESTIONNAIRE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—The average salary of a Yale man four years after graduation is about $3,000. This figure has been established by a questionnaire sent out to determine salaries, trends in the changing jobs and the occupational history of the graduate after obtaining his degree.

The inquiry included a searching investigation of the 1926 class of Yale, and disclosed that such commercial pursuits as advertising, merchandising, commercial transportation and general office work led to salary returns by graduates in a yearly average of $4,000 for the college man four years out. After these are financial occupations, banking, investment securities, real estate and insurance with about $3,000 and close behind these come manufacturing and engineering. The average return from teaching is about $2,300.

The best paid form of work was shown to be salesmanship with an average return of $4,200 to those engaged in it. Professional workers who have utilized most of their spare time since graduation in continued study, average about $2,600.

Nearly sixty per cent of the cases reported show that positions have not been changed since graduation. The graduates who have changed have held from two to seven jobs and their reports show that they are averaging $200 a year less than those who are still with their first firm.

300 MILE TRIP THRU ICE, SNOW

Winnipeg, Man., April 13—Victoriaus in a three-thousand-mile skirmish with the elements, three Carlaru brothers are back in Winnipeg from an automobile trip to Toronto, which er they had rushed to be at the sick bed of their mother, Mrs. Jessie Clark.

Leaving here on March 13 they battled their way through sleet and snowdrifts for the greater part of the journey. Their windshield wiper was put out of action with the pressure of the snow. Drifts were piled high above their car on both sides of the road. To add to their difficulties the rear axle of their car caved in, hucking a snow drift east of Chicago.

The brothers left Toronto, on the return journey, on March 20 and made fair time to Windsor. West of the border city, however, they had their second battle with the snow and fought drifts and sleet for the remainder of the journey.

They found their mother in hospital resting easily with a fractured thigh, suffered when she fell downstairs. The visit of her boys cheered her immensely.

NOTED GARDENER HAS BIRTHDAY

HALIFAX, N.S., April 13.—(By the Canadian Press)—An Irishman who came to Halifax sixty-nine years ago and built up the public gardens of this city to an international reputation celebrated his ninetieth birthday on April 6. He is Richard Power, Superintendent of the gardens here from 1872 to 1919, and actively associated with their care until two years ago.

One of a family of floriculturists he was born in Lismore, Waterford County, Ireland, and at seventeen years of age was gardener to the Duke of Devonshire's estate there. Four years later he came to Halifax and was placed in charge of the Halifax Nursery, the first public nursery in this city. Some years later he took over charge of the Public Gardens, which have since then become outstanding among city gardens on this continent. His interest embraced more than this area in the heart of the city, however, and trees planted by him tower today over many of the residential streets and buildings of Halifax.

Three married Mr. Power had fourteen children. Among those living today are Robert Power, assistant superintendent of the Halifax Park Public Gardens, and George Power, now publicity director in Halifax.

A grandson learned the craft under his grandfather and is now following this work in the United States. All of Mr. Power's family, of whom one survives, have experienced pastoral callings.

A war memorial chapel is being added to Norwich Cathedral in England.

TABERNACLE W.M.S. EASTER SERVICE

The Annual Easter Meeting of the Tabernacle United Church W.M.S. was held in the S.S. room, Thursday evening, April 9th. The programme presented was under the auspices of Group No. 4, Mrs. Emerson being Convenor.

At 8.30 p.m. the President, Mrs. G. Horton, announced the opening Hymn, "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross", which was followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The usual reports of Secretaries and Treasurer were received and adopted, and the programme proper launched with the singing of the hymn, "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?", followed by prayer.

Those present remained standing to read the following poetry from the typed programme sheets:

But once I pass this way,
And then.....no more.
Lord, ONCE, and then the silent door
Swings on its hinges,
Open.....Closes,
And no more I pass this way,
No, while I may
With all My might, I will essay
To work, and love, and pray
To all I meet upon this Pilgrim Way
For, no man travels twice
The Great Highway
That leads thro' darkness up to light
Through Night, to Day,
Christ depends on Us. Let us not fail HIM.....

After which all joined in singing the hymn, "When I survey the Wondrous Cross."

A Responsive Reading Service was lead by Mrs. E. B. Bell, interspersed with the music of "There is a Green Hill Far Away", sung by a ladies' quartette, Mesdames Cherry, Frosh, Mcallister and Lent also with a reading by Mrs. Paul setting forth the true significance of Christ's Cross to all Christians.

The Responsive Service was closed by a prayer, read in unison, presenting a petition for a better under standing and more practical living of the patience, love and sacrifice learned from the Cross, and the joy and gladness experienced in the Resurrection.

"The Easter Dawn", a duet rendered by Mesdames Frosh and Duff, repeated the Easter Story of Joy and Gladness to all mankind everywhere.

Six young ladies in white presented a beautiful tableau, "The Crucified Cross", closing same with the singing of the wonderful hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross". This was sincerely appreciated.

Following, "The Spirit of Places Fair", was beautifully depicted by seven ladies of the W.M.S. representing, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Capernaum, Gethsemane and Calvary, "The Spirit of Places Fair" being rendered by Mrs. Mcconkey. The activeness of Jesus in these cities were pictured in the tableaux. Circle by members of the Auxiliary, Circle and Band, accompanied by the singing of suitable hymns by the Ladies' Choir.

The Mizpah Benediction brought an enjoyable and profitable meeting to a close, after which delicious refreshments were served by ladies of Group No. 4.

PLACE ACCORD ON LEAGUE AGENDA

MANITOBA TO TRY NEW FOREST FIRE PREVENTION SYSTEM

Winnipeg, Man., April 13—Denied further use of the Royal Canadian Air Force in forest patrol work because the price of $250,000 yearly, asked by the federal government, was regarded as too expensive, the Manitoba government will seek other means of patrolling its forest areas and protecting them from forest fire hazards.

Plans are being worked out for a system of look out towers and radio telephone control in conjunction with an aeroplane service. The government will seek a contract with private companies, based on the use of 'planes within certain specified hours, with provisions for carrying on extra hours when necessary.

Provincial air control bases will be at Cormorant Lake, in northern Manitoba, and at Gull Harbor, on Lake Winnipeg, the latter a new base. Lac du Bonnet will no longer be used as an air base.

Twelve R.C.A.F. 'planes had been used for forest patrol work in the province of Manitoba.

THE NATIONAL HOLIDAY

Dominion Day as a day of greater prominence is the aim of a movement which has just been set on foot.

It is a worthy object. Dominion Day should be more than a mere holiday when a man thinks of nothing but his own pleasures. Some of the pleasures he takes in that day should be pleasures derived from the knowledge that he is part and parcel of a great nation and the realization that he is given the opportunity to advance this nation by a contribution small or great. Today national matters do not much concern a great body of the people of Canada on Dominion Day. It would be better for Canada and for the individuals if July 1st were given a national aspect.

To have this does not detract from the Canadian's interest in the world at large. Rather it increases his interest because he knows that what he contributes to Canada is contributed by the Dominion to the world.

It is something for a nation to stand before the nations of the world and occupy the place that Canada occupies with its opportunity to advance itself and to make a world contribution which will advance humanity the world over.

Canada is thinking more deeply of national matters and by national thinking giving can bring to the solution of the world problems a greater possibility of solution. We come without age-old prejudices, let us forget indifference and by thinking of Canada, think of the world as a whole with open minds and grateful hearts which have seen the blessings which surround us as a gift of Providence and the blessings of British citizenship.

MOST INTERESTING ANIMAL

Scientists have found man the most interesting animal because he is able to express himself, to expose his emotions to clinical attention and thus to aid in everdeepening probe of science into the underlying facts of life, and to find not only the mysterious equilibriums of health but also the infinitely more mysterious secrets of happiness as well.

With man as prober and man revealing his impressions and reactions much of the secret of success in research must lie in man because man is the supreme expression in nature as far as man knows.

Now comes "lower" life as man pleases to call the other animals and the birds as well as the inanimate things, the rocks and the flora, the play a great part in the researches which delve down into the recesses and caverns of life where are hidden the mysteries of the ages.

It is of the pathetic things of life that the fauna outside of man cannot register their emotions as man do. Man often feels that nothing that his friends in this "lower" sphere could open up their world and communicate with him. His dog will do all he can to express affection, and birds and beasts will submit themselves to man out of confidence in him. What a lesson is it for man that these confiding creatures have to offer! In their brains and systems are looked up secrets man will probably never be able to discover, or if he discovers them all he may have to find them by analogy through his discoveries in the human brain and heart.

These researches which are exposing things which have been unknown and mysterious might be expected to have a materialistic effect in the insistance on practical causes, yet in no realm as in the experimental researches of science is there so great a field for romance in the quest of what is at the base of what is called natural law.

Man remains the most interesting thing in all the world because it is man that is directing the investigations and because man is able to record his reactions, but it must not be forgotten that much still has been hidden in the commonest flower or the coarsest animal.

THE RECOVERY—THEN WHAT?

Is the turn which so many have been prognosticating for months about to appear? If it does appear, we are to go back into the old era of 1928-1929 which ended with the collapse of 1929-1930? Many hope for the return of prosperity and expect to live just as they lived before the crash in commodity and market prices, but they are reckoning without the spirit of human nature. In the first case, conditions do not exactly repeat, and, secondly, people would not to allow the repetition of what has passed. The tumbling of prices and the depression were the result of a state of affairs at work in the world, requiring a major operation. After major operations things are different.

But it is not the time and will never be for those who hope for it will hope in vain. This is not to say that conditions will not improve They will improve and will move on to a solution or to another climax which will result in another collapse and inevitably bring nearer the solving of the great problem to be solved.

economic ills, for problems will ever and ever present themselves for the expert to solve.

The Moira River today looks quite a different stream from what it did in the last days of winter as the ice was rotting on the rocks and in the bed of the river. The moisture from the last snow storm was some time in getting down to the river, but it has done since its appearance made a great change in the appearance of the stream.

GRANDMOTHER'S GARDEN

Though I love every one of Earth's flowers
As up towards the sunlight they grow,
Still my memory seeks the bright bowers
Of a garden I knew long ago.

Sweet alyssum and bridal-wreath lifted
Their petals like pearls to the light,
And the faint scent of violets drifted
To sweeten the whispers of night.

In the garden my grandmother tended
Were primroses and poppy and rue,
And the fragrance of spice-pinks comes blended
With memories of sunrise and dew.

How I love to live over in dreaming
Glad days all untouched by regret
In her garden with mellow light gleaming
On its borders of shy mignonette.

IT'S GETTING TO BE A HABIT, this collecting tea-lead and tinfoil for the benefit of the crippled children fund of the Rotary Club. Ever the Rotary Club schools are doing it and saving tinfoil wrappers from chocolate bars besides checking up on the household tea-lead and tinfoil. School Nurse Ross is supervising this collection and nearly one hundred pounds has already been turned in. Past President Al Sullman of the Rotary Club is giving a good deal of his time to the collection and preparation of the tinfoil and lead for sale and would be much assisted if collectors would separate all paper from the lead and tinfoil which would save a good deal of time. Some varieties of lead in tea packages have to be soaked in water before the paper can be removed. The crippled children's fund needs a whole lot of money—more than one child alone, or under treatment over a six hundred dollars has been spent—even though local doctors give their services free, and Rotarians make no charge for their time, nor do the great specialists of Toronto make any but the most nominal charges. Hospital fees and others have to be met, however, and soon mount up into a tidy total. So save your tinfoil and help to bring happiness to some crippled child."

MOOSE FACTORY, on the shore of James Bay, is to be a new Canadian port of vie with Churchill for honours of farthest north navigation. The Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, now commonly known as the Ontario Government railway will soon have its northern terminal at Moose Factory where a new town will be laid out without the assistance of real estate boosters. All the most difficult construction feats have been accomplished and the steel will soon be in to Moose Factory long a Hudson Bay post and Indian encamp ment. Whether the new town will get a new name or whether the historic and unmelodious name of Moose Factory will be used is problematical. Some meaningful romantic Indian name will be found for publicity and the tourist traffic but it is doubtful if the old original name of Moose Factory could be improved upon as a good drawing card for tourist trade. Moose Factory is to be a model town with space for parks, driveways and boulevards. It is a townsite made to order and to please, with plenty of parking space for motor cars and trucks. And, of course, motor cars will not be able to get there for a while but there will be plenty of parking space in the whole north country when they do come down the steel tract that is the extension of the Temiskaming Northern Ontario with the Great Lone Land will lose its loneliness, the Indians will become sophisticated and the bear and the wolf and other denizens of the northland will be pushed farther and farther back into the vanishing wilderness, while commercialism wins another victory over romance and adventure.

TRUCKERS' HOURS

In usually well informed quarters a misapprehension seems to exist concerning the working hours of motor transport drivers Toronto Saturday reporting an incident the other day, stated that while legislation restricting driving time had been proposed by Premier Henry, none was enacted at the session. It was closed. Evidently it was not necessary, for the Cabinet at the beginning of the year approved a set of regulations under the Public Commercial Vehicles Act, one of which provides that no owner or manager of a public commercial vehicle shall allow a driver to work in that capacity more than 10 hours in any 24-hour period, under penalty is revocation of license. The new regulations were made effective April 1, and copies were received in this office some time ago.

The Mail and Empire finds merit in a recommendation of a Labor convention at London that truck drivers should be placed on an eight-hour day basis, and thinks the government might well take it into consideration. It has grappled with the situation, however, and perhaps quite as far as the interests of public safety require. Motor trucks have become an important part of the country's transport system, and even though they are affording keen competition to rail lines, there is no reason why workers should be persecuted. Motorists on long tours do not, as many hours as they wish, and upon consecutive days, without undue restriction, and usually with several passengers in their cars. The driving hours of transport men have also been set by the Act at present, wholly to the discretion of the operators, and once they start operations, changes has been imposed, it might well be given a fair trial.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review

THE MOUSE HAD HIS DAY

The London and Southern Counties Mouse Club has no connection with the Canadian Kennel Club, so it is interested in mouse-traps or mousers. On the instance of the former itself to breeding mice for pets. Recently it held its first mouse show in hundreds of bloodied animals from all parts of the British Isles. Mice of all sizes, colors and conditions, all pedigree varieties, were on exhibition.

The prize beasties had not much temperament as the aristocrats of a dog or cat show. A "pretty Scottish mouse" attracted much attention by continually running round its cage. Others appeared to have "stage fright" and "refused to perform" and sulked under the straw in a corner.

There were many women spectators, but not one reported case of mouse-phobia. Feminine sensibility, with screams, grabbing of skirts and flights to chairs, in fact, one official, a woman, explained that she encouraged mouse-breeding a hobby —New York Times.

CANADA'S AIR MAIL

Some misapprehension appears to have arisen in connection with the announcement yesterday towards the air mail service. Mr. Bennett has decided to postpone the scheme, which is for general policy of economy and retrenchment, but to go ahead with it and with the least possible delay—as soon, indeed, as the new estimates have come in for a slashing down. Provision will be made for it then in the estimates. It was intended that some twenty-five routes should be established, but the postponement presumably. But this is a very different thing from abandoning the project altogether. The foundations are being laid for a substantial service with the returning prosperity it will bring. It is unquestionably a "key industry" and the full service, if not, indeed, extend to the whole of the Dominion, is required. The present reduction is an economic move only.—Montreal Star.

They Do Us More Good Than any other Medicine

Says Toronto Man Of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mr. McMullin Always Keeps a Box in the House

Toronto, Ont., April 13 (Special)— What most people want these days is a medicine that will help them to get with perfect confidence in time of need. Mr. McMullin, 341 McRoberts Avenue, Toronto, has no fear when it comes to a remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills. He writes:

"We are never without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I get out of sorts we take them and they do us more good than any other medicine. We have used them for a long time.

Your health, strength and vitality depend upon the condition of your blood. If it is brought to you that every part of the body is nourished by rich blood in full vigor and health the blood must be kept pure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the great blood purifier. They do not affect the liver or bowels, they are just an effective Kidney medicine.

Earth's Interior is a Profound Mystery

One of science's most profound mysteries concerns the interior of the earth. Although men of research have endeavored in widely much to our store of knowledge in other fields the veil of secrecy that shrouds the problem of the earth's interior have not been penetrated.

One of the recent projects proposed to find out more about the earth's interior is that of a deep shaft to be sunk several miles straight down into the bowels of the earth. Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, one of those posed this idea believes the undertaking will help to throw new light on such questions as what lies inside the earth, the origin of the planet, mountain ranges, the cause of earthquake volcanoes and earthquakes.

Several expeditions have been ordered Dr. Shapley's idea. The Harvard astronomer would build his first shaft inside the earth to a depth of more than three miles. This would cost approximately $10,000,000 it is estimated. Two of the world's leading engineers, Sir Charles A. Parsons, former president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and John L. Hodgson, who has made a special subject of underground laboratories for science, see in the project no obstacles that modern engineering cannot solve.

Sir Charles says as far as is sunk the advisability of building a shaft of twelve miles into the earth are concerned there is no doubt. Mr. Hodgson has suggested that it may be practical to descend to fifty miles. Both eminent men say that no matter how great the cost of subterranean laboratories the expense is justified. They contend that we know nothing of what is inside the earth but that we ought to end the only way to find out is to go down into the interior and see.

What we know of the earth by direct observation is confined almost entirely to its surface. The greatest depth to which man has ever penetrated is only a few miles. Compared with the size of the globe only as the skin of an apple does to the body of the fruit itself. Several oil wells and coal mines represent at the moment the deepest man has descended, whereas the earth is thousands of miles thick. The deepest mine in the world is less than two miles deep.

Probably the greatest difficulty facing man in any attempt to go west from our planet's core is the secrets which lie in the earth. The tremendous heat which prevails day and night beneath the crust. The deeper we descend into the bowels of the earth the hotter it gets, as any miner can testify. Although this rate of increase differs in different parts of the earth, and in some places the temperature has been computed at about one degree of Fahrenheit to every fifty or sixty feet.

At this rate of increase the earth's interior at a depth of less than fifteen miles would be boiling hot. No metal that we know of could resist the terrific temperatures. This tremendous heat has led many geologists to the conclusion that the interior of the earth must be in a continual molten state. The theory has been advanced that the earth may be likened to globe, consisting of the large part melted, surrounded iron, covered with a thin cool crust, in which we human beings live.

Engineering science has lately come in vogue, which considered the deepest mines a scratch on the surface. The geologists who believe that the earth's surface contains a molten interior contend that the interior is solid and not molten. They contend that the interior is kept in a solid state, by the tremendous pressure of the rock on the interior. They point out that while the heat of the interior would melt the surface rock if it were to go down into the interior, they are compressed by the enormous weight of the rock above, with the result that the material inside the earth is kept in its natural solid state.

HEART OPENED BY MISTAKE, IS SEWED UP

Berlin, April 14—A dramatic operation in which a surgeon sewed up a year-old girl was cut open by mistake and had to be stitched immediately in the chest, was related by the patient was described at a session of the German Surgeons' Society by Professor Sauerbruch, a noted Berlin surgeon.

The professor presented the recovered girl, who did not show any effects of the shock.

The girl developed heart trouble and her physician sent her for examination picture showed a large swelling within the right side of her chest. A short time before Professor Sauerbruch had made a similar operation in a man's chest, which proved to be a blood blister, and he opened and eliminated it successfully.

Accordingly Professor Sauerbruch started to make a slight incision for size of two fists in the girl's chest. When nothing happened he cut deeper.

CHILDREN ARE THRIFTY

Thrift appears to be becoming a habit with young Canadians; and the penny banks conducted in association with the schools of Ontario have had a great deal to do with the inculcation of this admirable virtue. A state ment issued by A. B. Ellis, proud, inspector of these banks, shows that there is a present total to the credit the impressive sum of $1,362,819.45. During the months of January and February, indicates an important increase in deposits over those of the corresponding months of last year.

The penny banks, just as with larger banking institutions, have their vacations in summer time. For example, during last fall, it was noted that withdrawals were so great that there was an increase in withdrawals over the deposits of $2,000. During the winter necessitating the buying of summer clothing for children, and coal, also, due to unemployment, recourse was had to the savings in the penny banks. Now that spring is coming on, the deposits are increasing and it is expected that the total will be greatly augmented during the months of April, May and June.

WORLD PEACE DAY IS HERALDED BY GALSWORTHY

NEW YORK, April 14.—John Galsworthy, English novelist and playwright, urged an international holiday, like Armistice Day, to commemorate the Kellogg-Briand pact and remind the nations annually that they have renounced war.

Addressing the League for Political Education at Town Hall, on "Literature and Life", he said that the need for the love of beauty and proportion in life is fundamental to the question of peace.

"That this should be a 'question' is a farce to one loving beauty and proportion for its own sake. The question is to favor the continuance of civilization, for that is what it is coming to. With the destruction of beauty comes, explosives and poison gases in recent years, iron men, women and children of any country partaking in a future war were destined to be cooked like rats into a drainpipe. There will be no chivalry, no honor or glory in a future war; no distinction of age or sex, between the able or healthy will be shown. There will be no immunity for culture. There will be nothing but flight, terror, starvation, raining death and desolation.

"The same spirit which indulges in war will become a shadow of its former self and slink about in the dark ages of the past. This is no cry of alarm, but common sense.

Wants President to Act

"There should be a day consecrated to the Kellogg or Paris pact, a day to be observed in every country of the world. It should be a holiday for your President, who has the cause of peace at heart, that he should put this on the governments of the world.

"Let us have a holiday annually that we have renounced war."

Galsworthy's address, as some did before 1914, that to believe in the need for peace was to be considered somewhat of a freak. In 1931, not to believe in peace is to be a traitor to the village idiot.

In defining literature Mr. Galsworthy said: "A work to be literature with a large 'L' must have genuine individuality; must be saying unlike what has gone before." He compared literature to the sections of a silver-ruling snake, with each vertebra visibly distinct from the next, yet organically joined to what has gone before.

Addressing the Dipsodocus, a dinosaur, as an illustration, Literature he called, "a kind of Dipsodocus with a huge carcass, a tail you can never get to the end of when there's a start, from some lucky one of us, pictures checked in words, and literature of memory.

Finds Good Writers Plentiful

He declared that there are any number of good young writers in England and America today, and that the question was "not one of talent or technical accomplishment, but of keeping one's head and hanging on one's heart that it may be kept expressed and not being led off by the desire to shock, or mere pattern worship.

"To the question, 'To what end do we put our art?' he said, 'the answer is, 'for the greater grace and dignity of man.'"

The danger of this age of the machine is standardization, said one of remaining ignorant, but of losing the power of expression, declaring he held to be the best corrective for the standardization and short-cut tendencies of this age. He also helps people out of one's self, which is the only way to grow, and, he said, the key to happiness.

Hugh Walpole presented an amusing catalogue of the trials of an author, including the opportunities of "people who wish to sell cigarettes, fountain pens and other commodities in which cannot be sold without the lyrical praise of a successful writer." He said that in Russia, where the prohibition here he had once received a check for $1,500 for 100 words in praise of ginger ale.

FIRST NIGHTERS IN LARGE NUMBERS ENJOY "THE SQUEALER" AT CAPITOL

Last night a capacity house laughed and cheered and applauded at the Capitol Theatre. The 'big picture' as first feature in the vaudeo-film combination all the ingredients necessary to make a photoplay of more than average entertainment. The picture, "The Squealer", in the first place, has an exceptionally strong cast consisting of Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier, Robert E. Ross Sterling and Lucien Moore, all popular stars with Bellevue motion picture fans.

Secondly, the story is comprehensive, and has that very valuable gift of holding the interest to the end, and the end certainly comes as a surprise, as could be detected by the audible murmur of the audience last night. In these days of the underworld racket, of bootleggers, particularly in the States, many wave of grittings of traitors to the "cause" have been exposed through the press and on the screen, but in "The Squealer" a supreme effort is made to show a human King Jack Holt and a squealer besetching mercy. The squealer betrays the governor's office and he is accosted by a peanut vendor. This industrious gentleman is a typical guy who in turn "lips off" a truck driver, and the conversation between the "scrapping mothers" piles 'which hit the spot' in no little degree. It is a real Cockney gunner, and the gun goes off, but never mind that.

The rum king returns home to his wife and little daughter, played by Dorothy Revier and Davey Lee respectively, but on the eve of his intended vacation receives a letter from a henchman, which necessitates that he stay in the city and protect a friend. They both leave the country and the wife, who is a drug fiend, the king is convicted and sentenced to penitentiary for ten years. He contrives to escape by planning a riot in the prison. His plans succeed and he is free—to seek the Squealer—the person who betrayed him. The prison scenes are very impressive and the riot an ultimate success, but the scene which is to what amounts a human is estimated

"The Squealer" should be seen by all, for it features a human theme and a portrayed mother love, of the influence of a child and of the hate and enmity of man. All these qualities are embraced in this picture of New York's underworld.

In striking contrast to the "heartache stories" are the comedy, in their laughable situations. The comedy, "Hollywood Nuts", a mixture of parlor vaus, frog's legs, snails and something else, will put a grin on the face much to the painful surprise of their neighbors. Another interesting number is one of those clever Aesop Film Fable cartoons is as amusing as usual with Felix Headache" and Felix Rabbit. shows how Hector made the grade of twenty-two dollars a week per fortnight nineteen times in three days! The programme continues until to morrow.

A PROBLEM FOR SOLOMON

Superior Court Judge Lester W.Roth of the United States was confronted with a knotty problem of a father asking the courts to prevent his son from becoming an ungainly giant, and a mother who doesn't care how large her son grows as long as he remains healthy and bright. The youth is Adolphe Edward Roome, Jr., who is only 14 years old, weighs 235 pounds, is 6 feet 2 inches tall and is under in court as an adult as over six feet tall. He is shown with his father, who appeared to fight the latter's request that science be invoked to prohibit further growth of the youth.

Advice to the Lovelorn

He Doesn't See Her Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man for over a year and I have to listen about five different club meetings a month. My boy friend usually meets me, but sometimes he doesn't. It is always after eleven when these meetings end; when he doesn't meet me he gives me taxi fare. All my other girl friends have their boy friends meeting them and, on the night mine doesn't come, it makes me feel as though their friends are more thoughtful than mine. What kind of a man is he—to let me come home either via taxi or with my friends? When they bring me home it is out of their way. Do you think he just hates to do me favors or, that he is just in love with love and not me? He says it is more convenient when I come home in a taxi and don't have to bother him. It isn't because he is busy; it's just because he likes to sleep. I see him about three or four times a week. Please tell me do I expect too much ,or is he just thoughtless.

BROWNIE.

I'm sorry you had to write me twice (I got your first inquiry) but letters for this column have to be made up some time in advance and the answers cannot appear immediately, much as I should like to be accommodating. I can understand your embarrassment at the dereliction of the boy friend. When a girl is engaged to a young man, as a rule he is only too eager to escort her home—and I must say that handing out taxi fare to one's fiances is a new one to me. A young man who prefers an early nap to seeing that his girl gets home safely and comfortably doesn't look very promising as husband material, unless you take him in hand and reform him.

The Tin Wedding

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Am I to understand that "tin" stands for a tenth anniversary? I being married ten years this month, will appreciate it if you will publish in your column as soon as possible just what sort of dishes, food, sweets and cake should be used. Would silver flatware be appropriate?

ANXIOUS.

Yes, tin is used to celebrate the tenth wedding anniversary. Some people to carry out the idea use tin plates and kitchen silverware. Your hardware store and I am sure you will see many little inexpensive things in shining new tinware that would make your table attractive. As to the refreshments it would suggest a simple supper; say, sandwiches, coffee home-made cake and ice-cream. Congratulations on the first ten.

"THESE HARD TIMES"

The hard times and scarcity of money makes it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of faded or out-of-style dresses, coats, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing, or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They are the most economical since by following the clear, simple directions they never fail to produce results that make you proud. Why, things look better than new when redyed with Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They are so simple and evenly, when in the hands of even a ten year old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the place of, or dull or leave it limp as some dyes do. They deserve to be

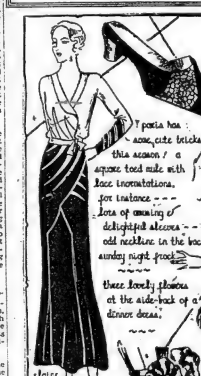
Fashion Fancies

By Alice Alden

Bows make their bow on Spring frocks. A dress of black crepe has triple sleeve flounces of white crepe Elizabeth embroidered in red dots. There is a similar yoke which is further trimmed at the centre with a large red velvet bow that matches the red in the yoke.



A real affinity is to be found between the frock and the jacket for where one is found so is the other. A frock of plaided woolen in black, yellow, brown and white has a short jacket of brown exactly matching the brown in the plaid. The material is a rough woolen and the jacket is trimmed with brown buttons placed below and above the belt.

The foschia has a future in the evening mode. A new and lovely evening frock is made of two layers of chiffon and there is a surplice bodice. A large cluster of fuschias hangs from the waistline.

Long for the spring coat is good for travel, country and informal town wear. Such a model is one of brown and white fancy tweed with a self scarf lined with yellow and bound with brown, matching in tone the color of the material. There are wide pockets and a side fastening attractively marked by brown amber buttons set in silver.

LADIES' WEAR STORE

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers:

The more suits the merrier ,this season. You can have half a dozen with no duplication in mood or manner and slight chance of boredom. Paris endorsed them heartily at the recently concluded showings, confirming early impressions that suits would be decidedly in the limelight this spring.

Points to consider if you want to be particularly 1931, are wrapped-over effects closing at the side and asymmetrical collar treatments, or no collar at all—perhaps there is a scarf or the blouse collar is pulled out over the suit. And shortened sleeves—elbow length, three quarter length seven-eighth length. This development, incidentally, not only promises longer gloves a successful season but is causing a lot of talk about reviving daytime bracelets in a big way.

Plunging right into the color question, curiosity is keen about the current excitement over brown. Harper brown pop up as an important spring color in the millinery world, it would be to see navy blue, traditionally associated with this season, pushed for 1st—just isn't done. There is a good deal of discussion all the same, and, what's more, it is reported that manufacturers' orders on browns have taken quite a jump since the openings

Fabrics in street as well as sports suits this season have a strong leaning to the pebbly surfaced material. Monotone tweeds, crepey woolen and dull, smooth-surfaced fabrics are all important in their especial niches. And various men's wear materials are approved. Flannel is preparing for a vogue. Serge is making a reentry into the mode, some timidly perhaps, at the moment, but definitely enough so that there is a possibility of seeing it eventually quite well established.

Then there are loads of grand limited things about, casual in a knowing way and awfully smart. Knitted costumes seem to get better all the time, and they are especially effective this spring in combination with other sets of the mode.

While the fur-trimmed suit has fashion importance ,the furless suit is receiving much attention. The classic tweed fur is emphasized again by leading houses, but in all of them you will also find quantities of agreeable little short-jacket suits, frequently with attached scarfs and blouses of their own.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

NURSERY SUPPERS

BY

Barbara B. Brooks

All day long these gangsters of the tiny world have played—first in the nursery, tugging at scooters and pulling wooden blocks into miniature cut-aids—then in the sunshine, outdoors, chasing Rover, the family puppy and pulling twigs off mother's best bushes. How much energy they expend during the day! It's no wonder that supper time is their chief delight and that soon after the little ones are fed the sandman will come.

The wise mother knows that the place for suppers for the child is in the nursery—not as the grown-ups with the grown-ups. The evening meal of a child should be simple, easily digested and eaten in an atmosphere of peace and quiet. The dinner table of adults holds many alcoholic morsels which may excite the child and disturb his rest during the night. There is always food which is forbidden and there are times when who feel it their duty to pay lots of attention to the younger generation. Nursery suppers are much better.

Foods which may appear in the nursery supper menus are:

1. Cereals—cooked with fruit and milk.
2. Soups —creamed or plain.
3. Sandwiches—whole wheat bread with simple fillings.
4. Simple deserts—fruit, custards, cookies.
5.—Milk or cocoa.

They certainly are a boon to busy mothers. They are always on hand and ready to serve. Children love their crispness and they provide a way of adding milk to the meal.

The following dishes may be incorporated easily on such menus.

Custard

4 cups scalded milk
4 eggs
1-2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-2 cup sugar.

To be beautifully dressed a woman has to put something into her clothes besides flesh and bones that something is grace. Many a woman who has a reputation for sartorial glory never dresses that are one bit more lovelier than this next ones; she simply knows how to do it, how to stand, how to walk. Usually women of this type are in tiptop physical condition. The condition reflects upon the mind. Feeling fine makes them take their backbones, hold up their chests, display snap and spirit.

If the complexion balks against soap and water, there is only one thing to do to find out what it wants and give it plenty. Usually a thin cream will prove agreeable, especially if a meal is substituted for soap, and a light powder is used. In some cases, a cosmetic jelly makes the rebellious skin calm down and behave. They are offered by cosmetic chemists in packages with a small quantity of boiling water and two teaspoonfuls of peroxide. Apply the paste to the roots of the hair with a brush, when the hair is dry and in need of the shampoo. Let remain on seven minutes, remove with warm soap suds and rinse well.

A bunion is caused by the big toe being pushed inward against the other toes. When inflammation sets up, the twinging digit should have immediate medical attention. Many women's shoes less full of feet than they have been in the past—women are wearing larger shoes—fewer bunions are afflicted with these torturing foot troubles.

When posing for a photograph, do not rouge the cheeks. Touch the lashes with mascara, outline the lips lightly with a rouge stone. Only the faintest film of powder is necessary. Rouged cheeks look thin and sallow in photograph. Sometimes worse than that.

LEAFS TO OPEN NEXT TUESDAY

New York Giant May Turn Pruett Over to Toronto

Jersey City, April 14—Although Manager Orville Jorgens planned to build a pennant contender for the Maple Leafs here yesterday, it had to be called off owing to the fact that the Jersey City team had arranged to play an exhibition game with an local semi-pro outfit. The Leafs arrived here during the noon-hour and idled for the balance of the day. However, they will be out at the ball park Tuesday morning putting in their last practice session prior to the season's opening on Wednesday.

Manager O'Neill and a number of the players watched the Skeeters ink their exhibition fixture this afternoon. Like the Leafs, the Jersey City team is badly in need of pitchers at present and has failed to obtain any help from major league clubs.

The Leafs are believed to be in line to obtain a couple of hurlers from the Brooklyn Robins. Both are former class AA pitchers, and when Vice-President James Dunn of the Toronto club arrives here tomorrow morning negotiations will likely be conducted with the Brooklyn management in an effort to get these pitchers as soon as possible.

The New York Giants are also said to be ready to turn over Pitcher Rub Pruett to the Toronto club, but Pruett cannot report until the middle of May. Whether he will be obtained or not will be decided when Mr. Dunn arrives here. Pruett went to the Giants from Newark two seasons ago.

Everything is all set here for Wednesday's opening game. Art Smith will likely be the Leafs' pitching selection, although manager O'Neill was not positive about this tonight. After watching the Skeeters today, he stated that there was a possibility that he might start Al Sutkeiger, the young southpaw Buddenger has shown more stuff than any of the shown more stuff than any of the Toronto pitcher today, and O'Neill believes he is the best southpaw, although Buddenger has not yet pitched a full winning game.

Tomorrow afternoon most of the Leafs will attend the Associated Press golf game opening at the Yankee Stadium, following which session the Leafs will resume their training grind. The weather is forecast for tomorrow morning. Free seats, and indifferent to the cold, a large crowd taking in the International League curtain-raiser here on Wednesday.

HOME RUN RECORD LIKELY TO STAND

But Another Duel Between Ruth and Wilson is Probable

New York, April 14—The home run duel between Jack Wilson of the Chicago Cubs, and Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees, promises to furnish one of the most interesting sidelights of the 1931 major league pennant races.

Until last season Ruth dominated the league in the number of home runs hit each season. He established an all-time home run record in 1927 when he knocked out 60 circuit blows.

In 1930 Wilson won long-distance hitting honors when he knocked out 'em all to an average of seven over the number made by Babe Ruth.

With a new regulation ball to be used, it is unlikely that either Wilson or Wilson will approach the record mark this year.

Other players who are expected to give Wilson and Ruth a run to main their slugging honors are Chuck Klein, of the Phillies; Babe Herman, of Brooklyn; Hack Wilson, of the Chicago Cubs; Wally Berger, of the Boston Braves; Lon Goslin, of the Louis Browns; Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, and Al Simmons and Jimmie Foxz, of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Sacrifice Fly Goes

New York, April 14—Although many regulations were revised and the number of games reduced from 168 to 71, only one of the rule changes made by the Baseball Rules Committee since the 1930 season is expected to affect the game to any appreciable ing in major league play this season.

The rule is the one eliminating the sacrifice fly. Under the new code, a player is credited with a sacrifice only when he bunts a ball that enables a runner to advance a base.

Previously batters were credited with a sacrifice fly and not charged with a time at bat when they hit a fly that enabled a runner to advance a base.

Because of the new rule, batting averge are expected to be materially lowered.

The New Baseball

New York, April 4—The new baseball which experts believe will be an aid to the pitchers rather than to the hitters, will receive its first major league test tomorrow.

The baseball which the National League will use this year has a softer and thicker cover than the one used in 1929 and 1930, the latest statistics. The American League baseball will be the same as last year except the stitches have been changed.

The raised stitches are expected to be a big aid to pitchers. As it will enable them to get a better grip on the ball and control their curves, their curves, drops and other deceptive liveries.

The consensus of the experts is that the new ball will be more considerably because of the larger seams.

To reach an ice-bound light station in Wisconsin, keepers recently had to travel 30 miles by dog team. The trip

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

With the opening of the "big" leagues today the eyes of the sport world turn to baseball.

Locally it seems that the public is assured of baseball for 1931.

The Central League meeting of Saturday last assured the district of a bright future for the summer pastime.

"Shiner" Johnson of Peterboro was in attendance and informed the meeting that the "Petes" would have their initial work-out on Saturday next.

Manager Murray of Kingston told the meeting that the Ponies were ready to take the field as soon as weather permitted.

As for the "locals", the management are waiting and biding their time until after the Intermediate league meeting on Wednesday night.

It is hoped that locals can pick up a short-stop out of the material reported in town. The rest of the club seems to be in A1 condition.

The O.B.A.A. practically assured the winner of the senior series a trip to the Olympic games in Los Angeles in 1932. However, that matter will come in for more discussion later, as it would be an expensive trip. But it's something for the Central League to shoot at.—Peterboro Examiner.

Pitcher Johnny Prudhomme of the St. Paul Saints believes he is going to have a great year in the American Association, thanks to the tutoring of Manager Marty Leonard, who is developing Prudhomme's curve ball. Johnny, who went to Detroit in 1928, along with Dale Alexander in the deal that enriched the Toronto club by $100,000, boasts a good fast ball, but batters have been taking picks on his No. 2 and running his pitching record. With an improved hook, Prudhomme is confident of turning in a full share of wins for the Saints.

Steve O'Neill expects to obtain pitching help from the majors before opening day. He will have to hurry. The work of three of his recruits at Columbus yesterday once again established proof that Stephen Francis needs the help, and needs it badly.

Pete Cote, erstwhile Leaf, has been batting well for the Bisons in practice fixtures. He had three clean blows against Indianapolis on Saturday. Pete is likely to have a big year with the Bisons.

Sam Gibson, former Leaf, hurled his second straight victory of the season as San Francisco defeated Portland, 8-2, in the second half of a double-header on Sunday. Gibson kept 15 hits well scattered.

Paul Page, another ex-Leaf, broke away to a good start. He pitched a 5 to 2 victory for Seattle, holding the Angels to six hits.

Wes Farrell, the Cleveland pitching ace, and Ted Lyons, mainspring of the Chicago White Sox staff, are being especially groomed for a pitching duel today, opening day, in Cleveland, according to word from the camps of the two teams. Their appearance as rivals in a long expected meeting on the baseball diamond is a delectable opening day dish for the Cleveland fans.

It was announced some time ago that Gene Dessaules, former Holy Cross catcher, had been released by Detroit to the Toronto club, but apparently the deal has fallen through. There is no official confirmation of the transaction. At any rate, Dessaules will not be with the Leafs this season but instead will do his back-stopping for the Columbus American Association club.

NON-RESIDENTS MAKE PROTEST

See No Need of Water Metres on Bridge Street, Thurlow

Thurlow residents along the extension of Bridge Street east, have raised a petition in order to have to install water meters claiming that they as non-residents paid the cost of the laying of the main and pay five dollars a quarter for the service. The matter was left over Monday and they see no reason why a meter is necessary as they say they do not use more water than they pay for, and they want none.

They point out that five new houses have been built on the street and bring in a total of one hundred dollars a year to the department.

When they entered into the contract with the city there was no mention made of the need of water metres.

Those signing the petition are Lewis Miles, Edward Sherry, Mrs. E. Sherry, Mrs. A. Irvine and William C. Belsey.

The communication was referred by the city council last evening to the waterworks committee.

MACKS HOLD KEY TO PENNANT RACE

Should Repeat 1930 Success if Earnshaw and Grove Retain Form

CHICAGO, April 14.—American League baseball fans in 1931 baseball wars today with renewed but rather doubtful hopes of a tighter pennant race.

Most of the experts, accustomed to seeing the Athletics have a perennial top-heavy pennant race for the past few years, have begun to finish their romp for Connie Mack and his Philadelphia Athletics a mile in the lead. The interesting crowding by Washington, New York and Cleveland is overlooked. The club owners, however, join their managers in predicting the closest race in years, with no team to finish in first as well as second division.

Athletics Hold Key

A careful sifting of claims and predictions indicates the big get-away Athletics is built by the pitching staff. If "Lefty" Grove and big George Earnshaw are as good as they were last year, the A's probably will repeat no matter what the reserves lack. Either of Mack's two left-handed pitching aces experience a poor season and every pitcher seems come through in big style, the whole race may be turned upside down.

Rookie May Surprise

Waiting and watching, the public are who helped Grove and Earnshaw last season, haven't looked with favor on Al Simmons, Jimmie McDonald, husky 20-year-old pitcher purchased from Milwaukee of the American Association League, has caused many a smile to appear on the faces of fans. If McDonald comes through and Grove and Earnshaw are in form, the A's with their terrific batting punch simply will repeat.

Walter Johnson and his Washington Senators and the New York Yankees, piloted by Joe McCarthy, who lifted the Cubs out of baseball's wilderness in the National League, are the two clubs which are expected to give the Philadelphian aggregation of the Athletics if any team does it. Of the two, the Senators have the greatest chance of excellent pitching, a timely attack, a fighting spirit and the spirit that moulds championship teams. The Yankees still possess a great pitching staff, but are contenders although their pitching is of a questionable class. Given good pitching, the Yanks probably would extend Ruth and Gehrig, but they don't appear to have them.

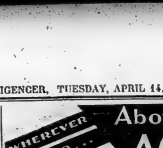
These Teams Strengthened

Detroit, Chicago, Boston and St. Louis all have been strengthened during the Winter and Spring shopping tours. Detroit and Chicago both startle the league by winning the pennant. Or the Cubs and White Sox appear to be the most improved aggregations, but the Cleveland Indians, given their ability on defence.



Detroit has a good attack and a fair defence but pitching worries Manager Harris. Boston, St. Louis have pitching and fielding but light hitters, a trouble likewise afflicting the Boston Red Sox and Washington, both of which finished last year.

Two new clubs have been added to league for the thirty-second season, the Brooklyn Robins and the Boston Bees and McCarthy of the Yankees.

Pop, for the first time since his existence, the league will open a campaign without a presidential successor of Ernest S. Barnard's sudden death last month.

PRESTON TEAM HONOURED

Preston, April 14.—The Riverbrinks, Preston's intermediate O.H.A. championship hockey club, were honored at a banquet last night when they were tendered a banquet in recognition of their splendid season's work. Each member of the club was presented with a gold watch by Manager Herb Pach and Treasurer Harry Strachan were made appropriate gifts. The team, which emerged from the O.H.A. intermediate a successful season in the big

SAFE AFTER SIX DAYS ADRIFT

Taken from the deck of the S.S. Canadian which rescued him, this photo shows Chief Naval Aviation Pilot Verne W. Harshman, in his rubber boat, in which he had floated about the Ocean for six days. During fleet manoeuvres off Panama Harshman was forced to drop his plane on the water owing to fuel shortage. The craft turned over and the flier had to take to his rubber boat. His rescue is regarded as something of a miracle.

On the Sport Trail

It certainly was assuring to notice the enthusiasm exhibited at the informal meeting of the C.O.R.L. moguls on Saturday. Of course Belleville was already ready to enter the fray but Picterboro even with the announcement that a team would be placed in the league did not bring forth many cheers but when they sent a delegate, who was ready to talk business, matters looked to be considerably. The Lift Lock crew are ready to enter a team, all their games to be played at Exhibition Park, while Kingston is waiting to see what will happen in the Limestone City. The team expected material help and when the league convenes to draft a schedule and elect officers Mr. Bert Kingston delegates will be on hand. The league meeting should be held on April 23th and it is expected that everything will be lined up by that time. A 'drafted schedule is read to be presented with Belleville of course opening at home on May 24th as has been the custom ever since the league was inaugated.

For a time it looked as if the game would go the way it danced and this would have been a calamity. Good fellows have stood behind this project for years and it would be too bad to see the entire effort wrecked. Everyone plays a big part in the handling of a ball club and the residence rule of January 1st also brings in a handicap in this section of the Province, where work is not as plentiful as it is in the western section due to the large industries which are situated in that part. If May 1st was the residence rule for Eastern Ontario towns it would be a great handicap in this section. The distance between Belleville and cities in Eastern Ontario are long, while in Western Ontario, the towns can be made in an hour's time and the players do not have to remain lost time. The same willing hander are ready to carry the torch for another year and if this can be accomplished then baseball will survive the ordeal in this section. If those behind the project are willing to sacrifice, it is up to the fans to support their team to the hilt. It is rumoured that all teams in the loop will be strong and all the management needs is a little encouragement and the team will do the rest.

Belleville can enter the league with one of the best lineups in their history and that is saying plenty, when one remembers the many fine teams that have graced on. There are some, who are with the team, when the first game was played in 1919 and there is still a number of good players left in the system. This is particularly true of "Frenzy" Hall, the heavier Harry and Vern Weir, "Feeney" is regarded as the best amateur catcher in the Province, while Harry cavorts around the first base cabin with the best of them. Vern Weir plays the keystone sack like a veteran. Among these three the team will be built. Bob Carroll is slated for third base duty while a shortstop of class will be on hand to round out the infield. All of the outfield material, Darrah, Cretsery, Fraser and Jack Weir are available with many more to look over. If "Hoot" Gibson enters the field along with Tommy Poitier, Walter Gerow will not be the only pitcher on the mound as he will have Alex Weir in full fast form, while Art Darrah could be the team into the finals last year. If Darrah is not good year from a baseball Standpoint.

With the resumption of Spring football practice at Notre Dame University today, the name of the successor to the late Knute Rockne as coach of the eleven was revealed.

Immediately after the death of Rockne, 220 candidates for the squad of next Fall, the Rev. Father John O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame, announced that Hunk Anderson, star lineman under Rockne, would serve as coach for next season, with Jack Chevigny line of Rockne's back field aces of a few years ago, as his assistant.

"There will never be a head coach but Rockne at Notre Dame," Father O'Donnell told the members of the squad. Anderson will be in charge, but he will be the senior coach, and Jack Chevigny, the assistant coach. Rockne cannot be displaced as head coach, Father O'Donnell said.

"The eyes of the football world are on Notre Dame. It is useless to know what Notre Dame will do without Rockne. We must carry on. Father O'Donnell declared.

CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

FAVOR CARDINALS TO TAKE NATIONAL

But Other Teams Strengthened and Tight Battle for Flag Expected

New York, April 14—Another close race in the National Baseball League with at least four or five clubs in the running—that is the "dope" going the rounds today the opening of the 1931 season. Optimism is the rule in baseball league and few clubs are willing to admit they won't be close to the top in September.

The St. Louis Cardinals are generally favored to repeat their triumph but only after the hardest kind of struggle from Chicago Cubs, New York Giants, Pittsburg Pirates and Brooklyn Robins. The consensus of expert opinion has picked the five leaders to finish in that order, with Boston, Philadelphia and Cincinnati bringing up in the rear.

Cards Without Safey

While all the clubs have added new playing talent in preparation for another tight race, the Cardinals for the most part, are standing pat on their 1930 line-up. Chic Hafey, however, remains a holdout, and Jimmie Orsatti has been given his place in left field. The veteran St. Louis mound staff has been augmented by two promising recruits, Burleigh Grimes and Paul Derringer.

With Rogers Hornsby, now manager, back in condition, the Chicago Cubs are brimming over with confidence. Hornsby has made no changes in last-year's regular line-up, but has acquired a lot of good reserve talent and experienced players.

Brooklyn's Robins plugged a few holes by trading some of their spare parts to the Phillies for Fresco Thompson, a steady second baseman and Frank O'Doul, hard-hitting outfielder, and also are highly optimistic. The New York Giants are counting on young Johnny Vergez to take care of third base, while Freddy Lindstrom plays right field. Like most of his rival managers, John McGraw could use another good pitcher or two, but Harold Schumacher and Carl Hubbell Berly may fill the bill.

The Pittsburg Pirates, handicapped by injuries last season, appear rated as a fifth National League contender. With Big Traynor and Lloyd Waner back in shape, the Pirates should be much stronger. Manny Trevenow, ex-Phillie, at shortstop may help.

Braves' Newcomers

Boston's chances seem to depend upon how their newly acquired minor league sluggers fare. Manager Bill McKechnie has a fine outfield in his regular line-up. Wesley Schulmerich and Ed Wellington, and Zelders: Earl Sheely at first base, Red Charley Wilson at third. The Phillies are counting on improved pitching to put them into the race. They traded several good men for pitchers and will start with Russ Ely and Mal Lee in the outfield; Dick Bartell at short and Leslie Mallon at second. Their new moundsmen include Clise Dudley and Jim Elliott from Brooklyn, and Ehrett Bolen from Baltimore.

Jack Hawley's Cincinnati Reds still are in the process of rebuilding and have few hopes of climbing high in the standing. Ed Rousch, former Giant holdout, and Nick Cullop may provide some badly needed punch at the plate.

An efficacious household remedy—Dodds' Kayptian Lozenges. Brings immediate relief to lame back and muscular rheumatism. Also relieves inflammation, burns, sores, corns and warts.

TWO HELD AFTER BURNING OF BARN

Sarnia, April 14.—Provincial officers yesterday arrested John Howler, 28, and Harvey Gallaghan, 18, of Warwick township, in connection with a fire, which, on Sunday, destroyed the barn of William Hall, on 21 Sideroad, Warwick, with a loss of $1,500. They are charged with arson. It is alleged that they were dropping cigarettes in the barn prior to the fire.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Well, opinions seem to differ on the subject of the reception last night, two west hill fans disagree one set behaved perfectly and the other badly, behaved and the east hill fans haven't much to say. We take it from that that everything was serene on that side of the camp. However we may be wrong.

On April 22 the first baseball game of the National League will be played in the Polo Grounds at 2 p.m. and Ted Husing will be at the Mike to relay the excitement to us. The Boston Braves are facing the Giants and should mean plenty of fun. Also on the subject of baseball Rack Wilson, some fun blog, will be heard with Richy Craig, Jr., tonight at 10.15 and over the Columbia network.

Tuesday night's always a good night on the air so let's look around for our evening's entertainment. Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit at 8 Eastern and Gene Saunders and Night Hawks take the stand for half an hour's peppy music beginning at 8.30.

The happy "Bakers" are back again at 9.30 also over WEAF and then it's the boys of R. A. Rolf's orchestra will be heard at 10 and they promise us a real entertainment with lots of ouvrites tonight. Tune in on this program, it's entertainment supreme. Blues as long as they have the air.

Listen to this as it flit from WEAF, Vivian Pecaras, Aida Jarvinovsky and Joseph Dunninger." That's the way it's billed for 9.45 with the the interview. At 11.15 Ota Gygi in Crane Wilbur's "Haunted Violin" and at 11.30 Ben Bernie and the boys, Jack Albin's orchestra at midnight.

Gus Van at 7.15 from WJZ, the song and dialogue man and a la Paul Whiteman's Paint Men. They add introduction to the radio age. Clarence Landt Trio and White at 8.30 and the Wiedies program at 9, same station. Morton Downey will be heard on the Paramount-Public hour at 10.30 over the Columbia WABC at 10.30. Luigi Rominelli at 11.30.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

"This is slovenly—keep it neat or I shall have to report you," he snapped.

"You needn't bother, I'll tell Mr. Thornton what you said," I answered.

Then I gave him my sweetest smile.

He stared for a moment and then walked away. He was back in another minute.

"There is no need to do that, Miss Mason—no need to bother Mr. Thornton with such petty things."

"Then keep away from him because you are about the pettiest thing I could name if I tried to think hard for seven years."

Again I smiled at him.

He leaned over and scowled at me.

"I'll go above Thornton," he growled.

"I'll tell him you said so."

Once more the smile.

He hurried away but was waiting for me when I got to the sidewalk. I tried to pass him but he stopped me.

"Isn't there any way I can apologize, Miss Mason?"

"Any way you wish. If you hadn't called me down about the floor back counter I would never have remembered that you existed."

"Can we be friends?"

"We don't have to be enemies, let's let it go at that, Mr. Austin," I said. REFUSED HIS HAND

He smiled and extended his hand but I looked him pricefully not to see it.

Dolly Hopkins caught up with me and took my arm. This was a surprise. Dolly had charge of the very expensive perfume just below the main counter. She was always dressed beautifully and expensively and she had seemed terribly snooty.

I had envied her her clothes and jewelry but never tried to be chummy with her.

"Kitty, you were an awful fool Saturday night," she said.

"Why, what do you know about—about——that?" I stammered.

"I was there with my sugar daddy. You are too darn good looking to waste your time on cheap floor-walkers. You can pick the rich ones any time."

"I don't go out much." I protested.

"That's your own fault. I'll have to find a nice sugar daddy for you and show you what it is to go out with real sports. You, with that gorgeous hair of yours, and me, with my jet black mop, would make a swell pair, regular folks."

"I suppose so. If I only knew any nice men like that—decent ones you know what I mean."

"Sure, sure—leave it to me, got to go now," Dolly cried.

I thought she was going down into the subway with me but instead I saw a man on one of the nicest cars at the curb and help Dolly in. Dolly waved at me and smiled. The man lifted his hat. He was about forty, he looked like a swell. He said something to the chauffeur, looked back at me and waved his hand and I could see that he was asking Dolly about me.

Dolly came along in time to see Dolly get into the car.

"So that explains Miss Snooty's swell accent and fussy jewelry," Molly said.

KITTY DEFENDS HERSELF

"Oh, she isn't snooty, she's really lovely, Molly. Believe you me, if she can get me a sugar daddy like that one I won't cry my eyes out!"

"Help!" Molly cried. "did she promise you a sugar daddy?"

"Why, yes, in a sort of way."

"Oh for the love of frankfurters, rinse me in," she begged.

I laughed at her but ended no promise. I thought pretty Dolly Hopkins really meant what she said.

Dolly was very friendly with me after that and a few days later at lunch-can she said, "Kit, get yourself a dress of that new shade of blue—with your hair and eyes you'll be a knock-out. Go ahead and I'll ring you in on a party."

"All right," I promised.

I had been planning on something entirely different for a new dress but I took her advice. My sister Cora had a natural gift for making little dresses. She could copy anything. And so she made the dress for me and I saved enough money for slippers and hose to match.

"I've got the dress," I told Dolly, when it was finished.

To my surprise she came home with me and made me put it on.

"My brother's giving a fine wedding anniversary party next Saturday, Kit—you must come along," she said.

I promised.

When Dolly had gone Cora remarked that it was nice to make such friends in the store, and especially nice to have them invite me to a family party like that.

It was delighted. According to instructions I got to Dolly's home about 10 o'clock. I thought it was rather late, but, of course, what do I say any thing.

ANOTHER SURPRISE

To my surprise it was a beautiful little apartment, with uniformed doorman, elevator men and the like.

My second surprise was when I met in and Dolly. Dolly dear," I cried. "what happened? Is your brother's anniversary party all off?"

Dolly began to laugh.

"Oh, you poor, dear, dull child," she cried, "didn't you know that was all bunk? I said that to your folks wouldn't object to your going out."

"But—but, what is it, then?"

She led me to a mirror and stood beside me. Her gown was corn yellow, and with her black hair she looked gorgeous.

"Didn't I tell you—don't we make a knockout pair?" Dolly cried.

I had to admit it.

"But what's up, Dolly?"

"Mon-on, babe! Bet you wait—"

The bell sounded.

There they are now, and I've got the swellest sugar daddy for you. He's just made of money!"

She ran to the door.

Would this "sugar daddy" be rather handsome, like Dolly?

Would he like my looks and take me about in a swell foreign car as Dolly was taken about?

I heard Dolly's greetings in the little foyer and caught a glimpse of Dolly's friend kissing her.

Then they came into the room and I was introduced to both men.

I recognized instantly as Dolly's friends the handsome man who had met her by the subway one day and taken her away in his wonderful car.

The other man was "Major Boyden."

He wasn't as young as I had hoped but he was rather striking in appearance. There wasn't a wrinkle in his clothes and the wave in his hair though he had been born with it on—just the correct amount for society stars. His hair was slightly gray, his face rather florid but he had a genial smile and a twinkle in his dark eyes.

"Well—well!" he said, looking me over, "I don't believe you were ever out of doors before."

I stared at him, puzzled.

"You had been, I surely would have seen you and promptly kidnapped you!"

A GIRL WHO CAN BLUSH

"Hey!" Mr. Malvern said, explosively. "Here's a girl who can blush!"

Dolly's handsome friend Malvern, head of the big General Utilities Corporation—I forget the name of it.

I did feel my cheeks burn at what the man said.

"You boy, lay off, Kitty is wise to your line," Dolly explained, giving me a little hug.

It was Mr. Malvern who noticed the relationship between Dolly and myself.

"Stand up there together, you two —there, Major—isn't that a picture of perfection?" And Mr. Malvern eyed us as though we were a painting or statuary.

"The Nordic and the Latin—how happy I could be with either," Mr. Malvern sighed.

"Be your age, Forrest, stop this nonsense," Dolly exclaimed hurriedly stepping away from me, "Come on, let's go places and do things!"

"At this hour? It is scarcely supper," Mr. Malvern declared. He went out to the kitchenette and brought in some bottles and glasses.

"Ha! He's right at home, Kitty," Major Boyden whispered to me as he sat down beside me on the divan.

I had noticed that myself. I didn't know what to say to that.

"Nice and cozy here," he went on, putting my head over on his shoulder.

"Isn't it," I agreed.

They laughed at me when I refused to drink.

"I'll fix you one," Mr. Malvern said, "a kindergarten cocktail."

Dolly went out to the kitchenette with him.

Dolly is a pretty kid all right, but it wouldn't swap you for a roomful like her," the major said in a low voice, putting his hand over mine.

"Oh, mmmh—you don't happen to own me, so how could you swap me?"

LIVES IN HOPE

"You know what I mean—and I live in hope."

He patted my hand. I was wondering just what he meant. He had known me fifteen minutes and was already saying he hoped he hoped to own me.

The drink they brought back was pink and sweet and I rather liked it.

It was my first night out on what I thought then was a real party. And it was only a quarter after ten we piled into Mr. Malvern's big car and went to a theatre. To my surprise we went to the stage door. Everyone seemed to know the major. We went around in some way and I saw that we had come into an upper box across the curtain was going up on the last half of the big musical revue.

In one of the scenes where the girls posed in big silver cages and were scarcely anything at all the Major leaned over to me.

"Not a girl there as beautiful as you, my dear," he whispered.

"Don't you get tired of saying that to a different girl every night?" I answered.

"I happen to mean it, Kitty—and let me tell you, that is where you ought to be instead of—was it in a store Dolly said you worked?"

"Yes—and I intend to keep on working there. I wouldn't come out like that—"

He pinched my arm and laughed.

From there we went to a night club one of the exclusive sort that I had read about but never expected to see.

It was fun. I enjoyed the crowd. I had a little champagne. I danced with the Major and also with Mr. Malvern. We had a wonderful dinner and the show there was immense.

"You'll be spoiled," Dolly said to me in the rest room, "don't stare around so. Pretend it bores you."

WANTS TO SEE ME AGAIN

"But I'm crazy about it—why should I pretend?"

"Kitty, you are so simply sweet sometimes—don't let these rich babies think they can entertain us and shut us up with just a night club—make 'em believe the only way they can give us a thrill is with a mo-

THE VICE-REGAL FAMILY

Before they stepped ashore from the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Bedford at Halifax on Saturday April 4th, The Excellencies and their children posed for their first Canadian photograph.

Fellow passengers on the liner said the Vice-regal party took part very democratically in the ordinary shipboard life, His Excellency presiding at the concert in aid of Seamen's Charities and Viscount Duncannon and his 31 year old sister, Lady Moyra, taking their parts on the programme as elocutionist and pianist respectively.

ask for anything? I thought you loved me—I thought you said you wanted me."

"I'll say you are no gold digger—not yet, Kitty, if I wasn't married I'd marry you tomorrow!"

"Well, Major Boyden, I'm not exactly dumb, I understand now, but I guess I was awfully dumb to think you meant anything that was right and decent. I thought it was fun going about and having a gay time —and it was fun, but when you made love to me so nicely I thought—I didn't think you were that kind."

UNITED PRESS WRITERS TELL THEIR STORIES

New York, April 14.—Four correspondents of the United Press from the corners of the earth, happened to be in New York at the same time, met together last night with Mike Jacobus before them and talked about their biggest thrills. He revealed that they have been through, and what life is like in far-away places. Their conversation, under the title "Ten After Thirty," which means after the paper has gone to press, was broadcast over a network of 33 stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Gesford Pins told how, just three weeks ago last night, he dashed down town in Lima, Peru, in a borrowed automobile to watch and report the street battle in which an infantry regiment tried to overthrow the fifth government Peru has had in eight months.

Randall Gould, recently arrived from Shanghai, told of some of his adventures during the Chinese revolution, describing particularly the efforts of a Chinese general in a clean, white uniform, to life Gould's horse from a mud-filled trench into which it had fallen.

Eugene Lyons, United Press correspondent at Moscow for the last three years, had his biggest thrill in getting an exclusive interview with Joseph Stalin, the Soviet dictator, who had persistently denied himself to all foreign reporters, and who turned Lyons cold, to be not so much of an ogre as he had been pictured. As for negotiations, Lyons explained that Soviet Russia exists in a continual state of revolution, inasmuch as the Communists regard themselves as revolting against the world-wide order of things.

Thomas B. Morgan, Rome manager for the United Press, who has been close to the scene of Italy's stirring events for the last 11 years, had the Fascist seizure of government in 1922 to add to the revolution theme. His greatest thrill, however, was not that, nor his experiences with D'Annunzio in Fiume, but the disastrous earthquake of 1930. His thrill was his exclusive personal interview with the Pope, a rare event in history. And the first time in the present Pope ever had granted a newspaperman an interview for publication.

*MAGIC HERMITS

½ cup butter
1½ cups brown sugar
2 eggs
1 cup chopped raisins
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup chopped dates
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups pastry flour
½ teaspoon Magic Baking Powder
½ teaspoon Magic Soda
2 tablespoons milk or water

Mix and sift together the dry ingredients. Cream butter, add sugar and well-beaten eggs and vanilla. Then add one-third of the flour mixture, fruit and nuts. Add more flour and liquid alternately until all are used up. Mix thoroughly. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased shallow pan and bake in moderate oven over 15 to 20 minutes.

18 FEARED DEAD IN CHICAGO BLAZE

Fireman Trapped in Tunnel—Seven Bodies Recovered

Chicago, April 14. (AP)—Fire and smoke in a sanitary district tunnel, 50 feet below the ground, killed at least seven men last night. Eighteen firemen sent down for rescue work were believed by their superiors to be dead. An undetermined number of laborers were missing, and 32 rescue workers and labourers were carried unconscious to hospitals.

Chief John Flinn of the 25th Battalion said 18 firemen of Engine Company No. 23 and Truck Company No. 14 were unreported. He believed them dead.

More than 35 firemen were overcome in the gassy inferno. They could only work a few minutes each though equipped with gas masks.

Back in the incompleted bore, which is nearly two blocks in length a group of laborers—part of the night shift on duty when the fire began—huddled for safety in an air chamber. Whether they were dead or alive was not known.

A policeman hurrying to the scene was struck by an ambulance and killed. A battalion fire chief is among the missing.

The fire broke out in sawdust shavings piled around a bulkhead setting a few feet from the tunnel entrance. It was though to have been started by spontaneous combustion.

A seventh man died a few moments after being brought to the surface. He was believed to be a fireman.

GOOD-BYE?

In the "good old days" when goodbyes were said, it meant tears and long absence. Travelling was slow and communication poor. Today one says "So long! I'll telephone!" The miles mean nothing to Long Distance.

PREMIER MAKES SLASHING CUTS

the estimates would not be down until Wednesday were immediately spoiled when, five minutes later, Mr. Bennett laid the estimates on the table. To the Opposition leader, Hon. Mackenzie King, the Premier indicated his intention of asking Parliament, provided he had its unanimous consent, to vote one-sixth of the total on Wednesday as interim supply. This amount is needed to meet the salaries of the civil service and other pressing obligations. Parliament votes, it subject to debate later.

According to the official summary of the estimates, reductions have been made in 33 out of a total of 42 Government services. The nine increases include a boost of $500,000 for war pensions, making a total of $50,500,000 and a new vote of $600,000 for agricultural fairs and exhibitions. The total for the Department of Trade and Commerce shows an increase of $317,797; but this, it is explained, is due to an appropriation of $2,240,000 for the census.

In reading the ordinary services of the department have been very considerably reduced.

Ottawa, April 14.—Federal Government estimates for public buildings and additions and alterations thereto in Ontario for the fiscal year beginning the first of this month are just about half what they were for the 12 months just ended.

The 1931-32 estimates total $1,379,400, of which 179,000 is being revoted from last year, in comparison to the $2,618,232.90 voted last year.

Estimates for harbors and rivers are similarly cut. In comparison to last year's total of $3,255,456.91, the estimates for this year aggregate $1,462,350, of which $280,450 are being revoted. The public buildings estimates, as tabled this week in the House of Commons by Premier Bennett follow:

MAY VOTE ON "D. S."

daylight saving. He favored the submission of the question to the people, using the provincial voters' list which widens the scope of the vote, taking in many more than the municipal list.

Economic Advantage

Mr. E. V. Ilsley pointed to the economic advantages of daylight saving, particularly from the standpoint of golf links, for it was found that when the larger centres went under daylight saving time this city for two hours a day was unable to make proper business connections. He answered the argument that those who favored daylight saving were those whose hours were short in any event. His reply was that if this was supposed to include bank staffs it might surprise many to learn that they worked from early in the morning until six o'clock or later in the evening. There is no more hard-working class in the community than the banking staffs.

Mr. G. A. G. Weir, chairman of the local clearing house, said that Belleville was sadly out of touch in the daylight saving scheme with the financial centres especially with regard to exchange. Mr. Weir made an appeal on behalf of the younger members of the staff of the banks.

Messrs. W. B. Deacon and E. Worth also spoke. Mr. Worth pointing out that under the municipal list as used for the last vote on the daylight saving measure many personal prevented from voting though they were earning good salaries and spending their money in the city. Under the provincial list the voting would be widened to take in these people who have a right as well as any others to say what time they would like to see followed in the city of Belleville.

Says He Made Mistake

"Will you men help to man the polls if we decide to submit the question?" asked the mayor.

"Yes, that is fine."

Alderman Woodley said if the election had taken place last Winter, the extra cost would only have been the cost of the ballots, but a vote would require an outlay of some $600.00 and he doubted if it would benefit to that extent.

Alderman MacMillan, "Personally I am in favor of daylight saving but I feel the people should have the say so they are the people who are contributing the money. I think we should accept the offer of the delegation and the board they represent to man the polls and have a referendum."

Mayor Reid asked, "Will you get enough men to man the polls?"

Mr. Smith, "Returning officers and clerks, free, yes."

Alderman Woodley brought up the question of rental of polling places. Mr. Holmes, city clerk said that five dollars was paid for each polling booth for schools.

Ex-Alderman Patterson remarked, "We agree to man all the polls, leaving only the cost of the ballots and the poll rentals for the city to meet. Schools could be used."

Alderman Looker asked if the Trades and Labor Council had been sent a copy of the Retail Merchants' resolution and was informed that one had not been sent. He went on to say that the T. and L. council had discussed the question but the cost of submitton of the bylaw to the people was opposed because of expense, though there was division of opinion as to the merits of daylight saving.

Mr. Smith commented, "If the city council takes charge of the cost of the poll rentals and the printing of the ballots, we agree to supply the men for the polls."

Later in the evening the petition of the Retailers was referred to the council.

SCOUT MOTHERS' AUXILIARY CARD PARTY SUCCESS

A year of labor by the Scout Mothers Auxiliary was fittingly brought to a close last night, when a delightful At Home and dance was held in Johnstone's Academy. This Auxiliary has materially helped the different scout troops in the city and are certainly to be commended on their work. The first part of the evening was a euchre, a large number taking part. The play was exceptionally keen for the fine favors offered. At the conclusion of the euchre, Tommy Mason and His Commodores gave a delightful programme of popular music and the guests swayed to and fro in perfect rhythm and the time passed all too quickly. At the midnight hour a buffet luncheon was served the Boy Scouts in their natty uniforms assisting in the serving. Dancing was continued till the early hours. The euchre prize winners were, ladies, Mrs. Mildred Page, Mrs. Geo. Lee, Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Jack Bone and the gents', H. Sabourin, E. Chaplin, Lee Shorey and Clarence Baker. The door prize, a five dollar gold piece was won by Mrs. Clarence Osirom and the lucky number for the quilt that was drawn was held by Mrs. Urias Lumniss. During the evening three spot dances were given, the winners being Mrs. James Lancaster and Lee Shorey, L. Bennett and Max Shorey, also Mr. and Mrs. George Norman. The proceeds of the dance were quite gratifying to the committee and the money will be used for the good work undertaken by the Scout Mothers Auxiliary.

A carved Burmese temple was sold in London recently for only $110.

BLOOMFIELD MAN TOOK HIS OWN LIFE

Roland Morden Named President Picton Softball

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer

Picton, April 13.—Plans are now being made for softball in Picton. At a meeting recently, Norman Hicks was elected President of the County Softball Association while Roland Morden was elected Secretary-Treasurer. Already seven teams have signified their intention of entering league.

Shot Himself

Clayton Horsfield, Bloomfield, committed suicide by shooting himself on Thursday last. No inquest will be held. Mr. Horsfield, it is stated, had been in a melancholy state of mind for some time. He was in his 51st year and leaves his widow.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at his late residence with interment in Cherry Valley Cemetery.

Ice Leaves

The ice went out of the harbor here in the early hours of Friday morning. The ice had been rotting fast and the wind that night caused it to be carried away.

The Children's Shelter has received from Governor Kennedy's Institute a lovely woollen blanket, also a quilt.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Scott of Milford are visiting friends and relatives in Oshawa.

Mrs. Jesse Cole, Milford, and Mrs. Brian Dodds, Toronto, were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lewis, Belleville.

Mr. James Livingstone won the championship of the Picton Checker Club, a banquet was held at the Royal Hotel and Mr. Livingstone presented with the fine trophy. The Club has twenty members and it is expected that there will be many more next week.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

After supper pop was reeding the financial page and I sed, Is it hard to understand, pop?

Well no and yes, that is to say, yes and no pop, sed. Or perhaps I should say, its easy to understand but hard to bleeve, he sed.

Something financial happened a-mung us fellows this afternoon, I sed.

In a big way? pop sed, and I sed, Well, not so very. Do you want to hear about it? I sed.

Well, not if we're both here and on the subject, why not? pop sed, and I sed, Well, in the first place I owed Putts Warner a cent and he asked me for it back.

That was his legal rite, pop sed, and I sed, Yes sir, and I told him that Simply Judge owed me a cent and I couldent pay him till Shorty Gates payed me mine.

The situation resembled a first and second morgage in a grunt way, pop sed, and I sed, Yes sir, and Putts pop sed he was in a fearse hurry for his cent and he kept on tawking about it as if that was the only subjeck he knew anything about, and I sed it write lela fond Shorty Judge and see if he'll give me mine, and Putts sed well O wits Shorty Judge is none of my business, and I sed, Well O wits he's some of mine. And we went and found him and I asked him for my cent and Shorty sed Glasses Magee owed him a cent and he'd half to get it first, and I sed I wasnt responsible for Glasses Magee, and Shorty sed he thought he was, and I sed somebe he had to get his own cent back first, and we all went to look for Glasses Magee ony we couldent find him, so I dont know if anybody owes him a cent or not and anyways we're all still waiting and nobody's got their cent back yet, I sed.

Thats financial all rite, pop sed. If you like to be the presidents of 3 banks youll probebly never get a better lesson in practical financial sense.

And he termed over to the sporting page and I kept on with my homework thinking I'd rather be the president of 3 ice creem and candy places.

Miller's Worm Powders not only make the infantile system comfortable for worms, but by their action on the stomach, liver and bowels they correct acid troubles and expel biliousness and other intestinal disorders that the worms create. Children thrive upon them, and no matter what condition their worm-infested stomachs may be in, they will show improvement as soon as the treatment begins.

OSHAWA RESIDENT DIED OF INJURIES

Oshawa, April 13.—S. Albert Northcott of this city who was severely injured when the car in which he was driving was struck by a Canadian National Railways train at North Oshawa on Wednesday evening, died in the Oshawa General Hospital at 2 o'clock this morning. Mr. Northcott who was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Northcott, was a life-long resident of this district. He was born at Zion 59 years ago. He attended Simcoe Street United Church and was a member of the Phaniels Chapter of the Masonic Lodge, Oshawa. Besides his widow he leaves two daughters, Bertha and Lucy, one son, John, at home, and a brother, George, of Toronto.

A Household Medicine.—They that are acquainted with the stirling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household remedy and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is an inexpensive medicine. So, keep it at hand as the call for it may come most unexpectedly.

Fox Comedy, "Princess and Plumber" Delights Audience

Charles Farrell and Staseen O'Sullivan Enact Title Roles; H. B. Warner Also Featured; Kerrla Directed From Alice Duer Miller's Story

With a picturesque little Balkan principality as its setting and Alice Duer Miller's well known comedy as its theme, "The Princess And The Plumber" introduces two noted players in their first picture together at the Belle Theatre, where this charming film opened yesterday.

Charles Farrell, one of the screen's most popular leading men, and Staseen O'Sullivan, the meteoric little Irish colleen, will be seen together in many more offerings if their work in this picture is any criterion.

The opening scenes cleverly establish the locale and the leading players who meet without knowing each other's real identity. Their mutual and horrified recognition leads to much about plenty of hilarity, as well as starting the train of obstacles to the romance. These include a highly sophisticated villain, an American millionaire, who unsuspectingly hastens the love affair, a case of amnesia to identity, a hurried marriage under false pretences and a kidnapped aeroplane, with everything coming out rightly in the end but not before the audience has been thoroughly entertained with the swift situations.

Both Farrell and Miss O'Sullivan are to be commended for their work in the romantic leads as the princess and the plumber, while H. B. Warner and Louise Closser Hale are fine in their parts. However, the comic acting honors go to Joseph Cawthorn as the village jack of all offices. His hat trick alone is worth the price of admission. The other members of the cast keep their work on the same high level.

Knowing his continental Europe perfectly, Alexander Korda has done a notable piece of direction and Howard J. Green has wisely adhered to the exact theme of Miss Miller's story. The work of Lucien Prival, Bert Roach, Murray Kinnell and Arnold Lucy is especially good in the supporting cast.

HOLLYWOOD IS A SEX MARKET SAYS DREISER

Will Seek to Prevent Release of Movie Version of his Novel

New York, April 13. — Theodore Dreiser, author of "An American Tragedy", is going to wage "a fight for my literary character" in an attempt to prevent by court action the release of the motion picture version of his novel he is making, as saying in an interview in the Herald-Tribune by Eleanor Kellogg.

He recently returned from Hollywood, where he conferred with motion picture officials on the film.

"I have a literary character to maintain," he said, "and I contend I have a mental quality in my product and the character of my product..... They can't take a piece of work that is inimical to my standards and picture me as writing some thing I never in the world could have written."

Movie Kings Like Monkeys

In describing Hollywood, Dreiser said he "was led through double doors to meet generalissimos who jumped around like monkeys and talk like children."

"They are dealing with the total average mind of the United States, these movies," he declared, "and what they are doing is a fantastic ..... Ruth Chatterton, for instance, has done very sympathetic work in one or two things, but along comes Marlene Dietrich or someone wearing a high hat and tights, and so they compel this serious actress to wear a high hat and tights and she can't do it. Instead of finding vehicles for Greta Garbo, they put her in things that any little squeak could play."

Dreiser said he thought conditions in Hollywood would change, because bankers might gain control of the industry and force them to give up selling sex at so much a seat.

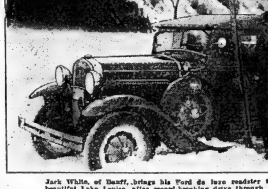
WALRUS SKULL FOUND IN SAND

Winnipeg, Man., April 13—A walrus skull, believed to be between 20,000 and 30,000 years old has come into possession of the natural resources and development branch of the Canadian National railways here.

It was found in northern Manitoba by George Brown of The Pas, during recent construction work on the Hudson Bay railway, at Mile 467.



The skull is that of the Arctic walrus, Ontobuchus Rosmarus, and probably represents one of the many walrus wanderers that flourished south of the Hudson Bay during the glacial period.

The two tusks, some 15 inches in length, are very well preserved, after thousands of years beneath the sands but one is considerably worn on the top.

REPUBLICAN WIN SEES THREE RESIGN

Madrid, April 13—Crises in Spanish affairs, with the grave threat against the monarchy, forecast by a sweeping victory of the republicans in yesterday's municipal elections, broke a head today by the resignation of three ministers of the present cabinet.

Ford Victor Over Rockies

Jack White, of Banff, brings his Ford de luxe roadster to rest on frozen surface of Beaverfoot Lake, after record-breaking drive through mountains from Los Angeles.

BATTLING his Ford through the snow-filled passes of the Rockies in winter, Jack White, motor sports enthusiast and owner of the Lido, manager of the Banff district, recently made a record-breaking time of five and one-half days in a hard drive from Los Angeles to Lake Louise. Mr. White drove to the resort through country among the Rockies' towering peaks to take part in the winter sports. The distance is 2,100 miles.

"Words fail to express my appreciation of the Ford car," said Mr. White after the grueling trip. "When I say it is a real car, I mean it in every sense of the word, as I have driven many types of cars over the same route—in other seasons. It is the best all-round performing car I have ever driven."

Mr. White's dash to Lake Louise was made through fog, rain and blinding snowstorms and against heavy snow which combined with stole his car just as he was scheduled to start forced him to push the car to its utmost to reach Lake Louise in time. The car had been purchased in Vancouver and been well broken in on a previous drive from Vancouver to Los Angeles.

Slippery roads made dangerous going on the drive from Los Angeles until through California. Forty miles west of Spokane Mr. White ran into heavy snow which continued until he passed Nanton, Alberta. Between Coeur D'Alene and Bonners Ferry, Idaho, Mr. White ran into the worst snowstorms he said he had ever seen. The heavy fall made driving difficult. He had to stop frequently to clip the caked snow from his windshield. The car however, battled on, sometimes through snow as deep as two feet.

"The deep throaty bark of the Ford V-8 gave confidence and I continued to smash through," said Mr. White. "I did have trouble with a bit of motoring difficulties are caused by the driver losing confidence in the car."

"Another heavy snowstorm was encountered north of Bonners Ferry, but I managed to get through. The Banff - Windermere Highway being closed, I was forced to negotiate the Crow's Nest Pass. There I lost two hours burning for help to pull a big passenger bus out of the ditch, but the next day I made Banff without trouble. On the day following I motored up to Lake Louise for the skiing and skijoring competitions. There I had my car photographed on the frozen, snow-blanketed surface of the lake."

SPANIARDS CELEBRATE NEW REPUBLIC

21st BATTALION CLUB QUIT CENTRAL LEAGUE

PRINCE EDWARD HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE

LEFT MANIFESTO

Colourful Scenes Painted as Madrid Celebrates

(Canadian Press)

Madrid, April 16.— As King Alfonso and members of the Royal Family scattered into exile today, leaders of the Spanish Republic moved to insure the life of the new regime and to make their reutn to Spain impossible.

The prison gates at Barcelona, Valencia, Jaca and other cities, were opened for thousands of political and revolutionary prisoners, incarcerated during the dictatorships of the last eight years, while crowds boisterously celebrated the death of the Monarchy and the birth of the Republic.

The King accompanied by his cousin, Infante Alfonso of Orleans and Duke of Miranda boarded the cruiser Principe Alfonso at Cartagena and sailed away before dawn this afternoon, probably in England, though his destination was not announced. Other members of the Royal Family left the country via various routes probably to meet in England.

Crowds Danced

Throughout the night crowds merrily danced about the streets celebrating the abdication of King Alfonso who only relinquished his throne after a republican ultimatum handed him the ultimatum, that unless a republic was declared, they would not be responsible for the consequences.

Alfonso left behind with Conde de Romanones, Minister of State in the Asmar Cabinet, the manifesto announcing his farewell to his people to be kept secret until he be out of Spanish jurisdiction and until it is published terms of the agreement with Alcala Zamora and the republi can leaders may not be known. Political circles believed the manifesto was not the renunciation of rights of the throne for Alfonso and his heirs but believed it would reveal the hope of some day returning to Spain in the event parliamentary elections should give monarchists.

In his farewell to the officers and escort Alfonso declared: I am going because it is the will of Spain and to avoid bloodshed. I go with a clear conscience."

BLAMES HER

Harold Holt Gower) arrested in Detroit, it is alleged, told the police that Mrs. Vera Phillips Phillips, twenty-six-year-old widow, in whose house Holt was a roomer, was the "brains" behind the robbery of a bank at Volsteat last August. They will face trial for the robbery in Pennsylvania.

HEAVY HORSES HOLD THEIR OWN

Harness Men See No Sign of Lack of Interest

Heavy-draught horses are holding their own in those parts as a visit to one or more of the leading fairs in this city showed. These emporia of trade are replete with everything necessary for the equipment of horses for the heavy work, more so than they were in the days which preceded the appearance of the motorcar.

Harness shops are still busy places of business, though the sale of a set of light buggy harness is a rarity, so rare as to cause surprise. Yet some of these sets await buyers whenever such may appear.

Heavy harness is an indicator or barometer according to the trend. It indicates no diminution in the work being done by the heavy horse. Harness-makers claim that the heavy-draught horse is in the larger cities being put back upon the short hauls at the more economical method of making the haul.

Harness makers affirm their belief that the horse has not yet had his day and see a great future for the animal in the encurrence of interest in the fine animal which has been the friend of man since before the dawn of history.

SPEED BLAMED FOR DEATH ON CODERICH ROAD

Goderich, Apr. 15.—The inquest into the death of Irvin Patterson, automobile dealer of Tiverton, who was killed in an accident near Goderich, April 8, was held tonight. Dr. A. C. Hunter, Coroner, of Goderich, presided, and the witnesses were examined by the Crown Attorney, Dudley E. Hopkins.

The jury's verdict was: "We, the members of the Coroner's jury, from evidence submitted, find that Irwin Patterson, of Tiverton, was the driver of the Ford coupe, came to his death on April 8, on Goderich and Stratford Market and General Hospital from concussion of the brain and shock, as the result of the collision of the Blue Water highway, in the Township of Ashfield, in the County of Huron, on Sunday, April 8, due to excessive speed."

INTOXICATED MAN NEARLY LEAPED DOCK

Kingston, Apr. 15.—While in an intoxicated condition, Norah Lee, aged 31, drove his touring car down Brock street early this morning at forty miles an hour and almost went into the harbor, near the ferry wharf. Before he got to the edge of the stable, the two front wheels were extending over the edge of the wharf and three tires had been blown out and the car had come to a standstill with the car alone in the car. He was probably saved from being drowned by a matter of inches. In his his third appearance before the Police Magistrate for driving a car while intoxicated and a sentence of three months on each charge was imposed, the sentences to run concurrently.

LARGE SHIPMENT OF GRAIN

Saskatoon, Sask, Apr. 15 (By The Canadian Press) — Shipment this fall, via the Hudson Bay route of a substantial amount of the prairie crop permitted by port facilities, instead of the 750,000 bushels as had been suggested, will be recommended by Hon. J. A. Manson, federal minister of railways and canals, the Saskatchewan government has announced.

The council was unanimous in its opinion that shipment of the largest amount possible through the Hudson Bay route would have a beneficial influence upon economic conditions in the agricultural industry of the west.

TORONTO AUTOIST ON BAIL

Windsor, April 15—Paul Hoffman, Toronto, motorist, was arrested and released on $500 bail on a criminal negligence charge he was arrested yesterday after his auto and a police motorcycle were in collision. Const. C. Frank Stanley was thrown from the motorcycle and his left leg was fractured.

KINGSTON CLUB QUIT LEAGUE

Possibility of Intermediate Team Seeking Senior Rating

(Canadian Press)

Kingston, April 15.— The 21st Battalion Club, which operated Kingston's team in the Central Ontario Baseball League last season, have decided not to have a team this season. Operating expenses of last year set the club back a matter of $514 and it was considered indivisable to operate again this season.

Plans had been made for a revival of the league with Kingston, Belleville, Peterboro and probably Oshawa in the league. Practically all the players have signed with the Kingston Intermediate team, who may now seek a senior rating.

CANADA LEADS IN PROVIDING WORK FOR BLIND

New York, Apr. 15 (Canadian Press) — Representatives of thirty-seven nations attending the world conference on work for the blind today applauded Canada as a world leader in the employment of the blind, when Capt. E. A. Baker and J. F. Clunk, of the Canadian National Institutes for the Blind, spoke on the employment of the blind on work for which sight was formerly considered essential.

Capt. Baker said instead of making costly experiments for work suitable to the blind works, more benefit had been derived by investing the same money in a properly operated placement department.

WILL EXAMINE SCHOOL TEACHERS

FOUND DEAD IN HOME

Lindsay, Apr. 15—Neighbors entered his home, near Woodville, this morning and found William Gent, 76, was in his seventy-fourth year, and apparently had succumbed to a heart attack. The funeral from the home to the United Church at Woodville was largely attended.

ROMANCE WAS SAVED FROM DESTRUCTION

Happiness of Newlyweds Temporarily Marred by Consanquinity

Montreal, April 15 (CP)—Just an old Spanish custom temporarily broke up a happy marriage some time ago, and the story was such a distressing one that it could not be told without unnecessarily hurting someone's feelings. Now, when their wrecked romance salvaged, Juan Delvecchio and his bride of six months, Maria de las Dolores, both born by birth, English by upbringing, and Canadian by adoption, are happily re-united, the story becomes eminently telliable if only as an example of the fact that all's well that ends well.

Delvecchio's dream of a sweet adventure that soured in just the bet of an eyelid, only to shed its bitterness later with sweetness, was brought to notice in the court of the new conciliation bureau that must un-Canadian of things—a kiss between men.

The kiss story has been going the rounds of the cloakrooms some time as a sort of amusing quadrain, but the truth was gleaned by the inquiring reporter, who, having nothing particular to do when the court was closed, went home phone to trace the facts of the rumor to their ultimate lair.

A brah laborer, lately employed in a wop party under the Italian "padrone" system in northern Ontario, approached the street door of the new courthouse some time ago with the intention of settling his affairs into the hands of the police. He started to explain himself to the interpreter, but, considering that the man was a foreigner, he addressed him confidently in the interpreters' room.

It was a pathetic story that Delvecchio had to tell. Six months ago he had left his native village in Calabrian Spanish, Dolores had appealed to him, when they first met in Montreal last summer, as someone who was very definitely there in the scheme of things. Coincidences accumulated—everything since then is unusual Hanna was to have been the speaker of the evening, but as he was unable to attend, a paper was read by Principal Kells. A number of musical numbers were also received. Miss Ada Groves was at the piano and Mr. Victor Wardle obliged with two saxaphone solos, while Mr. Bruce Smith gave two violin numbers. Refreshments were served shortly before the meeting broke up.

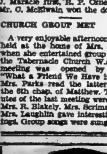
CHURCH RENOVATED

In order to make way for the commercial advancement of the present age, the little church at the corner of North Front and College Streets, is being renovated to accommodate a local industry. The church, known as University Church was erected in 1857 by members of the Tabernacle church, and was used as a subsidiary of that church ever since. For years the Professors of old Albert College were the ministers in charge of the services held in the little church. It was mainly though the efforts of Dr. Pre., E. I. Bayley that University Church came into being, such Professors as: Watson, Carmen, Lakas and Dr. J. N. Shaker have carried on the glorious work of the little parish. Of late the church has been conducted service and Sunday school by the pastor of the personal living on the College Hill.

PARK IMPROVED



Victoria park is being groomed for the coming summer season and is busy burning up the grass and leveling off the land. The water has subsided and it is possible to walk around the park this year, which was impossible last year as the water covered the walk. All winter ashes have been dumped in the park and after levelling off it will be covered with soil so that the citizens will be able to enjoy the summer breezes from the Bay of Quinte this year

SENIOR W.A. MET

The Senior W.A. of the Canadian Girls in Training of the Church of England at Harcimer Ave., had a most interesting time on Monday night. After closing a general meeting, Miss Templeton took them for a short hike and gave them a most interesting study in astronomy. The night was an ideal one for the fascinating work and after an hour's observation of the stars, they returned to enjoy a cup of hot coffee and sandwiches. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Templeton for her helpful lecture.

ENTERTAINED CAST.

Members of the cast of the play "Summer is A-Comin' In" presented at the Collegiate Auditorium last night under the auspices of the Y's Men, were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hepburn at the conclusion of the performance last night. Mr. and Mrs. Hepburn are of the Y.M.C.A. and a member of the club, in a brief speech thanked all those who had loaned their support for the play.

GEODETIC SURVEY MEASUREMENTS

Accurate measurements can be made across country by means of a measured line on the ground and a system of triangles. The triangulation of the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Department of the Interior, is conducted with the greatest degree of accuracy. Its usage involves the determination of the size and shape of the earth, the location of international and provincial boundaries, and furnishes points of control for the general maps of the country. Adjusted geodetic points in great number are available for use in field in every province of the Dominion.

ASSISTED IN PROGRAM.

An omission occurred in the report of the Baptist Young People's Union to visit to the House of Refuge on Monday night. It should have been mentioned that during the devotion exercises, Miss Hazel Barley led in prayer, while Miss Violet Hobson read the scripture lesson.

LADIES' NIGHT AT HOLLOWAY STREET CHURCH

Wives of Members Entertained by Men's Club

Last night was Ladies' Night at the Men's Club of Holloway Street United Church when the wives of the members were right royally entertained by the men. Mr. Arthur Ellis presided over the King chair. After the opening hymn and prayer the following programme was presented much to the delight of all present.

The president welcomed the ladies and spoke of the pleasure it brought to the men to have the ladies as their guests of the evening. This is the first occasion on which the ladies have been invited to join the men in their club meeting.

Piano Solo—Mrs. Lennox.
Reading—Miss Worrell
Vocal Solo—L. Sullivan.
Piano Solo—R. Lennox.
Rev. R. C. Tait of St. John's United Church, Campbellford, was the guest speaker of the evening. He was introduced by Mr. W. Thorne who is a member of Mr. Tait's church when he was minister in Nova Scotia.

Rev. Mr. Tait gave a most delightful and informing address on Zion City. He spoke of the unique city, a few miles out of Chicago and of the characteristics of the people. The speaker dramatized it was a city of 15,000 people. The Tabernacle was in the centre of the city, and there were concentric much like the hub of a wheel. The streets ran from the centre like the spokes of a wheel, and are all named after Biblical characters. The city has never had their revenue, has no jails, and no doctors. The people are happy and prosperous and very devoted and loyal to the religious principles of the founder. On a Sunday as at least 1000 cars are parked around the Tabernacle. The services of the Tabernacle are led by a splendid choir of 200 voices.

The factories ward large stores are busy and prosperous. The employees in the factories receive their weekly wage are given their share of the profits at the end of each year. Nearly everyone owns his own home, on which he takes great pride.

The address was full of interest and most instructive.

The thanks of the large attendance was voiced by the president for the helpful travelogue.

After the program, Rev. R. B. Taylor, minister, introduced some and a very interesting musical contest into which all entered quite elastically.

A very dainty bunch was then served by the men under the able direction of Mrs. Allen Lennox and Mr. E. Denton. A vote of thanks was then moved by Mrs. Walters in which she very suitably voiced the thanks and appreciation of the ladies for the interesting and delightful evening. Mrs. Percy Mott seconded the vote of thanks.

The evening was brought to a close by singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds." The Men's club will pay a friendly visit to Trenton on Tuesday April 28, when they will be the guests of Crane Men's Club.

Mrs. H. Hobbs acted as accompanist for the evening.

THE WEEK'S HAPPENINGS AS TOLD BY THE CORRESPONDENTS

EASTER DANCE HELD AT TWEED

TWEED, April 13—(By Mail)—The Easter meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the church parlours on Friday, April 3rd with a large attendance.

The special speaker was Miss Louise Jolliffe, head of the Korean Mission Board of Wonsan, Korea. Miss McCully is a pioneer missionary having spent thirty years in Korea. She related many interesting facts about Korea and the Koreans.

The dance which was held in the Opera House on Easter Monday evening under the Columbia Club, was a great success. The members of the Club are to be congratulated on the great co-operation of the members which must exist in order to make such dances the success which they have been. The hall was beautifully decorated in the club colours, the Orchestra "Dick-Roberts" were certainly super and the lunch was also worth mentioning. The patronesses were Mrs. Jas. Osborne, Mrs. Jas. Byrnes, Mrs. Moses Trudeau, Mrs. Michael Merwa.

Annie, fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Palmateer had a narrow escape on Friday when a 22-calibre rifle was accidentally discharged in the home, the bullet passing through her clothing just grazing the skin. It was a close call and she was dazed for an instant.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Fisher celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, April 8th at their home near Chatman's Corners. There was a small gathering of intimate friends and neighbours. The evening was spent in cards and social intercourse. Lunch was served and the guests had the pleasure of sampling a piece of the original cake. Before the party broke up Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were presented with a case of silver by their friends and the singing of "They are Jolly Good Fellows" brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

Mr. W. E. Thomson M.P., was in Ottawa on Tuesday, attending the reception to Earl and Countess of Bessborough.

Mr. Lauriston Newton, Mr. Kenneth Morris and sister and Miss Edna Ackerman of Hamilton spent Easter with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Newton.

JASPER PARK "HAYMAKER"

One of the interesting and curious little animals that inhabit Jasper National Park in Alberta, is the pika. It is about the size of a guinea pig, with rounded ears, short legs and no visible tail. It can often be seen running rabbit-like across the boulders. Another name for the pika is "the haymaker" from his habit of storing away dried grasses and plants for his winter food. Sometimes under an overhanging rock there will be found his miniature haystack, a bundle containing perhaps a bushel of well cured vegetation which includes apparently specimens of every plant in the neighborhood.

HUGHO'ROURKE AGAIN NAMED ROTARY HEAD

Hinde and Dauche Straw Pile Was Threatened

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Trenton, April 14—Nomination officers for the year 1933 was held at the week-end luncheon of the Trenton Rotary Club, the election by acclamation being given to Hugh O'Rourke, President; K. Couch, Vice-President, and B. B. Jordon, Secretary.

Messrs. Chas. Foster and Jerry Squires Jr., are contesting the office of Treasurer. With two to be elected, Jas. Armstrong, Gib Aziz and Chas. Allore are in the field for Directors.

Roof Fires

On Saturday afternoon the first fire call made in Trenton for the home of Arthur Dawson, West St. Flying sparks had ignited the shingles on the roof. Little damage was done.

A similar fire occurred earlier in the week at the home of Oliver Ellis Jr., Albert street. Here, also, the prompt response of the firemen prevented serious damage being done.

Paper Mill Threatened

A grass fire on Sunday afternoon reached to within fifty feet of over 15,000 tons of straw stored in the yards of the Hinde & Dauche Paper Co., on Marmora street, before plucky employees working in connection with the local firemen succeeded in extinguishing the blaze.

It is alleged that two men and a girl were making along the roof of bank north of the straw yard and that one of them threw a lighted match on the ground, accidently igniting the dry grass.

Softball Ready

Local softballers are ready for the 1933 season with an entirely new league executive. The league will be affiliated with the Ontario Association, and April 22nd is the date set for payment of the several league entry fees. CHERRY VALLEY CHURCH SCENE OF MARINE SERVICE

Many Unable to Gain Admission to Sacred Edifice

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, Apr. 15. — Eight hundred sailors, fishermen, their families, relatives and friends, filled Cherry Valley Church to overflowing on Sunday evening when the third annual Marine Service was held. Many others were unable to gain admittance. Points as distant as Belleville, Trenton, Port Hope, Colborne, Wellington and Ameliasburg were represented.

The service was a splendid success in every way and much enjoyed, according to remarks heard on all sides afterwards.

The altar of the church was decorated with flags and models of ships, while before the pulpit were arched crossed oars and a life preserver. The altar railing was draped with fish netting.

The service opened by singing the doxology, Rev. Lawrence B. Smith, B. A. the pastor, and Capt. Nelson Palmateer, leading the hymn of the service originated, offered prayer. Hymn "Will Your Anchor Hold" was followed by the Scripture Lesson by Rev. L. B. Smith, from Psalm 107th Psalm. The male choir sang "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning" and Mrs. Edward Hall gave a touching solo portrayal of incidents in the lives of sailors and fishermen on the lakes. This intensely thrilling selection held the great crowd spell-bound to the end. Thos. Collidge of Picton, tenor, sang a fine solo. Capt. Palmateer gave a talk and called on some of the old sailors present. These included Capt. Wellington.

The choir gave that stirring anthem, "Pull For the Shore."—

Mrs. Bedford then read a list of 150 names of deceased mariners and fishermen of Prince Edward county and in their memory, a basket of flowers was placed on the altar by Capt. Byron Bongard.

Mention was made of the flowers which adorned the altar, they being given in memory of the late Lemauel McMahon, who lost his life in Lake Ontario while fishing, by his family.

Mr. F. Mallett of Picton sang "Nearer My God to Thee."

Capt. John Vanalstine of Trenton gave a short talk and related incidents in his career as a sailor. The hymn "Eternal Father Strong to Save" was sung.

Rev. L. S. Smith preached from the text, "Then Are They Glad Because They Were At Quiet; so he brought them into their desired haven." Psalm 107th 30th. Apparently address was given close attention.

The gathering dispersed after singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" and the benediction.

Capt. Palmatier was able to be present in spite of the fact that he has been seriously ill. He was greatly assisted in preparing the service and creating interest in it by Mr. Main Curry 75; Lottie Acker 69.

At the town council last week, a grant of $100 was made to the Prince Edward County Poultry Association and a grant of $300 to the Prince Edward County Publicity Committee.

Persian Balm creates and preserves lovely and youthful complexions. Tones and stimulates the skin. Fragrant as a flower. Cool as morning dew. Sanitly absorbed by the tissues, making the skin wonderfully soft, textured. Unrivalled as an aid to feminine elegance. Delightful to use. Imparts additional charm to the daintiest of complexions. Persian Balm is the one toilet requisite for the exacting woman. Peerless as a beautifier.

WILLIAM POWELL IN 'MAN OF THE WORLD' AT BELLE TODAY

"Man of the World" is the appropriate and intriguing title of the new William Powell starring picture for Paramount. It is a vividly told story of conflicting emotions set against a smart, sophisticated Parisian background. Th B William Powell portrays a role of power and strength, in many ways the best role he has had since his memorable creation of "Natural" Devlin in "Four Feathers."

In "Man of the World," at the Belle Theatre today and Thursday matinee daily, William Powell is cast as a suave, debonair American, a man of culture and charm who, unable to return to America because of an unfortunate past, always moves in unsophisticated and wealthy tourists who come to Paris. To men he is an interesting man of parts; to women he is a man of unusual fascination.

In one of his frame-up schemes, Powell agitates his better judgment, allows himself to become vitally interested in an American girl Claire Lonsdell. He takes Frank Powell hopes to blackmail. When he realizes that he is falling in love with her, Powell jilts his pretty and devoted accomplice — Wynne Gibson — and tells her that he is giving up his crooked life forever. Then Powell tells Carole his entire story and asks her to be his wife. Carole, madly in love with Powell, gladly forgives him and consents to marry him.

At this point, Powell's accomplice, Wynne, warns him that she will not stand by and see him go off with another woman. She also tells him that he can never marry Carole because, by their lives, she warns, have been so different that when the first story of love dies she (Carole) will be unhappy. Powell, disturbed by what is related by what Wynne has said and realizing that she is undoubtedly right, agrees to call Carole out of his mind. In order completely to kill Carole's love for him, Powell blackmails her, naming Carole in scandalous charges.

The manner in which the story is worked out, makes for a thrilling drama, building suspense with each succeeding sequence and finally culminating in a stirring and dramatic climax that is as thrilling and exciting as it is clever.

In the title role of "Man of the World," William Powell scores in a role that commands attention. And Carole Lombard, last seen as one of the screen's most popular young actresses, and Wynne Gibson, are sincere, forthright performances. Others in the cast include Guy Kibbee and Lawrence Gray.

A highly amusing Rainbow comedy, "Le Secret de Polichinelle," "The Big Idea" a vaudeville delight, and a bully color symphony, are announced for exhibition on the same program. The latest Paramount concert with Mr. Jack Denmark at the console, will be presented matinee and evening.

DAILY MEDICAL SERVICE

Everybody feels an urged within him to do things successfully. Every woman and child is really driven on, to find himself.

Each and everyone of us is groping, reaching out. We feel instinctively that there is a place for us to occupy. No matter how hard the knocks, it is impossible to keep us down we won't succeed. We instinctively know that there is a place for us to fill and one of us, happiness to go around, success for us all.

Each one of us is one to go about it in trying to find that niche for which he is best fitted in life.

The task is not a specially easy one, I will admit. Not on the other hand, it is not insurmountable. Science has conquered most of nature's forces. The science of psychology—especially—has helped us all indeed. —has likewise brought to light many of the handicaps that hold us back, that mix us up. But there are ways though we were forever drifting — goodness knows it enough.

Man has really discovered how to conquer himself. He has himself, to fit himself for a certain goal or goals and to direct himself in the course of taking it.

First of all, however, you must learn fearless in facing your faults and you must not hesitate, through modesty, to recognize your assets, likewise.

It may seem strange to suggest that anybody might be modest about himself, selves. Yet perhaps more failures in life are due to modesty than to any other single cause. There is often too much self-deprecation, self-condemnation and self-punishment.

And usually these date back to childhood, to the "don't" and scoldings received at home and at school, to the handicaps we were told in the nursery, and to the "naughty child" talk gratuitously bestowed by well-meaning parents.

Therefore, to find yourself, remove the handicaps and the rest will take care of itself. The mind wants a hopeful and healthy anyway. Give it a chance and it will do the rest.

But you must learn how to fearlessly examine every piece of your mind. You must give up hurrying, being superficial. You must be scientific, truthful and unafraid.

Your problems may not differ so much from those of the next person. Perhaps your emotional life is maladjusted. Perhaps your personality needs development. Perhaps you are tormented by fears. Perhaps you are confused.

Perhaps your vision is clouded because you have fallen into a rut or perhaps you are suffering from a feeling of inferiority— the thing which undermines so many.

Whatever it may be, bestir yourself! Dig down and find out. Find what Socrates said we all should do, know yourself. Be intelligent and the remedy will become comparatively simple.

The trouble is not even suspected in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred in which the individual cannot find himself.

What Chance Man

BY JACK WOODFORD

Molly O'Farrell was the most perfect cashier that Mr. Grinnell had ever employed. He knew it, and rather liked her for it, and generally he had had trouble with them and been forced to get rid of them before a year was out. They made costly mistakes, or offended customers, or took no interest in their work. *

Molly, however, had lasted for close to three years now. He was paying her forty-five dollars a week; fifteen dollars more per week than he had ever before paid a cashier. He couldn't afford to raise her much more, however; because, after all, his restaurant business was small, and would bear only a certain amount of overhead.

More important, perhaps even than her accuracy and efficiency, was her personality, as a drawing card. Molly was about twenty-five, but she looked eighteen. Her fresh, young Irish beauty was a definite attraction to the restaurant; her pleasant manner brought many a customer back. And she was dead on the dollar, Grinnell knew, because she never dated one of the wise crackers who were always trying to take her out. It had been a pleasure to Grinnell to run his business ever since she had come into it.

And then one evening, Molly was ten dollars short on the register.

"I—I'm sorry, Mr. Grinnell worked, though this was the first time she had ever made a mistake. "But such a good record as you've got, we can afford to overlook a ten dollar shortage."

And then, two evenings later, a lady escaped out Mr. Grinnell's future.

"Your cashier was impudent to me," she declared, " tendered a ten dollar bill in payment for my dinner and she asked me if I thought I was rich. Well, she doesn't work here."

"I'm dreadfully sorry," Grinnell soothed; "but, you see, we bank all our excess money before the banks close, because there have been a lot of holdups in this neighborhood. Of course, usually I'm glad to have impertinent to you. I'll speak to her! I'll give her a call, and I'll turn up the street and get chancy for you."

Later Grinnell spoke to Molly.

"Sorry," Molly told him carelessly, "but she jumped all over me because I didn't have change, and I jumped back at her."

"Sure," Molly agreed. "I'm sorry."

"That's all right," Grinnell told her.

And then, a week later, Molly had a fine short shortage one night; and, during the rush hour, two customers furious.

"What's come over you Molly?" Grinnell begged to be told. "Are you in? Do you need a rest? Are you getting tired of your job, or what?"

"Sure I'm getting tired of my job," Molly told him, and her Irish eyes sparkled. "I'm tired of being young and beautiful" "I'm sick of cash registers, and grouchy customers, and the sight of plain boys being insulted. I was never built for this kind of a life. I'm built for the arms of a man, and his home, and maybe even a baby carriage in front of it. I mean success to me. A woman's success, Mr. Grinnell, is in her husband, her. I, lies in being loved, and having someone to live and having babies for. Then you're thinking of getting married" Grinnell asked.

"Yep," she answered.

"Well, I'm sad again. Grinnell retreated in horror. Somehow it had never occurred to him that he might lose Molly through the marriage route. For the first time he realized that Molly meant more to him than an efficient cashier. Just her presence in the shop story made everything bright. She was going to be other man. She was going to cheer up his home.....he'd have her name hung on his mail. Grinnell was paralyzed with gloom. He sought the privacy of his office and stared at himself in the looking glass.

After all, he decided, he wasn't such a bad looking fellow, even if he was ten years older than Molly. He was a good dresser, he had a good looking—often the ladies had told him ever with interest....but he'd been too busy building up his business to think about anything like that. He was still slim, and a good dancer. He'd light, that was all there was to it. No other man was going to get Molly away from him.

And from that day on he fought. First there were movies, after work, and then the theatres, dinner balls, tour rides in his car. Finally one night, under an October moon, he took her into his arms while they were out on a ride.

"Molly," he breathed tensely. "I love you. Have loved you from the very first, though I didn't realize it. She snuggled up against him, happy.

"Will you marry me, Molly?"

"Sure!" she said, with an Irish smile of happy content.

"But this other fellow—?"

"There wasn't any—I was thinking of you when I said I was going to get married. I'm saving those shirts to give back to you. I thought so long as I brushed you'd never notice me as anything but a well oiled machine so I had to cut up.

Grinnell roared.

"I want a dumbbock I am," he said, and hugged her close.

SPRING THUNDER

Past buildings I can see a square of sky
Like a sheet of pewter, palpitant with lightning
And Spring thunder crowds upon my ears—
Spring thunder! Now the sky at last awakes
From its long quiet pantomime of clouds,
Heavy flowers and impenetrable mists
Now fire rends it and the thunder speaks,
Rain falls and hail, in torrents to the ground,
And their significance is warmth and spring.

VAGARIES OF WEATHER ARE SEEN IN QUEBEC PROVINCE ON MONDAY

Residents of Eastern Districts Have a Mud Bath

Montreal, Apr. 14.—The weather man turned sportive in the Province of Quebec today, sending a thunderstorm mud-bath over the lower St. Lawrence and the Saguenay, a high wind-storm and a heat wave to Montreal and winds and mud to Quebec City. A boy was killed here when a flag pole was blown down.

The most interesting phenomenon was at the city and district Chicoutimi. Early in the morning an inch of snow fell. At 11 a.m. the sky turned yellow and not a breath of air stirred. At noon the sky was almost black and the town was in practically pitch-blackness. Then rain began to fall.

The rain was muddy, staining the newly-fallen snow and dirtying the clothes hanging on lines. Handkerchiefs and papers held up to the skies were visibly blackened. This continued almost three hours by which time the dust in the air had been washed out and the rain was over.

During the disturbance at Chicoutimi the skies were so dark that flashes of lightning were clearly visible at noon.

At Montreal this morning came the first heat wave of the season when the mercury in the shade jumped 25 points to a fraction under 70. Cooler weather has been promised for the balance of the week. This afternoon came a gale of unusual velocity which caused considerable and occasional damage. Telephone and telegraph wires poles, trees and signs were reported blown down.

William Merson, 16, a student, was instantly killed when the flag-pole on the Baron Byng High School crashed into the campus, striking him on the head and fracturing his skull.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers:

Here are a few tips for colour in costumes:

"If there is any one element which promises to distinguish the fashions of spring, 1931, from those of last year, inescapable insistence on color contrast.

"No one with an ounce of adventure in her make-up will resist the color risk; no one with a grain of common sense will plunge into it without due forethought. For it is a chancy business and it is taken up with more enthusiasm than seldom to tremble to think what the national landscape may look like within a few weeks. The thing has already gone far enough to bring forth terrifying examples of how not to do it.

"Consider the hazards which lie before an average shopper, starting out happily enough to assemble a spring wardrobe. She learns very soon, if she does not know it already, that a costume which is, at least two colors must bring its head in about this season, and that the merrily endorses three and even four-color ensembles.

"Bi-color hats—the crown of one hue and the brim of another—are poised on her bewildered head with a murmur to the effect that this is something very new, which is true enough. Her dizziness mounts as she inspects a multi-colored array of scarfs and a vivid lot of blouses, and reason deserts her entirely when red patent-leather belts, bags and flowers and three-strand necklaces, each strand in a different tone, beckon her from their cases.

"Red hints of fashion, on the other hand, have given knowing women a great an opportunity to make gifts. They need no rules—which is fortunate, for there are none—and they gladly sidetract their beloved black and white, in one measure at least, to indulge in this exciting new pastime of playing with colors.

"Color contrast does not necessarily imply the combination of different colors. Some new costumes are developed in two or three tones of the same color, and very handsomely, too. But don't confuse it with the old sombre technique — there is a bigger difference between the shades.

"The white shown is a clear snow white and some of the combinations favored are brown and lettuce green, red and blue, red and beige, green and yellow, and gray and coral pink. Among the models is a novelty in afternoon costumer that adds an extra jacket of transparent pink velvet to a black satin suit with a heavy sheer pink blouse.

"Getting down to ways and means, you can purchase a costume with the color contrast theme already so fully developed that completing it becomes only a matter of adding a few restrained and harmonizing accessories. Or you can take matters into your own hands and assemble every item separately — especially daytime costumes. It will be smart to wear a blouse of one color, a skirt of another and a jacket of a third—if the thing is well done."

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

HOW TO MASTER WORRY

We all know that worry gets us nowhere and that the less we do of it the better. We do not realize, however, that it affects us physically as well as mentally. For one thing, worry tends to produce insomnia—the loss of sleep extended over a long period undermines our resistance and revitalizes the various organs. Not only that, but if we cannot sleep well we cannot think well. We become ever more mixed up than before, thus creating a favorable soil for the sprouting of even more worry.

Then, again, worry interferes with digestion. Worry while you are eating — or just before or after it — and an excess of hydrochloric acid is poured into the stomach with the juices, as it were, the food there, prevents it from being broken up and, therefore, it cannot be acted upon properly by the digestive secretions. This explains why those who have developed the habit of worry so often complain of indigestion.

Worry is a brain activity, a kind of mis-functioning of the brain. And from the brain nerves to all parts, to the stomach and intestines, the heart, the lungs and all the rest.

Indeed it is no exaggeration to state that when worry lasts for years it is just like living in hell.

What is worry, anyway?

Worry should be mind, which is supposed to be such a marvelous piece of machinery, get into such a state and spoil its work.

The fact is that the worry is actually an attempt on the part of the mind to straighten itself out. That is why the same thoughts keep coming back again and again. What they are trying to do is call the individual's conscious attention to them begging him in fact to rearrange the disturbing factors in the mind and stored away in the unconscious.

The mind might speak of worrisome thoughts as disturbance children who aren't able to express their desires but keep knocking on the door annoying the parent thoughtlessly over question to ask.

Worry, you see, is really confusion in thinking. That's why more and more questions keep bobbing up in the conscious mind. Sometimes even more possibilities — with the result that we become more and more lost away and forget them.

What is needed, therefore, to overcome worry is to sit down quietly and find the answer to each and every possible question.

What is mind needs is direction. The stream of thought tends to flow where it is heading for.

Then, if a question arises at the bank and you haven't the money to meet it, you worry. But if you go on, your difficulty calmly, as a conscientious effort to overcome it, the answer will probably be will put to make a loan or take on an extra job or be lessened by a small payment, then attention is drawn to it because you have discovered a way out.

The cure for worry is really more thinking rather than less. And that removes the confusion responsible for it.

Today's Verse

A SONG OF CITIES

I have dreamed of great cities and the world at their feet
High walls tumbled in Italy and in Greece
White buried cities deep in jungle grass
And empty cities where the fireflies dance.
And what of those towns that lie buried under sea.
Which chime their bells and chime again yet no man comes?
Tall towers of China built of porphyry,
And those Red Gates which were Byzantium's?

Tarnished they lie a heap of old brocade,
Or bordered like a palloon with all her sails,
Brave, but cities which made the world afraid!
Some day I'll write them all in a book of tales.

Beginning Your Campaign Against the Moth Pest

By Hannah Wing

As far as the enjoyment of summer is concerned one is at least safe "for in the calendar possibly no month to life clothes moth. How can you keep this maddening insect out of the closet, the rugs and from infesting on winter garments?

The moth itself is harmless enough, merely fluttering about the house innocently seeking a place to deposit its eggs where they may obtain its satisfy and be assured of the proper food. When one realizes that it is not the moths themselves but the damage but greedy newly hatched larvae, methods of control become more apparent.

The quaint moth balls cedar shavings and like odorous substances which are used to keep moths out of the closet, will not kill either moth eggs or the young larvae. The most that can be expected of them is that their repulsive odor will repel the moth and discourage her from depositing her eggs in the garments. Once the was strong to repel, the impulse of the moth to lay eggs is gone. So sure of is this no eggs are in the garment, when it is put away. This is accomplished by thorough brushing, sunning, airing or even dry cleaning.

Dichlorobenzine or paradichlorbenzine in pure chemical form when used in sufficient quantity have the greatest efficiency both in repelling the moth and in killing effect on both eggs and larvae. To be effective they should be used in the quantities recommended.

Garmentsal taken frequently are not liable to injury but clothing or material stored for long periods often in trunks or closets natures a fine feeding ground for the young moth in larvae state.

Rugs that are regularly cleaned with vacuum sweepers are not likely to be infested with moth eggs. Woolen blankets, of course are freed from any possible eggs by washing and if carefully stored are safe. Woolen clothing or blankets may be packed in large pasteboard boxes or wrapped in paper. All cracks, holes or openings in these packages should be tightly sealed against moth entrance by strips of gummed paper or cloth tightly pasted to the wrappings. Such seams as sheets or cheese may be treated with gasoline or benzine which will kill the larvae or eggs hereon there.

To use old woolen rags add pieces of fur or feathers in attics or closets is a very wise and prudent foolish as it is may furnish as profile a breed the moths that month dangerous to clothing and carpets.

CANADIENS WIN BATTERED MUG

Chicago Lost to Flying Frenchmen in Final Game of Series

Montreal, April 15—The Stanley Cup and hockey's highest honors stay in Montreal another year. Last night while a capacity crowd of fans cheered them on, the Montreal Canadiens staged a clean-cut two goals to none, victory over Chicago Black Hawks, Canadian champs and Howie Morenz netting in the second and third periods respectively.

In a great finish to a great series which had been deal-locked at two wins each before last night's victory for the Flying Frenchmen, Howie Morenz scored his first goal in ten play-off matches, four minutes from the end of the game.

Canadiens then staged a magnificent defense in the face of a courageous attack by the Chicago team which only admitted defeat when the final whistle sounded.

The teams gathered about the winners in mid-ice and, tempers forgotten, shook hands, hearing, wringing their hands and pounding them on the backs.

Chicago outplayed last night by spread team and went down fighting. Praise be conferred on the manager they held in the first period cost the visitors the game.

Canadiens Gain Momentum

The Canadiens started off much to ful strength until the middle period when they let in held a stout but distinct margin over the efforts of the eleven Hawks' forwards who were chasing in a determined fashion and kept tearing in to force the issue time and time.

The goal saves tell the story of the attack in the period. In better period Gardner handled three while Hainsworth answered for the second as Canadiens opened up Gardner had 13 stops while Hainsworth had 3. and in the third period Gardner saved 9 to Hainsworth's 4.

No professional hockey passed from the picture for another year after a season in which attendance records were broken all over the circuit.

To the Canadiens of course of the world's series money will be the largest on record, while the Chicago end will be a well above average amount. No figures have been released as yet but according to President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League.

It was the first major hockey victory for Howie Morenz, veteran star. The Allan Cup and the Memorial Cup champions of senior and junior amateur hockey respectively in Winnipeg.

The team which kept the Stanley Cup here proved itself a clever, stout-hearted aggregation and one of the greatest "money" teams in the history of the game.

They came out of a five-game series with Boston bruised and spent. They held on grimly until their invulda recovered and after being at the losing end, two matches to one, swept through the Black Hawks on Saturday night and again last night won the series, 3 games to 2.

WINGS FAVORED TO TAKE FLAG

New York, April 15—Having joined in observing the opening of the major league pennant races yesterday, eight teams of the International league will turn to their own private battle today.

Featuring the inaugural cast is the fray at Newark between the Rochester Red Wings, champions for the last two seasons, and the Newark Bears.

Although Rochester lost several stars from last year's pennant winner, it has received crack replacements from the parent St. Louis Cardinals and again is a favorite for the flag.

Newark gave evidence of strength by winning 12 straight exhibition games.

The Baltimore Orioles, who finished second in 1930, were scheduled to entertain Montreal; Buffalo and Reading were paired, at Reading, and Toronto was to invade Jersey City. Baltimore and Buffalo, runners-up last year's home run king, and has been picked to race Rochester for the pennant.

Two clubs enter the race with new pilots, both former major league infielders. George Toporcer takes over the helm at Jersey City, while Jack Rowland tries his hand at Reading.

Athletics Defeat Senators In 11 Inning Game

Washington, Apr. 15. — President Hoover, his cabinet and the representatives of 21 Pan-American nations yesterday witnessed baseball Philadelphia's champion Athletics inaugurate the 1931 baseball season by defeating the Washington Senators, 4 to 3.

It required 11 innings of ball play for the A's to overcome the skill and spirit of the Senators.

Each team scored a run in the first inning, after which both were scoreless until the seventh when Simmons doubled over Simmons' head into the left field crowd to score Spencer and put the Senators ahead.

St. Louis, Apr. 15.—The St. Louis Browns opened their baseball fight to get out of the second division with a 7 to 3 victory over Detroit. Pitchers Walter Stewart, Browns' lefthander, pitched shut-out ball, except for one bad inning.

Bettencourt, former coast football star, and Browns' out field regular, opened a batting attack in the second with a double that brought in the first run of the game. Stewart climbed that inning with a triple.

An error helped the Browns get another counter in the fourth and three hard singles featured a two-run rally straight Whitehall, southpaw at the bat, in the fifth.

New York, Apr. 15.—Babe Ruth, Jimmy Walker, the Boston Red Sox, Lou Gehrig and some 60,000 other persons of all shapes, sizes and sorts joined baseball's parade of 1931 with Opening an almost perfect affair.

The weather was sunny and warm. Mayor Walker pitched the ball in the official touch. Ruth provided the fireworks with a first inning home run. The 60,000 people furnished the color and noise. The baseball part left enough competition to make things interesting, as one enough for history, the Yankees winning 8 to 3.

Cleveland, Apr. 15.—The Cleveland Indians opened their American League baseball season by defeating the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 4, here yesterday.

Cleveland got away to a fast record breaking crowd of 25,162, breaking the record of some years ago.

Hunnefield's single in the eighth inning gave the Indians the winning drive for victory, after they had loosened up in the fifth inning to score three runs.

Boosts and Fair Criticism

Well friends of the sporting fraternity I got all excited and started to contribute this column and since the Editor permitted me this to freeze this point I am going to send him some stuff.

Do not be surprised if your name appears here at any time for a boost or to receive fair and constructive criticism in connection with any sporting activity in the City and district.

If some day you read a little bit of this column and find that if you would like to say whether or not you like this column, just drop a line to Play Fair, care of the Messenger of this paper. Of course I believe you will read this paper, but let's have your opinions.

Belleville Fair Play.

A burning question at some of the public schools right now is: Are Queen Street School's two permanent holders of the Softball Cup which has been competed for a number of years? Have they won it a sufficient number of times for him? Why not retain it for keeps. Queen Alexandra School have been practising for it, think the Trustees of this cup should declare themselves as soon as they can, though Principal Metli's School has a fine baseball team on its grounds, sure, Queen, Marr, King George and St. Michael's Academy are very interested as they will no doubt try again for the Champonship this year.

Just now things are humming in baseball circles so we will glance at the baseball situation.

There should be plenty of excitement for the fans of this game Post O.B.A.A. teams are listed to operate. Each and every league entry should be strong and as usual should stand out.

But do not overlook the Juniors. The Junior Moose and the B.A.A. Juniors of some years ago under the genial Secretary of the "Y", have got the O.B.A.A. and B.A.A. team in charge, enough said..... The Junior Moose are entering their third season and should profit by past experience.

Gordon Delaney deserves a boost when speaking of baseball matters. This progressive young man has handled baseball affairs for the past two seasons. We often wonder if he gets any support or help and he has put forward in the interest of the game. They should because we know what he has already accomplished.

Whether or not Ladies' Softball in the Bay of Quinte will repeat their success it did last year, is doubtful. Unless the League is well organized as it is was last season—we would say No. A new league or two is mentioned for entry but whether or not all the last year's teams operate is not definite.

Nothing is certain in this sport as yet. With the exception of one Manager there has not been much stir.

There usually days are coming on the golf players. This lengthy if ugly popular pastime is also being watched by the Sport Eye. Guess what I will tell you about this and then wait to read at a later daty.

Of the 150 telephone exchanges in London 32 are automatic.

On the Sport Trail

The report submitted by the Kiwanis Committee in charge of the 20-2 hockey league was given to the Kiwanis Club yesterday at their luncheon and it was most encouraging. No less than 140 boys ranking in age from twelve years to 18 years took part in the several series and every schedule was completed. This league has been in operation for some years and a great deal of material has been developed from the ranks. The league finished the winner of the intercity series with Kingston and the report stated that the uniforms supplied by the Kiwanis Club were an unusual measure responsible. Joe Shortt of the Y.M.C.A. who had worked so hard for the success of the league along with Ralph Bailey, the instructor, were heartily congratulated on the success of the season's activity.

Hockey is over and baseball is holding the boards. The Kiwanis Club has a baseball league under consideration by appointing the committee to act in conjunction with the "Y" in the Ki-Y League. Eddie Logan, Harold Cook, Walter Olmstead and Leo McIntosh were the members appointed by the Club and these members will no doubt work for the success of the league. Every series from amateur to juniors will be played and at the present time there are some likely ball players coming along. The members of the baseball team, coach and manager all give of their time to the instruction of these boys and they are greatly brought up in the environment of baseball.

Hall Canadians champions of the world in hockey for the second year in succession. The sporting editor had ted one thousand in this league picking them to be the series champs of comers. It was a hard fought series but the Flying Frenchmen put too much punch for the Hawks and a little too much experience. They had been tested and tried in several brilliant series in by-gone years and they simply would not be denied. It was pleasing to note that Howie Morenz, the greatest of them all, secured a goal that practically beat the Hawks although he had been held scoreless in all series till last night. A marvelous team is the Canadien, strong in all departments and one that will measure up to all the great teams of the past. Canada is proud of their winners today.

Under bright skies and with record crowds cheering them on the major leagues opened yesterday in a blaze of glory and from one till October the air will ring with the sound of wood meeting leather. A considerable amount of space has been used by writers of baseball during the winter months explaining the advantages of the new ball but from the hitting turned in yesterday, the latter still is ahead of the pitcher. It was shown that if the new ball is met squarely it will travel as far as the old one. The pitchers turned in better performances than opening day last year, the starting pitchers for the winning team in all but one contest were all route. Strength was exhibited in some of the weaker teams of last year and it looks as if each league will have a battle to the last game. There were but few upsets in the opening tilts, Brooklyn taking it on the chin from Boston in the ballpens, while the Senators had to succumb to a heavy batting rally of the World Champion Athletics in the closing frames. The Senators will be in there before the season ends.

Lawrence "Gilly" Goyer, clever center player for the St. Louis hockey team of the American Association is home for the summer..."Gilly" fresh as a daisy covered in with the cheer roadsters and will make his home in this city. The St. Louis team did not so have a good season but "Gilly" played as well as ever although he was not at the top in goal scoring. Welcome home.

WHEN TORONTO SAW 'GOING WILD" TORONTO HOWLED

Joe E. Brown's Latest Mirthquake Comes to Capitol Tomorrow

"Going Wild" is a farce built around an aeroplane and Joe E. Brown is reporter on my paper on which he pays me $7.50 a week. Lots more of Brooke. Accompanied by Lawrence Gray and Patricia Ellis, because a Miss Ellis is mistaken for a famous aviator and the whole town is on the station to greet him.

As may be imagined Brown takes it very big, the only fly in the ointment being that he is eventually chartered to a race by a real pilot (Virginia Pigeon), and because of a crush on Miss Ellis, Lew, her fiancee, tries to back out.

One of the funniest sequences in the picture is that in which Brown teaches himself how to fly in a hotel bedroom — if you want to know how to do it, it is advisable to see the picture.

Frank McHugh as the drunken hotel proprietor, plays a delightful performance. Ona Munson in the leading romantic role is not very beautiful, but has one of the best voices that has come to the screen. Lawrence Gray makes a very effective hero and a good foil for Brown.

The picture is literally interspersed with catchy songs.

The aeroplane race at the finish will find the audience alternately gasping in thrills, and shrieking with gales of laughter at Brown's antics in the air. Altogether a very funny mixture of flying and a surprise finish which is the latest sensation.

"Going Wild" commences at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow for the regular run and will be on from 7.15 and 9.15.

Jim Lindsay, a Lucky Rabbit cartoon, the News, "The Voice of Hollywood" and "The Lucky Fishers" will complete the program.

EXPLODES LEGEND OF JOHN'S JEWELS PUBLIC HOLIDAY

LONDON, April 15—English school children for generations have heard the legend that King John, after his argument with the barons at Runnymede, lost the crown jewels in The Wash, an indentation of shallow sea on the Lincoln coast.

A land reclamation project has been carried out there recently and in the House of Commons today a Conservative soldier member said they had been found of King John's treasure during the operations.

Kingston Penies Re-Organize

Kingston, April 15—The Kingston Penies Baseball Club has re-organized for the season and will use Intermediate "A" rating. Frank Smith is manager of the team and officers were elected as follows: Honorary president, Dr. A. E. Ross, M.P.; honorary vice-presidents, Dr. W. A. Jones, P.C., and Jas Sowards; president and manager, Frank Smith; secretary-treasurer, H. G. Brandon; coach and captain of the team are yet to be elected.

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

With two ball parks in town it sure looks like a bonner season. The old Alemite grounds are to be groomed so that there will be plenty of space for the minors to practice.

The new Intermediate League to be formed tonight will have for or possibly six clubs, namely, Deloro, Tweed, Corbyville, Belleville "Victorias" and possibly Trenton. This should make a real class "B" group as no club will have a runaway.

The local Victorias will meet Friday night to discuss the matter of uniforms, manager, etc.

The first practice will be called early next week so that the fans will be able to see what the local intermediates have up their sleeve early in the season.

"Stan" Burgoyne, late of Belleville, has been appointed on the Umpire staff of the T.A.B.A. in Toronto.

Harold Branscombe, who played the infield for the Nationals back in 1925, also was named and appointed a T.A.B.A. umpire for the coming season.

Altho' the Toronto teams start a month before the Central League, the boys from down east usually go a little farther in the O.A.B.A. hunt.

Aside from pitchers the outside rookies who seem to have batted their way into a starting place, include:

National League—New York, Vergez, third base; Cincinnati, Heath, first base; Phillies, Arlett, outfield, and Mallon, second base; Boston, Schulmerich and Worthington, outfielders, and Wilson, third base.

American League—New York, Hoag, outfield; Chicago, Simons, outfield; Detroit, Harvey and Gerald Walker and Ivy Shiver, outfielders.

Jack Quinn, who is starting his nineteenth year in the majors, doesn't set much difference between the playing strength of the National and American leagues. "They all look alike, no matter what league they are," declared the veteran spitballer, who seems to be successfully staging a comeback with Brooklyn. "It will be just as hard to fool the batters in this league as in the American, and, when the boys connect, that ball will go just as far. Frankly, I cannot see much reason for thinking that one league is stronger than another."

When notified he was to travel North with the Philadelphia Athletics' rookie squad, Glenn Leibhardt became incensed again. "So that's what I get for keeping quiet and acting nice around here," growled the son of a one-time famous pitcher. "From now on Liebhardt is going to be a tough guy, I'll show them who's running this trip."

Connie Mack says a baseball championship in a major league cannot be won in these days by two good pitchers. A team must have three and should have four. This analysis is the expert. Having two of the best pitchers in baseball, Mack should know. He might have added that championships cannot be won by some terrific batting attacks.

The interesting perz of his observation is that it confines the opinion of some old timers, who have been insisting that if any manager has two good pitchers he is more than 50 per cent. on his way to a pennant. However, we are quite sure that there is no manager in baseball who would reject a present of the two good pitchers now under Mack, and although the Athletics may not win their third championship in succession, we feel quite safe in saying that it will not be until after Grove has lost the use of his left arm and Earnshaw has lost the use of his right arm.

John King, the new Texas League umpire who recently acquired some unexpected wealth by striking oil on his farm, expects to have a pleasant summer umpiring and spending some of the money. He thinks it will be a vacation to umpire in the Texas League after working in a smaller circuit. "I ought to be a cinch in this league," he says, "with only five strikes and balls to watch, or only two bases to cover. Where I've been I had to watch everything."

A baseball shoe, designed by Lefty O'Doul, outfielder of the Brooklyn Robins, is proving popular among players, not only on the Robins and Phillies, but with members of other teams. It is manufactured by the Brooks Shoe Mfg. Company of Philadelphia and sold by Leslie Belknap, manufacturers' representative of New York.

CUBS DEFEATED PITTSBURG 6-2

St. Louis Opened Season Well by Trouncing Reds

Chicago, Apr. 15. — The Chicago Cubs, directed by the Nomad of the diamond, Rogers Hornsby, opened the 1931 baseball season yesterday with a 6 to 2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The target for jeers and derision will be succeeded Joe McCarthy as manager of the Cubs four days before the close of last season. Hornsby heard 45,000 fans yesterday cheer the ball club he has built in an effort to bring William Wrigley, Jr., the world's baseball championship.

Stellar pitching by Charlie Root, whose arm went dead on him last season in the thick of the pennant race, and hard hitting by Gabby Hartnett and Lester Bell featured the Cubs' victory.

Cincinnati, Apr. 15.—The St. Louis Cardinals started off a pennant clip in defense of their National League championship by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 3, in the game that opened the season for both clubs.

Larry Benton held the Cardinals scoreless until the fourth when a double into the crowd back of right center by Bottomley and a single through the box by Adams, counted a run.

Philadelphia, Apr. 15.—John McGraw's pennant-aspiring New York Giants opened up the National League season by defeating the Phils Delphia Athletics by 6 to 5.

The Giants trailed the Phillies up until the seventh inning, when the Giants slammed the ball for six hits and five runs. Critic's home run into the left field bleachers, scoring Vergez and Pullie, featured the rally.

Chuck Klein, Phillies centre fielder, began his quest for home run honors by connecting for two circuit blows. One came in the third inning, high up over the right field fence, scoring Arlett ahead of him in the fifth inning with none on base.

Boston, Mass., Apr. 15.—When Governor Joseph B. Ely threw out the first ball from the stands here today, baseball's season for 1931 was on. Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Robins, in their rally in the closing inning gave the Braves a 5 to 4 victory.

The Robins jumped ahead in the opening inning when they scored three runs and added a fourth run from the mound. The Robins scored a run in the third and were held scoreless in the remaining innings.

When King Kelly, the Boston catcher, was sold to Chicago in 1888 for $10,000, the country was astounded at the record price.

SEA CADETS ARE INSPECTED BY ADMIRAL STOREY

Local Corps Made Splendid Showing Before Large Crowd

Inspection of the Sea Cadets by Admiral W. O. Storey, C.B.E., was held last night in the Memorial Hall of the Canadian Legion, attended by many members of the Kiwanis Club also parents of the boys who are enrolled in the corps. This Sea Cadet corps is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and although the corps has been in existence for a short time, the progress made is admirable showing and were congratulated by the inspecting officer.

The guard of the Kiwanis Club members joined Admiral Storey at a reception held in the Queen's Hotel last night before the inspection. No addresses were given by the party enjoying a social half hour. Retiring to the hall instructor A. J. Richens who spent 22 years in the service, drilled the boys in the corps in fine order, rope tieing and marching, in each instance showing the advantage although they have been in training but a short time. The cadets marveled at the dexterity in which the Cadets made the several difficult knots used at sea. At the conclusion Admiral Storey congratulated the boys on their fine showing and instructed them in certain points in which they had been operating for inspection by Lieut. Commander Bloomfield, Saturday at 10 o'clock were taken out, showing marble of a greenish hue. In 1913 marble was struck 133 feet below the surface.

BALL PLAYER DIED OF FUMES

Windsor, April 15.—Albert Legace, 24 years old, member of the Windsor Baseball Club, was found dead in the rear seat of his automobile in the garage at the rear of his home last evening. Physicians said that death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning. Legace, according to his sister, Mrs. C. A. Peters, went to the garage about 1 o'clock. He failed to return and his brother started a search. They found the garage doors closed with the gasoline motor and the fumes from the exhaust of the automobile engine. Legace, the police believe, was overcome while repairing the engine Firemen used a pulmotor in an effort to restore life

ORIGINAL AND AMUSING EVENT AT JOHN STREET

"Track Meet" Was Sponsored by Young People's Branch

The meeting of the Young People's Society of John Street Church on Monday evening took the form of an inter-collegiate track meet, and those who took part in the sports gave original and amusing athletic event in their experience. The competitors were divided into three teams, B.C.I. with Alex McCoy as leader, and a College crup led by Alex Finlayson and O.B.C. team under Don Lobban's captaincy. The relay was run around in the colours of each institute of learning.

After community singing, Rev. Robert Hall formally opened the track meet. There were fourteen events, including the Quarter Mile and Grin, the Endurance race in which contestants found their partners and under chairs to say nothing of the strenuous one hundred yard dash in which marshmallows were thrown to partners who were to catch them in their mouths. O.B.C. team was declared winner and was presented with a flag as trophy.

Lunch was served, the various items on the menu suggesting the course of learning—toothpicks indicating for dairy, salmon sandwiches—dates—history, etc. The novel entertainment was greatly enjoyed by those present.

AMATEUR PLAY WELL DONE BY LOCAL TALENT

"Summer Is A-Comin' In" Presented at Collegiate

Trials, tribulations and troubles of a young man enamoured with three young ladies climaxed by a happy ending for all concerned, featured the annual presentation of the Y's Men Junior Club, Wednesday afternoon last night. Sparkling wit and humour mirth-provoking scenes and splendid acting by a well-directed and assembled cast, combined to make "Summer Is a-Comin' in" one of the hits of the amateur theatrical season in Belleville. This play recently enjoyed success in New York and other leading cities and the artistic of the stage proclaimed it as one of the best. The audience while not large, was an appreciative one, and Director Marshall Lott and all fifteen characters sent the patrons into gales of laughter. The production was directed by Miss Jessie Tuite of the Little Theatre Company.

The talent all indicated the results of long and careful training. The scenes produced by Fred R. Wells of Trenton, was effectively arranged, and the lighting arrangements by Mr. George Thomason of this city were splendid.

The play centred itself around the attempts of a young man to remove himself from a dangerous and disastrous entanglement with three pretty young maidens, his frequent proposals leading to no end of trouble, which he dispels by the simple expedient of promise suits. Willoughby Spencer (Oscar Gilbert) has designs matrimonial in a bachelor assignment near London with three other young men all of whom had been disappointed in love. The play opens with the three maidens engaged in deep conversation. Jack Willoughby, Harry Davenport, (Andie Reekie) and Ernest Wykow (Jim Gilmour), are all surprised to find the presence of a bevy of trunks and suit cases addressed to Willoughby Spencer. The latter disclaims all knowledge of the presence of the girls, but is soon convinced his colleagues that he is innocent.

A Happy Climax

Presently Sylvia, (Miss Leona Riggs), arrives from Australia. The latter announces herself as Willoughby's cousin who has fallen heir to the possession of bachelor's hall, stating that Willoughby Spencer is her husband, she must remain with him. The three maidens overhear the remark and Willoughby is adamant that his cousin leave at once. Further complications ensue. Sylvia is just as determined to remain. She sets out to win the approval of Mrs. Vokins, (Helen Sillman), the housekeeper, and her husband Vaslim, the butler (Rob Bateman) both of whom do all in their power to make Her Ladyship comfortable. Pauline Yelland the maid of the apartment quarrels with Vaslim and becomes devoted to Sylvia and is eager to help her. After Lester transforms the house from a drab old place into one of beauty, the scene is set for the wrought wonders in interior decoration.

Finally Miss Silvia was thrown into contact with Daisy Tapping, (Miss Ena Potter) and Violet Drinkwater, (Vera Brown), and Violet Drinkwater (Miss Kitty Gilbert) who have formed a sad story of blasted love.

Silvia, using all her ingenuity, plans a supper and without consultation with Willoughby, invites the Vokins and his wife who lend their co-operation.

Willoughby, who was absent on business in connection with the bachelor's estate, returns and storms and protests on his return but the plans go through and produces the last young people enter the dining room ready for the feast. Willoughby's wife was aghast at the turn of events and Willoughby's discomfiture is complete. Vokins and his wife who lend their co-operation.

The play throughout was appealing, the dramatic moments in the heated dramatics and was on the whole an excellent production.

Leads Played Well

Court Miller playing a leading role drew rounds of applause and in his own inimitable style he presented a part ready wit in such a manner as to bring down the house. The characters as played by Miss Riggs was splendid well, but particular mention must be made of the work of Miss Ena Potter in an important part to play. Her acting was natural and unaffected and she immediately won her audience and was given a splendid reception her outstanding ability.

Miss Brown as Violet Helen Sullman were both fitted for their parts and are to be congratulated. Mildred Lloyd who made an introduction as a Belleville audience was even better than in her previous appearance. Miss Vera Brown, Helen Potter and Ena Yelland with Alexander J. Reid as stage manager. Previous to the opening Community singing was given and Directors rendered a number of smart melodies. Alexander J. Reid presided with piano numbers between the acts.

Next Wednesday "A Comic" will be presented at Stirling on Friday, April 24th.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Reception was good last night and the programs came in fine, but from the station that was were ace high because a good many of the regulars were on the job. Really interesting enough too but there just wasn't any overflow of stations coming in that's all.

At 8.30 from WEAF Olive Palmer and the Revelers tuned in with a song for us the opening number by the ensemble being "Let Me Sleep" by Ben Ryan Viennese Nights. "March of the Toys" is included and a medley of Irish airs by Frank Crumit.

Grantland Rice interviews the new manager of the New York Americans, Lester Patrick, and Ted McCarthy tonight at 10.30 from WJZ. Ted is a great boxing fan, always good but tonight they are going to be extra good, because they offer as a highlight Duke Ellington's "Blood Indigo" and Ted's version of the big day since we heard that number.

Don Ageiara and Havana Band are on the evening tonight beginning at 8 and heard over the WJZ line-up. Smart band from Havana filled with the lot like a Mexican jumping bean as they are renowned that Polishers program at 10.30 tonight from WABC it is a program of harmony and melody featuring Ethel Waters, Lambert and Dick Robertson and Orchestra under Dan Lamb.

Uncle Abe and David of course at 6.45 from WEAF and the Varieties at 7 o'clock. Entertainers from the stage and screen are on the air tonight at 11.15 and Jack Benny and company follow at midnight. The Pleasure hour is heard from WJZ no less than three times tonight, at 8, 9 and midnight. It is the best at 9.30 and the last, over a big network, at 11.15.

The Revue at 8.30 from CFRB offers good entertainment tonight featuring Ted Weems Orchestra and Perry Is starred in a Broadway review and is well known as he is one time sang in Roxy's Gang programs.

The real highlight of the whole evening however will be the program at 9 from WABC and the Show Boat star and that program is the Rudolf Friml Cocktail Hour. The 8.30 and the station WABC and chain.

Just a final note of warning to the fans who are using the B.C.I. and your radio locators rearged or it will be just too bad. They ran out the 15 prize changes and the finals deadline is the penalty. Check and double check and you'll confound fans and rest easy for another year.

REV. A. E. PEPPER WILL BE ORDAINED

On Sunday, May 2, in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, the Bishop of Ontario, the Right Rev. A. Spencer, D.D., will hold an ordination service for priests and deacons. Archdeacon H. Canon Cragman, Gananoque, will be the special preacher. The candidates for the priesthood are Rev. L. Hardy, Rev. Ralph Bell, Rev. Arthur Bancroft, and Rev. H. A. Brayner. Rev. A. E. Pepper will be ordained to those for the diaconate are A. L. Bell, Rev. James Cook, Rev. Ben Sheffield, Trinity College, Toronto, and Messrs. Burnett and Secker, Montreal Diocesan College, Montreal.

CADI CONDEMNED DRUNKEN DRIVER

Brantford, April 15.—That is all the more reason why you should exercise his responsibility. A man who has been drinking cannot safely nor drive around cutting corners and ignoring ordinary understandings and very little attempt to bridge this gap by means of history was given by Magistrate Jones this morning, when he fined to a plea, for drunken driving, Alexander J. Reid, 24, of London. Sheehy crashed into a telephone pole on Colborne Street Saturday morning. Lennard Blower testified that he and his wife were independent on him. He was fined $10 and costs for careless driving and reminded for reckless driving.

ATTACK RAILWAY DIRECTOR SYSTEM

LONDON, April 15.—(By the Canadian Press)—This is the season for the annual meetings of the four big English railway companies. With railway dividends, except in reared instances, a thing of the past, and shrinking stockholders on this matter are separated into two camps. The first advocates a drastic reduction in the number of directors and their offices. The second is more anxious as to whether the Board, leaving aside its size, contains the best men that are available.

The four English groups have among them 92 directors, whose fees average about $3,750 per annum. Obviously this is a low remuneration for a high-class job. Many directors, of course, are appointed with the intention of their giving service and their knowledge in relation to the many forms of specialized business which the railways cover in the scope of railway activity.

"Lack of the necessary expert knowledge and experience, and the fact that directors do not give their whole time to their duties, are the two weakness of British railway administration," declares The Saturday Review. They are natural weaknesses. In England as in no other country, there has always been an almost complete separation between the executive and the administrative sides of railway undertakings and very little attempt to bridge this gap by means of history directors. Such a system would be bad in itself; it is obviously worse when a non-expert Board obstinately refuses to co-ook experts, for which reason the general manager or chief engineer of a British railway company has ever been permitted as sit on the board and is, resigned his executive functions. As for the suggestion that the national director should be chosen from the chairmen of the various executive hierarchy, that is regarded by chairmen as the consummation of indecency and major blasphemy."

Clean inside-well outside!

THEY LOOK IT

"GUESS that big cream-can isn't going to scare us any Sister! Mother's watching us! C'mon!"

Doctors pretty well agree that (barring germ diseases) most illness, most lack of pep and ambition, are due to failure or inability to keep "clean inside".

In blaming this condition for most of our sickness, so they agree also on the safe way to relieve it—keeping clean inside by the NUJOL type of treatment. Nujol is not a medicine at all—it contains no drugs. It is colorless and tasteless, and children love it.

Two things you have to remember if you want to enjoy "Nujol health." One: Don't expect results overnight.

Two: Be sure you get Nujol. Your druggist has this pure, drugless product in a sealed package, trade-marked "Nujol" to protect you. Don't you think it's worth trying?

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

"And now you hate me like poison, I suppose?"

"No, I just hate myself for being dumb. Come on and put me in a taxi, Major."

But then Dolly and Mr. Malvern came in.

"Everything is thoroughly understood. I'll see you tomorrow, Malvern," the Major answered.

Dolly ran up and gave me a hug. "That's just Kit," she whispered, "now you'll have everything you want."

I didn't answer but merely nodded and went out with Major Boyden. On the ride to my home he didn't say much but when he left me he suddenly blazed me.

"I didn't know, all those other times, that I was having a good girl—good luck to you always, Kitty!" He turned back to the taxi and I watched until it was gone.

What little chance I had to talk with Dolly in the store on Monday wasn't enough for me to go into explanations two days later when she got a chance she whispered to me, "You are certainly the dumb bell, Kit!"

"I'm sorry, Dolly, you know all that is absolutely out with me."

Turned bold me—Major Boyden told him, and after all I did for you."

We couldn't talk any more then and at the end of the day Dolly couldn't wait. Forrest Malvern and he be-reign and were waiting for her.

INVITATIONS CEASE

Dolly was pleasant with me after that, but not overly chummy, and never asked me to go anywhere with her.

"What's the matter with you and Dolly?" Molly asked me. "Have you got a 'mad' on each other?"

"No, not at all—only I can't afford the time that it takes to go around with her bunch," I tried to explain.

"Sometimes I think you are kind of goofy," Molly's rather caustic if serious answer to that.

Father used to joke now and then and ask me if I had got a half interest in the store yet. However, I couldn't complain. I was getting more money by this time and my invalid sister was getting better.

Now and then I went to a movie with Pete Thompson or on Sunday we'd go to Coney or across the Hudson to where some of his friends were camping, and use the canoes, and I tried to convince myself that I was happier than ever.

But I never remembering those other parties, the wonderful shows, the dinners and night club dances with all the gaiety. So many other girls enjoyed those things. It was a tough break that I couldn't go in with a bunch of the right sort of young men and enjoy the same things.

One day when I had quite a crowd at my counter, mostly women buying blades and shaving creams for their husbands, with now and then some man edging in to buy something, I noticed a tall handsome young man dropping on the glass counter and waiting his turn. It seem all almost as though I knew him, but of course I did not. However, I ignored the young man who had got to the comber ahead of him and, despite their protests that they were in a hurry, I waited on him.

He bought a dozen packages of blades and a quantity of shaving cream that doesn't need water or a brush.

"Thanks a lot for sliding me in ahead," he said in a low voice as he waited for his change, "I'm in something of a hurry."

He surely smiled at him.

BACK AGAIN

I was going into Canada on a fishing trip and this stuff was recommended," he went on.

I murmured that it was very nice and he took his small package and left.

The next day he was in again and bought some other things. On the third day he was back for other purchases.

"Back from Canada so soon?" I asked.

To my surprise he seemed embarrassed but he managed to smile and murmur something about business and a change of plans.

When he came in again the fourth day he must have seen the amazement in my face. He leaned over and spoke.

"The truth is, I gave up the Canadian fishing trip solely because of you," he stammered.

"I don't know the answer to that joke—and I'm too much interested," I said crossly, because I was disappointed. He was just another of those fresh guys, after all, it seemed.

"It's no joke, I mean it. I just have to get acquainted with you and I don't know how to go about it—and you think I'm a druggist—you now don't you?"

"I hadn't though." I lied glibly. I had though a lot about him in those four days.

"Here is my card—that makes us half acquainted," he paused, and until ed at me, "now won't you tell me where to telephone you or to call on you."

"Why should you?"

A TOP NOTCHER.

"How can I help it?I mean—this isn't just a line. I do want to know you, I'll be in again tomorrow. let me know—don't disappoint me—look me up."

Before I could answer he was gone.

Mrs. Wayne, the nice little old lady who worked with me, came over after he left.

"Mr. Thornton has been watching you, dearie—better tell your young man not to come in so often, even I, he always does buy something."

Mr. Thornton was our floor manager and always nice to me.

I told Mrs. Wayne what he had said and showed her the card which bore the name: "Mr. M. Thad Parsons."

"Of—of course, I remember his pictures," she exclaimed.

"Pictures? Is he anybody in particular?" I asked.

"Is he anyone in particular? My dear, your boy friend, or would-b boy friend, is a top-notcher. He chums around with the Prince o Wales."

"Honestly?" I asked.

Mrs. Wayne crossed me.

"He is acquainted tomorrow!" . declared.

After I told Mrs. Wayne that I would become acquainted with this Mr. M. Thad Parsons the next day I was sorry I said it.

All the way home from the store I thought of him, tall, handsome, wonderful dresser, and type I adored.

He was just having fun with me. He didn't want to become acquainted he wouldn't be back the next day—not so much luck! Mrs. Wayne would have a good laugh at my expense. Still I had his card. He had promised to come back, he had said that he "just had to" get acquainted with me.

He had said he was going to Canada on a fishing trip and then he came back for more short three days and finally confessed that he gave it all up in hopes to become acquainted with me.

I wouldn't take any chances; I would be ready. On a small slip of paper I wrote my name and address and added:

"There is a telephone in the hall; we are just poor people and do not indulge in private 'phones."

I did it for a purpose. If he did ever come to see me he would know what to expect.

THAD AFFEARS

Just about noon the next day Mr. Thad Parsons appeared at my counter. I wondered what he would think if he knew that I had been down in the book department and I looked him up in a social register.

I was waiting on a customer at the moment. He loitered about until she had gone and then gave quite a sigh for some blades.

"One can always use them, they keep, you know," he said, smiling at me and adding in a lower voice, "I hope you won't disappoint me."

I shoved out the folded slip of paper. He gave a glance at it.

"When do you have luncheon, Miss Mason?" he asked.

"At one o'clock."

"With you have it with me?" He named a still famous old hotel down near Washington Square. "I have a car with me and I'll get you back in time."

I agreed and he said he would meet me. I told him where the entrance was that the employes used.

He was there with a cute little car and I noticed that the license number was extremely low. I knew that low license numbers were issued to those who had got to the comber ahead of him and, despite their protests that they were in a hurry, I waited on him.

He bought a dozen packages of blades and a quantity of shaving cream that doesn't need water or a brush.

"Thanks a lot for sliding me in ahead," he said in a low voice as he waited for his change, "I'm in something of a hurry."

He surely smiled at him.

Before I could answer he was gone.

Mrs. Wayne, the nice little old lady who worked with me, came over after store just in time.

Molly saw me getting out of the car and so did Dolly Hawkins.

"She knocks 'em cold and drags 'em away with her—th' cute little sireven!" Molly exclaimed as I gave inside the doorway.

That made me giggle.

TRIBUTE FROM DOLLY

But Dolly grabbed my arm as we stepped into the next elevator.

"My hat off to you—and I thought you a mere babe!" she exclaimed.

"He—he's just a friend, a nice boy," I stammered.

"Don't you think I haven't seen enough pictures of Thad Parsons to recognize him. Kit, you are a Wow for luck? Dog-gone it!"

That was about the way I felt—awfully lucky to have a wonderful young man like Thad Parsons get acquainted with me.

I had forgotten that I half promised to go to a movie with Pete Thompson. And the next night just as I was coming out with Thad Parsons, who had called for me, I met Peter coming in.

"Hello, Peter!" I cried, to hide my confusion.

Thad Parsons lifted his hat. Peter did the same. Then he stood and watched me get into the swell car—another one, this time, with a chauffeur.

I hoped Peter wouldn't be sore, but if he did it would be just too bad, and I laughed at the idea of comparing Thad Parsons with Peter Thompson.

I wore the blue dress I had worn when I first met Mister Parsons. It was my only really nice and becoming dress. We went to one of the swellest of hotels—a place I never expected to get inside of except as the foyer.

Everything I said was wicked, I know. The head waiter got us a table, and we had a dinner that was a revelation to me. After that we went to see a big revue that had opened that very week. Thad Parsons was the most entertaining man I had met at this time. He was forever saying clever things, he was wonderful company and now and then he would whisper something sweet to me. Half a dozen times he said, "There ought to be a law against a girl looking as gorgeous—it's positively a menace to men with weak hearts."

Once I told him that from the way girls around us were staring at him that I thought he was just about the answer to a maiden's prayer.

AN HOUR OF DANCING

"Kitty, you don't need a line!" he answered, with mock reproach. It was the first time he called me "Kitty" to me.

"How about just an hour of dancing?" he asked after that. "I don't know you have to work and cannot stay up all night."

So we went to a quiet place that looked like a millionaire's home, or the way I imagined one would look. People were dining there, there was a little show going on, white aproned servers and at one end of the big dining room a regular bar, except that it was all glass, top, sides and even the foot rail, and so were the drinks mixed.

At exactly one o'clock Thad—I had started to call him "Thad" by this time—left me at my home.

"I have to run down to the north shore, Manchester-by-the-Sea, you know. I'll drop you a line and see you in a week or less," he said, and he patted my hand, but made no offer to kiss me.

All other parties I had known paled into insignificance beside this one. Here was youth, gaiety, a fine, jolly young man, a say little party of two and none of the dreary petting and double-meaning sayings and rather raw stories that Dolly and her crowd were forever laughing at.

I went to sleep, happy, despite one little cloud—I couldn't always wear this blue dress and I couldn't afford many good clothes. Still, good clothes had to be worn if I went out with a wealthy young society man like Thad.

JUST LIKE A NOVEL.

My sister Cora didn't seem to enthuse very much when I raved about the party next morning at my hurried breakfast.

"He might be in love with you, but the chances are he won't," her pouty face and hopts to make a younger. she said.

I saw father shake his head at Cora.

"Kitty understands what I mean," Cora declared.

"No one will make a conquest of Kitty until she is ready to be won—let the child have a little pleasure," my good old Dad said.

Mrs. Wayne, whom I told, was all in twitter.

"Just like a novel I read once—imagine marrying into that family," she cried.

I laughed at her, but at the same time I had already imagined it, or tried to imagine it.

Dolly didn't show up to work that day.

At the end of the week she hadn't been in. She didn't even come to get her pay envelope for the half week she had worked.

I remember this very well because it was the day after I had been out with Thad. I had wanted to tell Dolly about about it.

I never did tell Dolly, for I never saw her again—she just utterly disappeared.

SURPRISE

On Monday I found a letter from Thad when I got home, just a little note saying he would see me the following Thursday.

That made me happy.

And then a stout man, with his wife, who had stopped at my counter, kept eyeing me until I was nervous and a little bit sore, but was too whispered to his wife and she beamed on me. I never I wasn't sore any more, just curious. It was his wife who spoke.

"Dearie," she said, "you shouldn't be working here—you should work for us—so much easier, so much bigger wages."

"What is that?" I asked.

"A model you should be, a cleak and suit model—a model for swell Paris gowns that we make," then she stopped and whispered the salary. I almost clutched the counter I was so surprised.

I was so surprised over the suggestion of this stout woman and her equally stout husband that I become a model for Paris gowns that I didn't at the moment get the funny side of it.

You should model for Paris gowns that we make," the woman had said. "I'm sure I have that only an exceedingly small per cent of so-called models are beautiful as you."

But it was the money she mentioned that interested me. I had no idea they paid so much.

"She is busy now, Lena, maybe she will come to us later," her husband said.

I agreed to that and he gave me a card. I promised to go to see them during my luncheon hour within a few days.

The salary would be three times the amount I was getting in the store. That would not only mean more comforts for my sister and her two children but it would mean more and better clothes for me.

I left the store with the prospect of better clothes that appealed most to me for the future, you know that. Those men think that all girls like to be well dressed and that they own them if they buy them a few clothes.

Father was inclined to agree with Cora.

"It doesn't sound so very good," he said.

I had an idea that it would be a small establishment because the man and his wife were small. Mrs. Mieres, had been in the store together and appeared nice. In the establishment they would have a waiting list, I figured out.

But I was mistaken. Mrs. Wayne gave me half of her luncheon hour. We often did that in the store. They allowed me an hour and a half and I went to the address. To my surprise they had two whole floors in a fine building given up to "MODEL CREATIONS!" was spread right across the block.

Mr. and Mrs. Mieres were in a private office having luncheon that had evidently been brought in. I told them frankly about the objections at home.

"We have plenty girls who are glad to get out, and plenty who do not," Mr. Mieres said. And to his wife, "Why not you go and see the Poppa?"

She said that she would, and this time I went to see Mr. Poppa. They were altogether too anxious. Mrs. Mieres must have given my thoughts because she said, "Brunette, red-heads, we get plenty; but blondes like you, with such blue eyes—real blue, you'understand—are not so plentiful. And we can make you look red on your type than on any other," was her explanation.

SEES HER FATHER

Mrs. Mieres did seem to see father and Cora a couple of evenings later. I suppose she was through explaining there were no more objections.

"You are making a great mistake, jumping around like that," Mr. Poppa Jon warned me when I gave my notice. My wife was head of our department. I named the money, and he had the nerve to tell me he didn't believe it.

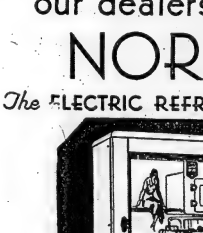
"Don' tell me you are going to be married!"

"I won't for it wouldn't be true—at least not for a long while."

THAD IS ENTHUSIASTIC

"Engaged, eh?"

"There's a young man who wants to marry me——"



"Cue? There must be at least an army of them, Kitty."

"But I'm not engaged." I finished, and then I told him about the new position, watching keenly to see if I could detect any objection on his part.

ALFONSO'S ABDICATION

With the abdication of King Alfonso, the last figure of the days which controlled the Holy Roman Empire has stepped out of the picture of sovereignty. Alfonso belonged to that great line which ruled that unique organism, the Holy Roman Empire, though the latter was supposed officially to end in the year 1806.

Thrones have perished in the years of disintegration through the new spirit which has been evident in the world in the past two or three decades. Spain held off the ominous day through a dictatorship, but with the astuteness of the Spanish monarch could not hold back forever the growing tide of republicanism.

In one country and empire yet the monarchy thrives and that is in the British Isles because the royal power is today a responsible power. The British monarchy is not the same thing as the Spanish monarchy which has just fallen. British royalty is in touch with modernism in political thought. Britain solved her problem of the kingship many generations ago. King Charles First lost his head, Charles Second dallied but he saw more wisely than the Stuarts generally, James Second lost his crown. What England solved in this way, France tried to solve one hundred years later in the overthrow of the monarchy which was accompanied by a deluge of blood and a period of licence and extravagance which led on to the Napoleonic Wars and formed the cradle of the Europe which was thrown into the fiery furnace of war in the year 1914. Spain, most conservative of countries is the latest to give way, and she has fallen because she took no steps to bring about a gradual change. The dictatorship was only a temporary expedient. It could never hope to be the solution. Italy on the other hand has used the dictatorship by the people in Mussolini without overthrowing the crown. Alfonso, credited with astuteness and political sagacity beyond that of most men, was seemingly not so wise as the King of Italy, who was content to accept the dictatorship of the people's movement in the Black Shirts. The outcome in Italy no one knows but Victor Emanuel appears to be fairly steady on his throne.

In the heyday of Athens and of Rome there were kings and then republics. The republic broke down in Rome and gave way to the dictatorship of the Caesars which ushered in the long line of emperors which occupied the seat of the Roman Empire. Now again crowns are seen falling, there are dictators and in many places is heard the cry for a republic. What will be the end?

Britain seems to have achieved a compromise which bids fair to be the most enduring form of government, possessing the advantages of a responsible government and the principle of the kingship.

ESTIMATES

It is a matter of great interest to the people of South Hastings to know that the estimates brought down in the House of Commons on Monday contained substantial votes for a number of projects, the continuance of the construction work at the air camp in Sidney, the dredging operations in the Bay of Quinte, the vote of $35,000 for entomology and improvement of the public building here, and the addition to the site of the latter.

Largest and most important from a labor point of view of course is the air training camp project which will be advanced by an expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars this year. Much of this money will flow into local channels and reach men who require work. The importance of the air training camp is apparent to anyone for it must be realized that the work which is to be done at this place will be of the utmost value to the Dominion as a whole. This would indicate why in spite of reductions in estimates generally, the air camp proposition is given full support.

It is pleasing to see that a branch of the Department of Agriculture, that of entomology, is to receive additional monies for research work. No one knows better than the present member of South Hastings, Mr. W. E. Tummon, how important a factor is research in the development of the field in the face of cuts in other branches of the administration, research in agriculture is to receive a good support.

The work of dredging at Telegraph Light Narrows and Point Anne is important for navigation of the Bay of Quinte and money expended on the public building structure which has a very important bearing upon commerce.

The last of other grants which appear in the estimates are gratifying to the people of this riding because it is realized that they are important not only for the present year, but have great permanent value, and are not only of local importance, but also of Dominion-wide interest. The interest thus evinced by the people in this field in seeing that the estimates contained these important grants, will be appreciated by the people of the riding.

YOUR WAY

By Aline Michaelis.

Never mind the worry,
Never mind the care,
There still must be some trouble
To every being's share,
But things will soon be coming out your way!

Though you may have often
Been misunderstood,
You will never stumble if you choose
Pathways always honest.
Always kind and good,
There isn't any chance for you to lose!

Some men ask for honors,
Others seek for fame,
There are those who want life glad and gay;
But the best of dowers
In this living game,
Is knowing things are coming out your way!

SUCH WONDERFUL WEATHER, couldn't be better if we made it ourselves. A nice warm sun and a breeze just cool enough to put a tang in the atmosphere, reminds us that the Lord tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, and the things some folks have to worry about are made lighter by reason of the brightness of the day. God's in His Heaven and all's right with the world, almost.

BLACK BAD LUCK is shadowing the Ringling Bros. circus this season. Before the season opened Lilian Leitzal, beautiful star of the flying rings and of injuries sustained while doing her act in a European theatre; Saturday two performers were injured in Madison Square Garden, New York, while doing their act; one of them, Charles Seigrist, will never thrill circus fans again with his marvellous performance on the flying trapeze. For thirty-seven years he has been risking his life above the net, Saturday, the inevitable happened and he is in hospital with a broken neck—but the show must go on.

Q.—May the maid of honor ever be dressed in pure white?

A.—Never.

Q.—At which side of her dinner partner does a woman sit at a formal dinner?

A.—At his right.

Q.—Is it wise to be too intimate and friendly with new acquaintances?

A LAWSUIT ADDED TO THE RISKS OF GOLF

Golf is a fascinating game, but we doubt if players, especially those who are green at it, consider sufficiently the dangers they run. At the recent court of sessions in Ottawa a lady brought action for $500 damages against another resident because she was hit by a ball driven by him on one of the local golf courses As a result she had to undergo an operation a month later in one of the Ottawa hospitals. The plaintiff claimed that the defendant had been negligent through the fact that he had not given warning that he was about to drive by calling "fore". The defendant, on the other hand, claimed that people taking part in golf had to undergo the risks of the game. Players have been stymied and have suffered other afflictions. Are they now to run the risk of lawsuits? The judge has taken the case under consideration.—Mail and Empire, Toronto.

Jack Miner provides another example of the men of today who refuse to yield to the encroachments of time At 65 he is planting Scotch pine, that he may enjoy their shade when the resting-time of life arrives. A GREAT DAY AT KINGSVILLE

One of the accompaniments to the prevailing spring weather is a renewal of interest in wonderful bird life. At this season all things renew their vitality and revive their activities. The soil, dormant during the winter, greets the warm and genial sun, and prepares to give to all living things the sustenance necessary to their existence, Mother Earth resumes her age-old duties towards the myriad and varied forms of animal and beast and bird that depend upon her bounty.

This springtime stirring of life is first noticed in the migration of the birds, and because of this all roads have of late been leading to Jack Miner's sanctuary at Kingsville. Wednesday was at the height of what tells these serial travellers when it is time to move either north or south in the seasons change. In a manner of speaking, man's curiosity and interest prompted a visit to Jack Miner's house at Kingsville, where the feathered wayfarers of the air fare found it pleasant and convenient to break their journey and give rest to wearied wings.

The warm weather brought the crowds of humanity, but it had also urged the resting wild geese to be up and away. The geese are the most cautious swans, perhaps recalling the fickle nature of April, remained a few days longer. Saturday marked the sixty-sixth birthday of the indefatigable and happy Jack Miner, and perhaps it was for this occasion that the geese tarried a little longer—nice tribute to a hospitable host.—The Globe, Toronto.

EVOLUTION IN GOVERNMENT

Neither capitalism nor democracy have been produced by the simple method of mapping out how they come into effect, as it were, overnight. Both are the product, for the present stage by a process of gradual growth. There is no reason to believe that this process has reached its final stage. In the natural course of events it may be expected to continue in the future as it has in the past, making life constantly more tolerable for the great mass of the people. It is contained within itself that, irrespective of the success or failure of the Russian experiment, it has proved the necessity of anxious efforts to secure something "such as good".—The Telegram, Toronto.

SHOCKING

A youth of 17 was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary by Mr. Justice Kelly on Saturday. The crime for which this punishment was imposed was a revolting one, so revolting, in fact that it provoked no thoughts of sympathy for the perpetrator.

Yet it is also a shocking state of affairs that this youth must be sent to the penitentiary for life when it was admitted in court that he is a mental defective. Justice did not ask he had been anxious to find an institution where he could possibly be treated but as there was none, he was compelled to treat him as a dangerous offender and to send him to the penitentiary for the rest of his life.

The evidence apparently went to show that the young man was a moron of the delinquent type. Plainly in a civilized society the young criminal ought to be locked up, but in the interests of justice we will be asked for the mental defectiveness he obviously suffers from. As it is, the courts finds no alternative but to send him to the penitentiary where he will be simply placed in a cage, and through the bars will be allowed human contact only with his keepers and fellow wrongdoers.—Ottawa Citizen.

WOULD LIMIT HEIGHT OF THE SKYSCRAPER

The height of New York's skyscrapers should be limited, in the opinion of Professor Yrar Tengbom, Stream-in-Chief of the Royal Board of Public Works of Sweden, who has come to this country as Sweden's official delegate to the Architectural and Allied Arts Exposition, which will be held in Grand Central Palace from April 18 to 25 and at which Sweden will be represented by an exhibit of contemporary architecture.

Professor Tengbom and Senor Pedro Ico Mariscal, delegate of the Mexican Government to the exposition, were guests of honor at a tea given by the Architectural League at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton Wednesday afternoon.

New York has too many skyscrapers, in the opinion of Professor Tengbom, with consequent congestion of traffic and loss of light and air. The ideal arrangement, he said, would have been to arrange them so that each might have been surrounded by a green space. Since it is now too late for such an adjustment, he expressed the opinion that the height of the buildings should be limited.

The simplicity of skyscraper architecture he called admirable.

Such new structures as may come in architecture will be dictated by new construction material, he said. He predicted that skyscrapers should be shrashed in glass instead of brick and stone. He does not consider practicable. He thinks a building so treated would be too hot in Summer and to cold in Winter.

"There is such a thing as getting too much light and air," he declared.

Senor Mariscal explained that the skyscrapers he considered the most practical at the present time. Senor Mariscal explained that the official Mexican exhibit at the exposition would include research drawings, sketches, photographs and models showing the influence derived from pre-Columbian times to the present. Contemporary buildings in Mexico, he explained, are being built with reinforced concrete and steel, which have been found resistant to earthquakes. The skeletons are faced with brick and the walls covered with stucco or marble, he explained.

CALLS FOR REDUCTION OF ILLITERACY IN U. S.

WASHINGTON.—Despite its decrease, illiteracy continues to be "ominous, formidable and lamentably large," Secretary Wilbur said in a radio speech. In describing efforts to eradicate illiteracy, he referred to the services of John D. Rockefeller Jr., the Roosevelt Fund, Mrs. Harry Wilson Stewart, Alfred K. Stern, Leonido Talt the sculptor, and Thomas John H. Finley, associate editor of The New York Times.

"Recent returns from the Bureau of the Census of the United States show a reduction of illiteracy during the last decade amounting to 12.8 per cent" said the Secretary, "and if the these States reported 1,160,781 illiterates. In 1920 they had reduced that number to 1,013,632, or 147,158. The District of Columbia lowered its number from 10,309 to 8,811, which was a drop of 37 per cent. Alabama reduced its number nearly 27,000, Mississippi nearly 20,000 and Arkansas more than 25,000.

"A critical observer may scrutinize these figures, find in certain States and embarrass us with a sharp question. For instance, why should there be 158 in ten years, or 12.8 per cent, in one State, and 1,160 in five years in three States it may take seventy years to eradicate illiteracy. We may turn to one State, Mississippi, and say it is true that about 30,000 persons have been taught to read and write there in a decade, but there still remain 166,781, and at the rate of the decrease it will require nearly seventy years to achieve the lowest minimum in that State.

"We have some organization. We need more. The illiterate is being reached in many places. A great deal of school and activity is going to him. Recently the Office of Indian Affairs, in cooperation with the National Advisory Committee on Illiteracy, held an illiteracy clinic among the Blackfeet Indians of Montana. In less than two years more than 200 adults Indians, most of whom were more than 50 years of age, learned to do some simple reading and writing.

"The clinic was a success. It is to be hoped when the report is made public, it will attract the discriminating attention of all thoughtful Americans. What has been accomplished in a short time might be accomplished by the unfortunate citizens everywhere and of every race through simultaneous action reaching hundreds of thousands.

"It is hoped that all Americans will renew their energy in extending a helping hand to our millions of unfortunates who can neither read nor write. The illiterate is gaining additional courage in finding a sympathetic ear that helps him to a teacher. Confidence is created. That false pride which enchains him to the inferiorities of ignorance. With your help we shall have fulfilled our civic duty only when illiteracy is made negligible in this nation."

HIGHWAY SAFETY IS DRIVER'S PROBLEM

"There has been much striking improvement during recent years in highway construction, traffic regulation and every factor which should make for safety on highways, but it is difficult to place responsibility for the frequency of motor accidents upon anyone except the individual driver," says John D. Mansfield, president of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada Limited.

"Many manufacturers have left nothing undone to make the modern motor vehicle more comfortable and safer to drive. Lower centre of gravity, better motor cars more road stability, has reduced side-sway and made the car harder to upset. More power and better acceleration has made them easier to manoeuvre out of trouble. Hydraulic brakes are powerful, better equalized and less subject to skidding conditions have made braking action faster and more certain. Improved safety glass and transmission assemblies make gear shifting easier and faster. Metals used in motor car manufacture are stronger and lighter. Bodies are more scientifically constructed to resist strain and impact. Altogether, the automobile of today is a much safer vehicle to drive than the automobile of a few years ago.

"Driving conditions on highways and streets are better. Roads have been widened, sharp curves eliminated, have been eliminated, turns are banked, contiguous signs mark every highway hazard. Traffic control is being improved at congested intersections.

"Many railway level crossings have been eliminated and many more are protected by gates and warning signals. Much remains still to be done and be done along this line.

"There too, much should be fewer inexperienced drivers in proportion to the total number. This is evidenced by the fact that the great majority of new car purchasers are former owners, tried and sist. together with the practice of issuing and licensing of drivers, in time, in several provinces, would lead us to expect fewer accidents due to inexperience at driving.

"The continued operation of a host of older motor cars which are deficient in comparison with modern standards must be regarded as an increasing road hazard. The records, however, do not show that cars of this sort are responsible for a large proportion of accidents.

"On every material count therefore, the individual driver should be fayer in relation to the number of cars in operation, and if they are not so we must look to the habits of the individual driver for a solution of the problem.

"We have not before me a recent classification of accident causes, but from my own observations on the streets and highways I would list the following as the most common causes of accidents:

Attempting to pass where there is no room, or where one may be approaching from the other direction on narrow roads or bridges.

Excessive speed in approaching blind corners.

Miscalculation of the speed of approaching cars and of driver's own car in trying to pass a car ahead.

Trying to "cut in" with too close a margin of safety in heavy highway traffic.

Speeding up when another car attempts to pass.

Lack of alertness due to fatigue.

Failure to give proper signal of intention from his job of operating the car.

Trying to be first ahead at the green signal.

Disregard of signals.

"All of these are mental hazards which place the burden of highway safety squarely on the shoulders of the individual driver.

"The only solution is in some way to bring home to drivers the fact that the vehicles they are using as indispensable instruments of pleasure or business require care and vigilance in handling.

"How is this to be done? Probably by a combination of legislation, awakened public opinion and education. The first, essential, however, is to recognize where the responsibility belongs.

NEW TYPES OF FLOOR NOW NEED NEW CLEANING METHODS

By Hannah Wing

No sooner have we learned to appreciate and value fine linoleum on our floors to the extent that it is given proper care and treatment then along comes some new type of flooring for household use. Tile and rubber tile floors have long been used in business buildings but their adaptability to certain household uses has but recently been put into effect. With these floors one must learn new cleaning methods.

The greatest known enemy of rubber is grease as it causes it to become soft and spongy and to lose color, consequently soft soaps or oil soaps cannot be used on rubber as they are grease products and the strength of lather or suds leaves a film on the surface to act as binder for dirt. Most soaps also contain caustic or other corrosive alkalies which are detrimental to the color of flooring as they create a film which is hard to remove by rinsing process and therefore leaves a binder to hold dirt.

To obtain ideal results in cleaning rubber flooring it should be scoured by the abrasive method which gives a similar action to that obtained by a finisher using polished particles, such as fine furniture or automobile bodies when rotten stone is used to bring out the soft, smooth, fine grained lustre. The action of the abrasive on rubber results in a smooth glossy finish which prevents the penetration of dirt and therefore holds color. The abrasive, however, must not be of a formation which would scratch or mar the surface, or contain anything of a lye or caustic nature or other injurious fillers to soften the rubber and fade the colors.

An abrasive of soft flake mineral, which scours or rubs the floor but breaks down under pressure and therefore does not scratch or mar the surface is ideal if it does not contain any injurious fillers to harm the flooring or hurt the hands.

The two-mop two-pail method is best for cleaning rubber tile floorings; one mop for applying the cleaner and the other for rinsing. Before washing the floor it should be carefully brushed with a hair push brush to remove the free dirt.

In cleaning tile, dampen the surface to be cleaned, sprinkle lightly with the abrasive powder, scrub well with soft brush or mop, rinse with clean water and dry with mop or cloth, thoroughly removing all the cleaning powder from the floor. If the powder collects in a white line about the joints of the tile, it is an indication that too much is being used. Such discoloration can be removed easily with warm water. Cleaning the floor in this way will bring out the lustre of the tile, after which, subsequent cleanings with the mop in which a little detergent is used, and rinsing and drying, should be sufficient to keep the floor clean and sanitary.

The same method is used in cleaning tile which may be followed by use of strong alkalies or made too slippery for comfort and ease in walking by the use of soap.

BOTTLE OF MADEIRA
100 YEARS OLD

Worcester, Mass.,— A hundred years ago the American Antiquarian Society assumed the custody of a bundle of manuscripts and a bottle of old Madeira wine. Through the century the society has faithfully kept its trust.

The manuscripts, some of them priceless autographs, have been carefully preserved. The black bottle of wine has reposed in the archives, undisturbed, just as it was when it was placed there by Christopher Columbus Baldwin, then Council of the Antiquarian Society, of which Calvin Coolidge is the president. The manuscripts will be examined and the bottle will be opened. Councilors are wondering whether the content remains wine or whether the great age has caused deterioration to vinegar.

The 4th of October, 1831, was a gala day in Worcester. The celebration marked the close of one hundred years from the incorporation of Worcester County as an organization of the courts. The Worcester County Historical Society caused to be prepared a bottle of the same Madeira wine that was served at the centennial dinner.

The wine and a number of manuscripts were deposited in the custody of the Antiquarian Society, to be opened when another one hundred years should have elapsed.

The manuscripts include a lengthy account of the day's proceedings by Mr. Baldwin. Of the dinner he wrote:

"The procession returned to the tavern of Jonas Edmonson, and the we have a glorious time. The dinner was very good and was composed of a variety of articles, to wit: Soup, roast beef, roast pork, boiled mutton, roast turkeys and ducks and geese, boiled turkeys, fowl, accompanied with oysters, pies of many sorts, and last but not least an abundance of claret wine, a bottle of which is to be deposited with this report."

It was a gay and lively dinner. Governor Levi Lincoln was the toast master, and following prayer by the Rev. Dr. Aaron Bancroft, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, a series of formal toasts were proposed and drunk in the vintage of the surviving black bottle.

Good Manners

Corn on the Cob—An Eternal Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Recently in your column someone asked about an invitation to a wedding and bridge in honor of a coming marriage, subscription $2.50. I think I misunderstood and know you will help me. Surely one does not charge $2.50 for a bridge and luncheon for one's own reception. Please tell me just what is meant by "subscription $2.50."

I wouldn't miss your column for the world, as it is always interesting and has been very helpful to me.

2. At an outdoor corn roast is it permissable for one to use both hands on the ear of corn. I have seen it done so much.

3. What do you think of my letter-paper and writing?

Reader.

1. I wondered too about that subscription charge, but since that point did not have anything to do with the question that was asked, I took it for granted that it was given for some other cause as well as the engagement announcement.

2. It is best to use only one hand. This social question of how to eat corn on the cob is a problematic one, and especially so when the occasion is such an informal one as a picnic. When the corn is eaten at table, it is best to break the ear, if this is possible, and then it will be easier to eat the corn, one half of the ear at a time. Then, too, it is easier to hold it.

3. Your letter paper is excellent (indeed, this kind of paper by this manufacturer is one of the best papers on the market), of a charming ivory tint, and of appropriately large size for your handwriting. Your letter form is exceptionally good too (except the abbreviation of the name of your state), and your handwriting splendid. The only suggestion that I would make is a plea for a more generous margin, so that you will give your good-looking handwriting a frame. Try this, and let me know how you like it.

A Suitable Gift For a Gifted Lady

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As I am a firm believer in your column, and a constant reader, I have been elected to write to you. We are eleven young men and girls and this is our problem.

"A month ago we were chosen as the cast for a play and a friend of the group offered to direct it. She will accept no money for her services although her time is valuable; so we as a group, wish to present her with some token of our appreciation. We have discussed it for days, but can find no solution; flowers and candy have been voiced time and again.

She is an elderly widow, teaching school. A dainty, but colorful dress-

Can you offer any suggestions?

One of many admirers.

Thank you for your gracious expression.

It's a joy to make suggestions for this important gift. How about a handsome leather portfolio, with her name on it? Inside the flap, in dignified letters, small, and in fine gilt. Don't give her one with handbut the feminine-looking ones with two inside clasps. She would find thousands of uses for it in her profession. The black leather ones are especially good-looking, and they last for years.

Or some especially beautiful handkerchiefs, white, sheer, and beautifully monogrammed.

Or, and this is an especially good gift, a traveling case, with handsome fittings, and each monogrammed. Or a set of books that you know she would like to have. Or a dresser set, monogrammed. Or a portable typewriter. Or a desk set.

It would make an especially gracious gift, I think, if you would choose something that could be practically marked with her monogram or initials.

Ma took me for a ride in the Sparrox this afternoon after skool, and all of a sudden there was a slapicious noise sounding like one of the tires punckturing itself.

Being just what it was, and ma drove up to the cerb and stopped, say ing, O dear I have no more ideer how to change a wheel than the man in the moon. I wouldent know how to start, and im sure Id never finish.

Well according to the theoretical rule of the road, if a woman has a flat tire all she has to do is stand there and look in deep distress and some man will infallibly immeedilty change it for her, she sed.

And she got out of the car and began kompide of the flat tire pokeing one finger into it with a sad expression, and about five men wawked past and looked at her as if they thawt it was a intristing site and tryed to go on, and I sed, Maybe you dont look in distress enough ma.

I think Ill get the hang of wheel ranch ma sed. A woman holding a munkey wrench is never a distressing thing to see, she sed.

And she reached in the tool case and got the munkey rentch and stood there loking at it doubtful, and some more men dident stop to help her, me saying, G wiss, ma, nobody's stopping.

Are you trying to tell me some news by any chance? ma sed. Meening she knew it herself, and she started to hit the outside of the wheel with the munkey rentch to make sounds, and some man stopped and looked at her a while, saying, Having trubble, madam?

Well a little, I bleeve ma sed. I seem to have a decidedly flat tire and I fear that changing a wheel is not quite one of my accomplishments, she sed, and the man sed, I see, that's a garage about 2 blocks fersh-to up the street.

And he kept on going as if he had did all the duty he was going to do. Being a short man with a long nus tash and I ran to the garage and the man came and changed the wheel and ma payed him for it.

Proving theres always a way to get something done even if its not the most popular way.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

If a girl doesn't want to "look like that" when she goes out and places herself in the public eye she should put on her make up before a magnifying mirror which shows up effects of technique. With eye shadows that are green, blue, brown or purple as the case may be—there should be no quick service. Eye shadows even more than lip rouge can look very messy. Blue eyelash pencils are seen in cosmetic counters, but they aren't finding many buyers. Make-up is being soft podded, as befits the moods and modes of the moment; it is going subtle and tricky.

While soapy scrubbings are recommended for the removal of black heads, they aren't always successful. Better for cleansing pack made by combining two tablespoonfuls of kaolin, which is refined Fuller's earth, one teaspoonful of peroxide and enough warm water to form a paste, the consistency of whipped cream. Apply a thin film to the complexion and let it remain until it begins to flake. Lave away with warm water.

Undergarments that have not been rinsed free of soap may set up a state of dermatitis, make the skin surface of the body rough and reddy. The proper laundering process is to make the garments in cold or tepid suds, to wash in warm suds, to put through at least four clear rinsing waters. Powder puffs must be washed carefully, rinsed well, else they too will produce an irritation of the epidermis.

Facial massage has a value aside from its cleansing effects; it is a stimulating influence to the peripheral nervous system and it acts as a tonic to the blood streams. Any one in the facial chair, together with the administrations of the operator who knows her beauty oils, will put a tired woman on her toes. Nothing like it.

Dryness of the hair is due to insufficient secretions of the sebaceous glands. There should be a hot oil treatment before the shampoo, and a small quantity of mineral oil or olive oil frictioned into the scalp afterwards. Vaseline will serve.

A Household Medicine—They that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household medicine and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is an inexpensive medicine. So, keep it at hand as the call for it may come most unexpectedly.

To Criminals, Finger Prints bring Detection and Punishment

"Look for a finger print"—such is the first thought of detectives and policemen when arriving at the scene of a robbery or murder. When they find a print, they photograph it and compare it with similar ones among the many thousands on file at police headquarters. They are often able to track down the criminal in a surprisingly short time. Thus the police protect society through the finger prints left by evil men.

YOUR FINGER PRINTS BRING DISEASE TO YOU!

You leave prints, too, on everything you touch. But they are not criminal prints. Your prints may be laden with germs. Your fingers carry germs from handling things others have touched. A door knob—a library book—a dollar bill—these are things that have been touched by many hands—contaminated hands. Hands that may have checked a sneeze or cough, and thus become infected. Colds may be conveyed in this way. Even the shaking of hands spreads countless colds.

On All Your Food, Too!

Then when you eat some fruit, a cookie or a chocolate, these germs enter your mouth where they breed and multiply. They soon attack your system and if you are run down, you may catch "Flu," or a cold. Life Extension Institute lists 27 germ diseases that may be conveyed by the hands in this way.

Children must be Protected

These germs are everywhere. We cannot escape them. Our hands are always in contact with something that others have touched. But children are particularly susceptible to infection. Remember to make them wash often—but with a germicidal soap—and always before every meal.

The Pleasant Way

Lifebuoy Soap forms the pleasant way to do this. Millions the world over use it to protect them from infection.

Here is an exquisite toilet soap, based on two palm oils—a luxurious soap—a beauty soap. No better soap was ever created for the skin and complexion. But Lifebuoy also contains a germicide which either kills germs or makes them inactive.

So in a like way, a bath with Lifebuoy means freedom from body odours for many hours. No perfume, but a refreshing scent of safety that tells you it purifies and yet disappears in a few minutes. You will enjoy a bath with Lifebuoy and learn to love its extra-clean scent.

If you have not already tried this famous health soap, why not start to-day? Keep a cake on the wash basin and another for the bath. Let your family use it regularly. Let your children get the "Lifebuoy Habit." Protect them from germs and see the wonderful effect it has on their young skins.

OGAL KIWANIS CLUB WILL GO TO MONTREAL

Prof. William Tait Ph.D., of McGill Was Speaker

Vocational Guidance was the subject of an address given by Professor William Tait Ph.D. of McGill University yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club. The speaker took a different angle to the subject than former speakers on the theme of thoughtfully considering the matter. President George Cole occupied the chair and members of guests were welcomed the luncheon. Notice was given Jos Smith elected trustees that at the meeting luncheon would be held on Tuesday next, when the club will entertain Bill Mayall, Trident Glove-worker from Hamilton, a number of Hamilton members also a number from the Picton Club. This will be a home-city visit of Hamilton to Picton for the one made by the local boys last fall.

It was decided to journey to Montreal on May 19th next for an interchange visit with the St. Lawrence Kiwanis city. The Belleville Club visit that club some time ago and the members who made the trip are still talking about the real time they had. More than thirty members enrolled their intention of making a journey and the St. Laurence Club has arranged an excellent day's entertainment for the visitors. President Cole was away yesterday and Mr. Dave Mackey, Sergeant-at-Arms, and Burke delighted with a solo. Plans were completed for a golf match between the members demanded an entertainment committee also accompanied by a community singing of old favorites. Professor Tait explained the principles of Vocational Guidance stating that teachers of the present time in complete control of what occupation a student may follow. The principles of finding out the qualities and capability of each person was carefully met in detail. Professor Tait explained that there is now being taught in all the principle centres and the future of the old system of "hit or miss" dad, or the man seeking the right job. At present time the majority are square pegs in round holes but the system is soon hoping to save ages from a bottomless point of view to be much better.

TAKING A REST CURE

Especially for nervous, overwrought people a so-called rest cure now has a high yield most satisfactory results. In other words, if the individual can take complete rest in bed a few days in a place that is practically free from intrusion, and where his mind is occupied with not from worry as possible, it may help him greatly.

A severe case of nerves, to take a more lurid example, is one of the most wearied. If this cannot be accomplished, rest in bed over the week-end is a helpful substitute.

The diet should always be simple. Sometimes a pure milk diet is best; often the tendency is to overeat and, and therefore it should not be undertaken by those who are not physically fit.

The following two daily diets for a cure are designed for persons of well-nourished persons but can be altered in cases where the occupant is in bed is only for a day or so. No tables are taken from a standard cookbook. Swedish movements should be used and light massage as ten to ten in the morning. Do not overtax nerves with the alcohol rub in the form of a tonic recommended by your doctor. If these massages can be given by the patient, so much the better.

Diet

7:30—Cup hot water with juice of a lemon and 5 dried dates.

8:30—Cocoa with milk.

9:30— Breakfast 1-3 small fruit, 1 small slice toast with 1 spoonful butter, 1 soft boiled egg, cocoa cream.

12:30—3 glasses milk. Complete for one hour.

1:30—Fruit cup (1-2 each ripe grapefruit), small serving chopped meat loaf, 1 slice, baked sweet greens or spinach, medicated tomato salad with vinegar, large olives, 1 corn muffin with 1 spoonful butter, 2 heaping tablespoons apple tapioca, 1 cup cocoa with cream.

3:30—Exercise in bed 1-2 hour.

5:30—1 glass milk.

6:30-8:30—Supper — 1 shirred egg, rich asparagus on small slice of toast, 1-2 teaspoonful butter; 1 tablespoonful steamed cabbage; medium tomato and lettuce salad with 1 tsp. 3 each of celery, 1 corn muffin with 1 teaspoonful butter; 2 tablespoonfuls orange ice; 1 cup tea.

Diet 2

8:30—Cup of hot water with juice of half lemon and 4 dried figs.

9:30—Warm tub or sponge bath (avoid chill).

10:30—Breakfast — One half of orange or 1 medium sized orange; 1 slice toast with 1 teaspoonful butter, 1 sauce dish of stewed tomatoes, 1 cup coffee with 1 teaspoonful sugar and 2 tablespoonfuls cream.

12:30—2 glass milk and 1 graham bun.

1:30—Dinner — Small serving noodle; small baked potato; 2 heaping tablespoonfuls creamed vegetables (cucumber, onion or lettuce vinegar); 1 corn muffin or arrowroot biscuit with 1 teaspoonful butter; 2 heaping tablespoonfuls lemon ice, 1 glass milk. Complete rest.

3:30—Exercise in bed.

4:30—1 glass milk and 2 graham crackers.

5:30 Supper—1 egg scrambled 2 tablespoonfuls tomatoes, 3 tablespoonfuls spinach, 1 slice toast, 1 baking baked egg plant, half head lettuce salad with sugar, 1 slice whole wheat bread with teaspoonful butter, 1 cup custard, 1 glass milk.

8:30—1 cup hot milk with 2 biscuits.

Clean The Corn Field

There have been rumors that the Corn Borer Act would not be enforced this year, such rumors are unfounded. The Provincial Entomologist in March called a meeting of the corn borer inspectors and discussed with them their duties and gave instructions that the duties should be no slacking up in the enforcement of the act. He said the fight must not be any less aggressive as ever and the only safeguard against serious loss to the corn crop lay in a thorough clean-up every year; each farmer must do his part possible, consistent with efficiency. Hence farmers and also the municipalities in cities and towns are urged to co-operate by burning all corn remnants destroyed not later than May 20th.

Any person wishing to get further information on the borer and the best method of control should write to the Director of Statistics and Publications, East Block, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, and ask for a copy of Bulletin No. 63.

THOMAS MEAGHER DEATH WAS DUE TO NATURAL CAUSES

"This jury empanelled to enquire into the death of an unknown man found in the barn of Thomas Meagher on the Kingsley Highway, one mile south of the city, believe that the man died from natural causes and from evidence submitted, also believe him to be Thomas Meagher a wander by the age." The aforesaid hearing of the inquest was held in the police court rooms last night and was of short duration. Coroner Dr. W. W. Boyes presided and R. O. Duncan was appointed clerk. Witnesses and that were called. The chief evidence was given by Fred McDonald, his son John, and Provincial Constable Hammond who made the investigation.

Fred McDonald was the first witness called and he told of this man coming to his home about eleven o'clock on the morning of the 9th of April. Mr. McDonald could not say from which direction the man came but he asked permission to rest in the barn as he stated "he had been all night and was tired." Permission was given to the man and told where he could go and Mr. McDonald went on with the work entirely forgetting the man. Asked by the Crown Attorney to describe the man, the witness stated that he appeared to be about 50 years of age, rather shabbily dressed but well nour ished.

John McDonald a son of the former witness stated that he saw the man talking to his father, when he came into the yard and did not see him again until shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon. At that time he was dead lying on some straw in the barn floor. The man was lying on his back with his feet slightly raised. "I would not have seen him then only I went in deep on the stable," said the witness. Dr. Robertson who did the performing the post mortem on April 9th and gave as the cause of death, a ruptured aorta, which would be a natural cause.

W. Browne of Tickell and Browne Funeral Home, Bridge street stated that no identification was made. Constable Hammond who investigated the sudden death, examined the body and the clothes and the only mark of identification was a tailor's label on the coat bearing the name "Mills, Jasper, Ont." The man was not communicated with, who stated that a man by the name of Thomas Meagher had purchased the suit from him about a year and a half or two months previous. This man had been traced on to many places and information was also received that the man might be a brother of William Meagher, who lives here. The man was Thomas Meagher, Mr. Gifford and Mr. Meagher identified and the man was in the height, weight and age to believe that he was to Kingston as the body had been identified but to-day Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Reeves, a tailor in the city also said that from the description the man was Thomas Meagher. Mr. Reeves being sure that the man was in his tailor shop on the morning of his death. This was all the evidence that was submitted and the jury rendered their verdict without leaving the room.

BAYSIDE

Mrs. Wm. Bonisteel paid a visit to Belleville on Saturday.

The W.M.S. held their April meeting at the lovely home of Mrs. Chas. Meyers, where much important work was accomplished.

Ralph Trow has recovered so far from the effects of the flu as to be out doing his chores round the barn.

Mrs. Gunion of Mt. Zion returned on Sunday from her trip to Scotland with her son-in-law, Mr. Harrison of Hamilton and reports they had a glad time. Mrs. Gunion's sister, They landed at St. John on Friday and stopped over at Montreal to visit Mr. Morrison's sister there. Miss Dorothy returned to Hamilton with her father, after spending her holidays at the latter's home here.

Dr. F. Ross Young and family also Mr. Roy Leavitt of Picton spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Young here on his return from Toronto where his little daughter has been on holidays with her-aunties Miss Landon and Mrs. Bull.

ROAD PROGRAM IN HASTINGS

Highway Across Centre of Hastings County Discussed

Peterborough, April 13.—Construction of the provincial highway east of Peterborough will be continued this season with probably four miles of tracts in progress between here and Madoc.

The road from Havelock to the Peterborough-Hastings boundary will be maintained by the Department for the present, but two contracts are now under way on the north end of Hastings border. It is proposed to let tenders for construction this the section from the boundary to Marmora village during the present season, and also for the section between Cordova and Madoc.

From Madoc to Deloro the present road is in fairly good condition, and will be maintained by the Department similarity to the link between Belleville and Stirling.

The ultimate paving of any stretch of the new highway will not be undertaken for a few years at least, Mr. T. W. Gibson, M.P.P. of Havelock states that this expenditure can be indefinitely deferred.

Mayors Hawkins, Peterboro and the city of Peterborough have been out of the progress and Madoc village is also in favor of the highway being built. Only any recent representation to the Department before it was stated, certain details of the route in centre Hastings have not yet been settled.

Replacement a Factor.

In this announcement of the season by the highway engineers it may be noted that the only new construction in the Peterborough-Hastings sections having been undertaken by the Department the Department has pointed out that all important construction this season would be the employment which would be provided for men who will be engaged. No objection has been raised by Hastings county council to the building of the highway this year, and as Mr. Lancaster pointed out in his report of the proposed program the major expense of paving will not be incurred during the present financial stringency.

CAPITAL INVESTMENT IN WATER POWER

The capital invested in water power development in Canada was estimated by the Dominion Water Power and Hydrometric Bureau, Department of the Interior, to amount to over 1,200 million dollars on January 1, 1931. Many of the returns for official figures are complete for all provinces in 1928 and these show that the amount of capital invested in water power was exceeded only by that in agriculture and in steam railways.

GLACIER-GROUND ROCK FLOUR

The Athabasca River, which receives nearly all the drainage of Jasper National Park, Alberta, is always turbid or milky-coloured with rock flour which a hundred glaciers have ground up in the waters. The effect of this sediment is deposited on the bottom of Athabasca lake, 200 miles northeast of the park, through which the river passes on its way to the Arctic sea.

Russia bought last year three times as much construction machinery in Germany as in 1929.

$8,600 PER TON FOR RADIUM ORE

Edmonton, Apr. 15.—The richest deposit of radium in the world lies at Great Bear Lake, 1,200 miles north of Edmonton, in the Northwest Territories. Such was disclosed today when Dr. J. A. Allan, head of the department of geology at the University of Alberta, returned from a visit of a week just completed by provincial and university officials of pitchblende ore samples taken from that area.

On the basis of the samples analyzed, Dr. Allan estimated the value of the ore as $8,600 a ton.

Not only was the radium-bearing pitchblende to be found at Echo Bay, on Great Bear Lake, but the geologist indicated it might also be located in the Coppermine-Dismhan district that covers 13,000 square miles of Alberta.

The ore samples, sent to the university by A. L. Cummings, superintendent of mines for the Dominion Government at Fort Resolution, are practically pure pitchblende, Dr. Allan stated. They are rich in uranium blende and with less radiuse than the ores taken from the mines in the Belgian Congo, now the only large scale radium-producing district in the world.

Mineralogical analysis, conducted by F. A. Allan, M.Sc., D.Sc., F.R.S. and R. L. Rutherford, M.Sc., Ph.D., of McGill, show the uranium ore is contained in a particularly rich pitchblende, or amorphous uranitite blende. Ores from other pitchblends, conducted by E. H. Boomer, M.A., Ph.D., show that the material contains approximately 162 milligrams of radium per metric ton, sometimes as strong as standard Colorado carnotite.

Since radium is worth approximately $70 per milligram, a ton of the Echo Lake pitchblende would be worth approximately $12,700 per ton. That would mean that a ton, containing 68 per cent. pitchblende, would be worth about $8,600 per ton.

"These analysis," Dr. Allan declared, "are significant in that they show that one gram of radium is contained in every six tons of the pitchblende."

DRIVER FREED FOR SECOND TIME

Charge Thrown Out After Fatality Near Haileybury

Haileybury, Apr. 15. — Taking the view that the substance and in fact, the accused was being charged on trial a second time for an offence on which he might have been convicted before, Mr. Justice Garrow, at the resumed assizes sittings here this afternoon, ordered the release of Henry Stella, a young man from Kirkland Lake, who faced the court on a charge of causing bodily harm through negligence to Horace Bailey.

The case was the outcome of a fatal motor accident in Kirkland Lake on Sunday, July 6, last. Stella appeared at the Haileybury Session Court sittings on a charge of manslaughter, and was acquitted.

At that time another count, involving further reckless driving, had been returned as a true bill by the grand jury, but this case was traversed to the present sittings, according to W. S. Hadley, Crown prosecutor, in the interval, and on instructions from the Attorney-General's Department, the charge was amended to another section of the criminal code, and on the altered count acquittal on bill was returned.

Judge J. G. Munt, who appeared for Stella, successfully entered a plea of "autrefois acquit", submitting that as the same set of facts was to be presented by the same witnesses as in the manslaughter case, the acquittal already rendered "was a full answer to the charge on which he has been committed."

"The facts are, I must say, an extremely fortunate young man," said the judge, addressing Stella from the dock, him formally. He added that he sincerely hoped the other jury was right.

A FAMOUS HOCKEY FAMILY INDEED

Delisle, Sask., Apr. 15 (By The Canadian Press) — Canada has produced many a hockey team contributed by members of one family, but the Bentley family, of this town, lays claim to the blue ribbon for producing more hockey players — both men and women — than any town on this continent — which means the hockey world.

Many will recall the famous Cook octette of which Carl Cook was the coach. The family came from Southampton, Bruce County, the county which produced Mickey MacKay, Harvey Rockburn, Hal Winkler, Kenny McKenzie and other scintillating stars in past hockey days and present.

But the Cooks, as a family, are outnumbered by the Bentleys. They were thirteen in the Bentley family. Six are playing hockey today and seven sisters were hockey players before they were married. The brothers and sisters used to have real games — the boys on the one side with the six sisters forming the opposition. The girls played real hockey, too, taking their bumps with the same nonchalance as did their brothers.

Harry and Jack are now with the Drumheller Miners, star Alberta aggregation of hockeyists; there are younger brothers with budding reputations in hockey circles, while the girls, when they married, brought husbands who also showed promise of developing into stars in the not too distant future.

ST. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION AND PRESBYTERIAN CLERGY WELCOME MODERATOR HERE

SPANISH ROYAL FAMILY REACH PARIS SAFELY

PRESBYTERIAN MODERATOR WELCOMED HERE

A WORK OF ART

Specially Mounted and Engraved Bell Presented to Men's Club

Rt. Rev. Dr. Frank Baird, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, who made an official visit to St. Andrew's church congregation yesterday was guest speaker at a luncheon of the Men's Club of the Church last night in the new auditorium. In connection with his visit, a new bell for the use of the chairman of the Club, was presented to the Club by W. G. Stirling and gratefully received by the members. Dr. O. A. Marshall a lifelong friend of the donor, gave a few brief remarks on the life of Mr. Springer since he came to Canada 46 years ago yesterday and then made a presentation of a life membership card in the Men's Club of the church. There was a large number of the men of the congregation in attendance to welcome the Moderator as well as a number of clergy from different sections of the district including the clerk of the assembly, Rev. H. Reid of Paxboro, Rev. A. G. Cameron of Deseronto, Rev. Neale of Trenton, Rev. F. Reid of Stirling, and Rev. L. M. Sharpe of Odessa.

Note of Condolence

Charles A. Cameron president of the club presided, with E. Y. Illey as song leader. "Stand to your guns" and "Get-a-move" and Professor Wheatley at the piano. Community singing was enjoyed by the gathering. A note of sadness was noted at the opening as the Scottish pastor of the Church, Rev. Dr. Seymour was unable to attend through the death of his aged father. The Club requested the President to send a letter of sympathy from the club to the pastor in his bereavement and this recommendation was passed. The bell presented to the club was a fine one and will be much valued. It is a large brass instrument on a plaque of rosewood and on front is a gavel of Mr. Springer and surmounted with the cross of St. Andrew's. Affixed is a fitting inscription, "Presented to the Men's Club of St. Andrew's Church by Andrew C. Springer on April 16th, 1931."

In speaking of the gift made by Mr. Springer, Dr. O. A. Marshall gave a life history of it, and that has been identified with Belleville industry for the past 70 years. Forty six years ago yesterday Mr. Springer arrived in Canada from Cleveland, Ohio, and thirty years ago he came

WINNIPEG BROKER IS OUT ON BAIL

Winnipeg, April 16 (CP)—Charged with the theft of $289,000 William Martin, jr., head of the Winnipeg brokerage firm of Clark, Martin and Company, today was free on bail of hundred thousand dollars. He will appear in the police court today when adjournment will be made until April 20. He was arrested late yesterday by police officials.

Besides the theft charges, Martin will face one of conspiracy to defraud. His arrest followed an investigation by the Manitoba Attorney-General's department into the affairs of the company, which closed its doors here October. The Trust Company's report held Martin "personally responsible" for loans made and which are shown as a liability in the firm's trading account.

MAYOR THANKED AT HASTINGS MEMBER

Congratulated Him on Estimates Regarding Hastings

Mayor Reid expressed himself as greatly pleased with the estimates which have been brought down at Ottawa showing certain large undertakings in and about Belleville, particularly the work projected on the air camp in the vicinity of Foxboro in the Bay of Quinte.

The mayor sent on behalf of the city a telegram to Mr. W. E. Tummon M.P., thanking him for his services and for his support and congratulating him on his success in having these projects appear in the estimates.

Newmarket, Eng., April 16—Philae, by Pharos out of Blue Wonder, won the Craven stakes today by a length from Trimmett, with Cameronian third, only a head further back. Philae started a hundred to eight. Truculent at three to one and Cameronian at eleven to four.

WIFE TOOK OWN LIFE, SLEW HER DAUGHTER

Carried Out Oft-Repeated Threat to Commit Suicide

Stouffville, Ont., April 16 (CP) — Flashing her two year old child's throat with a razor and then taking her own life in a similar manner, Mrs. Fred Stapleton, forty-five, wife of a local farmer, carried out an oft-repeated threat to "take her child out of the world before she put the life of it."

Coroner Dr. Pall said it was a clear case of homicide and suicide and an inquest would follow.

The husband returned from a barn to find his wife missing. His mother-in-law was unaware of her daughter's absence and father started searching about the farm. He found the bodies of the mother and the little daughter on the floor of an outhouse.

DENY PLAN TO DEPORT WORKERS

BOSTON, Mass., April 6.—United States immigration officials today denied any intention to deport thirty thousand Canadians from the New England States as result of the immigration which has been underway since last Sunday. New England is the centre of the textile industry and thousands of former Canadians, most of them from Quebec are employed in the mills.

KING IS SEEN ON CASTLE GROUNDS

WITNESSED BENNETT NUPTIALS, ARRIVAL VICE REGAL PARTY

William Rogers Saw Historical Events at the Capital

After a most enjoyable visit with his daughter for several months Mr. Reginald Rogers has returned from Ottawa where he witnessed two of the most important events of the present year, the arrival of the Duke of Connaught for one term of the new tenants of Rideau Hall and the marriage of Miss Mildred Bennett, sister of the Prigg Minister. Mr. Rogers is a brother-in-law of the new minister to Washington.

Mr. Rogers says that he recalls this morning that it was a wonderful and stupendous sight to see the huge crowds which gathered to welcome the new Governor-General and his Lady. "There must have been fifty or sixty thousand people around the Chateau Laurier and the Ottawa station on the 7th of April," Mr. Rogers said. "One of the sights of the arrival was the Governor-General's carriage drawn by four beautiful horses, which took the new arrivals from the station to Rideau Hall, the official place of residence from now on.

"The ceremony attended the Herridge-Bennett wedding, too," said Mr. Rogers, "was most impressive, thousands inside and about the church. My daughter and myself were fortunate enough to secure tickets and were able to see the ceremonies inside the church, and the wedding was a beautiful sight. Miss Bennett came down one aisle on the arm of her brother and Mr. Herridge went down the other on the arm of his father. After the wedding a large party was held at the Bennett residence.

Mr. Rogers said he had never seen the trees looking more beautiful with the trees budding and lawns turning green. Every day in the Capital City he visited Mrs. (Dr.) Russell Lamour, his daughter.

CHAMBER LAUD W.C. SPRINGER

Services of Miss M. Richardson recognized by Directors

At the luncheon of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce today a fine resolution was carried placing on record appreciation of the services of Mr. W. C. Springer as a member of the body and as a manufacturer towards the upbuilding of the city of Belleville. It was pointed out by Mr. C. A. Cameron that it is just thirty years since Mr. Springer came to Belleville to reside. The resolution was fitting coming as it did upon the announcement of the sale of the Springer Company which Mr. Springer founded to a large corporation of hardware manufacturers.

The directors also went on record as appreciating the services which have been rendered the city of Belleville by Miss M. Richardson, who is retiring as manager of the C.P.R. telegraph office in this capacity she has served in the interests of the city.

Attention of the directors was called to the clean-up and paint-up of the city and the chamber will probably endorse an observance to this end.

W. H. IRELAND SUGGESTED AS BOARD'S HEAD

Proposed Security Frauds Prevention Board Raises Rumours

Toronto, April 16.—While no action has been taken by the Ontario Cabinet to appoint members to the proposed Security Frauds Prevention Board, various rumors have been heard as to possible appointees.

W. H. Ireland, L.L.A., West Hastings is mentioned as possible chairman of the board, although it is uncertain whether the government would want to open another seat. Mr. Ireland is very well in the legislature as well as president of the Ontario Conservative association.

The position of Registrar of Companies and Brokers, under the Provincial Secretary's Department, and Joseph J. Sedgewick, inspector of fraud officers are said to be in the race as two other members of the board.

Brazil, although engaged in diamond mining for more than 400 years, still employs the oldest and most primitive methods.

Arabia and Finland are the only countries besides the United States, having laws absolutely prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors.

SPRINGER LOCK ACQUIRED BY NEW COMPANY

American Hardware Company of Canada in Possession

PRICE UNSTATED

Present Factory and Office Staff Will Be Retained

Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, Ltd., which has been in business in Belleville for the past thirty years, supplying hardware to practically every country in the world, has been purchased by a new company. The firm is known as The American Hardware Corporation of Canada, Ltd., headed by George T. Kimball, president of The American Hardware Corporation, in which the amalgamating companies are the Corbin Lock Co., Corbin Cabinet Lock Co., Corbin Screw Corporation, and P. & F. Corbin Ltd.

The new company will have authorized capital stock of $200,000. C. F. Kimball is the president, C. B. Parson, vice-president, D. P. Baldwin, secretary-treasurer. W. C. Springer will remain in their short tour. A braking-test machine has been acquired by the new company, apparatus which shows exactly how far a car should go after the brakes have been applied at any speed, but twenty miles an hour is used as a basis. A car proceeding at this rate should stop within fifty feet when the brakes are applied. One car tested yesterday proceeded well over one hundred feet. As a result all cars with defective brakes are checked and the owner warned to have them adjusted at once. In the near future warnings will be issued by summons sent to the offenders.

MRS. E. R. LOGIE NEW PRESIDENT CANADIAN CLUB

Successful Year Is Brought to a Close

Bringing to a close another successful year in the history of the organization, the Women's Canadian Club yesterday afternoon met at the home of Mrs. A. E. MacCoul, Church street, for the annual meeting and election of officers. Mrs. W. N. Ponton who has occupied the presidential chair for two years addressed the members thanking them and expressing appreciation of their co-operation and assistance. She made suggestions for increased membership and a change in plans for obtaining speakers. Mrs. Ponton was followed in order by the members.

Reports of the year's progress were made by Mrs. Leo B. Riggs, the secretary, who referred to the fact that donations were made up the program for the season, and announced that membership had been increased and five.

Mrs. A. E. MacColl gave the treasurer's report showing that the club finished the year with a small balance on hand.

The election of officers followed. Mrs. Logie being unanimously elected president. Mrs. A. Cameron acted as returning chairman for the honour conferred on her, took the chair for the remainder of the meeting. The executive for 1931-1932 is: Past President—Mrs. W. N. Ponton.

SEEDING ADVANCED IN THIS SECTION

Spring seeding is coming well, stated Mr. Harry Pearson of the federal Department of Agriculture today. There is however only a small amount of isolation on the surface and warm winds and hot sunlight are among this.

Grain and fall wheat are in excellent condition.

TACK FINES ON AUTO OWNERS

Officers Make Brake Inspections on City Streets

Many warnings have been issued to commercial travellers and other car transients by the police for lawless motor cars parked all night in the street, which interferes with the work of the street sweeper. Today the police ceased the warnings and tucked on a small fine as a reminder that cars cannot be left an unreasonable time on the main streets. Three travellers were fined $3.03 each for this offence and this fine will continue as long as they persist in leaving the cars on the street. Yesterday afternoon Provincial Traffic Officer Byles journeyed forth in search of defective brakes and many were found in their short tour. A braking-test machine has been acquired by the police department which shows exactly how far a car should go after the brakes have been applied at any speed, but twenty miles an hour is used as a basis. A car proceeding at this rate should stop within fifty feet when the brakes are applied. One car tested yesterday proceeded well over one hundred feet. As a result all cars with defective brakes are checked and the owner warned to have them adjusted at once. In the near future warnings will be issued by summons sent to the offenders.

ALFONSO AND ROYAL FAMILY FLEE TO PARIS

Queen Victoria and Offspring Occupy Parisian Hotel

PROSTRATED

Will Await Results of June Election in Spain

(Canadian Press)

Paris, April 16.—Spain's King and Queen driven from their throne at Madrid in the movement which culminated in the establishment of a Spanish Republic, today found asylum in France.

Sad faced and tearful, Queen Victoria, who left an English home to become the bride of Alfonso's youth, reached Paris with five of their children and a retinue. She retired to an apartment comprising the entire floor of the Ritz hotel, reputed to be in a virtual state of prostration.

King Alfonso will arrive here later, coming from seven days over his powers, they said. "He nearly succeeded the Royal Pre-ges ire until such time as he decides whether the people want him or wish to cast him aside," she declared.

Speaking to newspapermen she told them said: "It was horrible. They would have killed me. If the King had resisted, they would have cut our throats."

Just before Alfonso took the train for Paris, the Duke of Miranda, a companion and spokesman for the deposed King, said Alfonso would remain in Paris to await the results of the coming election in Spain. The Duke said there were no present plans of the King visiting England, as at first reported.

COMMUNISTS ARE REMANDED TODAY

Sudbury, April 16—Nine men arrested yesterday in connection with a communist demonstration were remanded one week when they appeared for a preliminary hearing today. A local organization had arranged for counsel for the Workers' League, of Toronto, to act as the legal representative of the men.

No one is permitted to enter England's house of commons wearing an overcoat or carrying an umbrella.

SPRINGER LOCK ACQUIRED

40 Years Ago Yesterday

Mr. W. C. Springer, president and managing director of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited, is a native of Cleveland, Ohio and it was forty-six years ago yesterday the day of the closing of the deal for the plant that he came to Canada. Leaving Cleveland, he came to Peterborough and was with the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company and was the first man to go to work for that company which was the first lock company in Canada. Thence he went to Toronto and thirty years ago he came to Belleville. On the first of April 1901 he started the Belleville Lock Company as managing director. In January 1910 he came to the Belleville Springer and Wood Goods, which had been started by Mr. H. J. Hunt and Mr. Clement Jones. Since that time he has been associated with this latter company.

Mr. Springer has been allied with the Chamber of Commerce for many years and is a past director.

The growth of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company under his management has been remarkable. He is considered one of the leading manufacturers of builders' hardware in the Dominion.

GAR WOOD SEEKS NEW SPEED MARK

MIAMI, Fla., April 16—CP—Gar Wood piloted his Miss America eighth at a speed of 102.534 miles an hour on the w., over a measured mile course in Indian Creek here today in the first of a series of runs in which he hopes to break the world motor boat speed record of 103.49 m. p. h. hour, set by Kaye Don, the British driver. The Miss America driver will continue his efforts until more trials.

Miami Beach, Fla., April 15—Gar Wood raced his Miss America eighth at 102.969 miles an hour one way over Indian Creek course here today and came within .43 of a mile an hour of equalling the world's speed boat record of 103.49 miles an hour held by Kaye Don of Great Britain.

ST. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION

to Belleville where for all that time he has been active in the church and business life of the city. Dr. Marshall stated that Mr. Springer has done more for Belleville than any one man.

"When he came to Belleville the city was in the doldrums, but he went ahead and tried to finance a company for the manufacture of lock hardware. He met with discouraging remarks on every side, but he organized the company and not a dollar has been lost and some have received back six times their original investment. Some tried to exercise their control in the company and Mr. Springer resigned to form the now present Springer Lock and Hardware Company. As high as $100,000.00 a year has been paid out in wages but the best is yet to come. Yesterday a deal was made with the largest manufacturer of hardware in the world, selling each 25 million dollars worth and importing into Canada over one million."

Hardware a Hobby

Mr. Springer was taken entirely by surprise but expressed his thanks for the presentation of a life membership and told that he enjoyed working in the hardware business as it was a hobby.

Mr. Springer then gave a description of the bell and a short resume of his life since coming to Canada, closing with the hope that the bell long be spared to labor for the beautiful city, which is his by adoption.

Rev. Hickie of Trenton introduced the distinguished guest to the gathering, while W. J. Campbell of the O.S.D. moved a vote of thanks for the excellent address at the conclusion. Rt. Rev. Baird at the outset of his remarks stated that he had seen nothing more gratifying than the presentation all of his 14,000 miles of travel visiting congregations of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. He was pleased to see such good fellowship and Christian spirit manner. He complimented the elders, the session and all connected with the edifying and beautifying of the Church property, which will now more efficiently serve the congregation in this city. The Moderator expressed his opinion of defense of Old Chapter. He said he believed that boys should be taught to shoot and drill and be prepared for invasion. During his travels the Moderator stated that he had not heard a more hopeful announcement than the one made by Mr. Springer.

He also explained his trip stating that some difficulties were met in the church in different sections but none which could not be overcome. There may be a debt now but from what I have seen, there will be no difficulty working out the proposition."

The speaker mentioned world happenings paying particular attention to the trouble in Spain but stated there was no fear for the stability of the English throne. "I am a God Save the King man," said Dr. Baird, "the church has a part to play in keeping this throne secure from all invasion and the monarchy and sentiments of the British House shall be maintained.

HAMMOND DENIES CEYLON RUMOURS

London, England, April 16—Walter Hammond, the Gloucestershire and England cricketer, whom he arrived at Southampton with the English team which toured South Africa, strongly denied the rumour that he was going to Ceylon during the forthcoming summer.

"I cannot, me Inc," he said, "how this report got about. I never had any intention of going to Ceylon, and furthermore I shall turn out as usual for Gloucestershire, and shall be a professional."

This is settled a question which has been disturbing the cricket world since news came from South Africa that he would, for the most part, be lost to the game in England during next season.

Run-Down Weak, Nervous?

To have plenty of firm flesh and the ability to do a big day's work and feel "up to your job" at night, you must eat three good meals a day, relish your food and digest it. If you don't, fat, cant sleep, can't work, just give Tanlac the chance to do for you what it has done for millions.

Mrs. Arthur Belleveau, 5207 Chamberd St., Montreal, writes: "Stomach trouble drove me to bed and I was able that life was almost unbearable. TANLAC has cured me of indigestion, weakness, nervousness—it has increased my weight—twelve pounds and given me the best of health.

I cannot praise TANLAC enough."

Tanlac is wonderful for indigestion and constipation—yes, pains, nausea, dizziness and headaches. It brings back lost appetite, helps you digest your food, and gain strength and weight. It contains no mineral drugs; it is made of roots, barks and herbs, nature's own medicines for the sick. The cost is only 75c for a regular. Get a bottle from your druggist. Your money back if it doesn't help.

W. A. Gordon, Minister of Immigration. The Board now consists of a chairman and two commissioners.

PICTON PASSES PARKING BY-LAW

Cabinet of Silver Presented to Past President Kiwanis Club

PICTON, April 16—Parking on Main street continues to be a problem of the town council and though the question has been discussed many times no solution has been found and a line of the most recommendations have been acted upon.

At the council meeting this week, there was another discussion and finally parking was favored by seven of the councillors and the motion was taken and no action will result. In the opinion of Councillor Clifford Cullitver, if the streets were paved for angular parking as in the city of Belleville, one third more cars could be parked on Main street here. A letter was read from the Police Magistrate A. E. Chisnan drawing attention to the fact that the by-law relating to the parking of cars near public intersections was at no being enforced. As a result of this letter, the Council voted to have signs erected stating "no parking from here to the corner" which would be located. The Chief of Police Bert Hinchey was instructed to see that the by-law be enforced.

Picton's new spa unit is engaging the attention of the Council as the present town one is being rented closely by the public, the letting of the town market and C.N.R. cafes. A short time ago tenders were asked for and three were received.

Discussion have resulted in the Council deciding to advertise for a market clerk at a salary of $600 per year, with free residence at the town hall. In the past, the pool has been let by tender, the market clerk paid rent and the tolls collected belonged to him. Under the new arrangement the council will get all tolls.

That he will not take the post at $500 a year, is the statement of Mr. Asa Shepherd, who has $1,200 and considers that reasonable.

Mr. Shepherd has held the post for fifteen years in a most satisfactory manner.

In addition to looking after the markets and C.N.R. sheds, the Market clerk must be responsible for the fire alarm and inspector must be home every day of the year.

Whether the Council will be able to get a tenant for the fire inspectorship post at $800 a year remains to be seen.

OVERPRODUCTION OF BASIC COMMODITIES NOT UNIFORM CONDITION

The following is the second of a series of articles on the world economic situation as seen by officials, diplomats and observers in Washington.)

Washington, D.C., April 16—(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—While economists of Washington dispute about the depression, as to causes and remedies, all agree there is a great deal of good stuff, animal, vegetable, and mineral in the world for which no buyer except the poverty stricken may be found.

There are able through governmental and trade agencies to make some rough estimate of what stocks are in hands of the producer, but they cannot discover the position of the consumer. It is pointed out, during a period of depression the tendency of the consumer is to get along on what he has and it is to be expected he is running short.

A number of commodities including wheat, pulpwood, silver, copper, beef, hides, butter and eggs, pork, linseed, sugar, coffee, wool, rubber, cotton, tobacco, and gold are looked upon as basic and to be taken as an index of the world situation. The first half dozen figures vary largely in Canadian export trade.

A brief resume of the position of these according to latest figures available here, follows:

Taking wheat as the most important single export product of the Dominion, the stocks of wheat in the world have been steadily increasing since 1926-27 when they were estimated at the beginning of the season as 257,000,000 bushels. The estimate for this year is 535,000,000 bushels of which Canada on August 1, will hold 128,000,000 bushels. Some indication of how the surplus of wheat or the inability of the world to buy wheat affects the Dominion is furnished in the export figures for Canada 1928-1930 which show that while the Dominion exported 223,-753,475 worth of wheat up to the end of March 1930, this sum was $219,-770,851 less than the value of exports in 1929.

On the other hand world supplies and stocks of cut pulpwood are stated to be no more than normal. The United States which consumes the bulk of Canadian production, has lately clapped a virtual embargo on shipments from Russia, conceived the great menace to Canadian trade in this commodity. Pulpwood exports from the Dominion for 1930 showed a falling off but not nearly so serious as the drop in wheat. The exports for 1930 were estimated as being worth $13,807,209 which was $326,891 less than in 1929.

The world's production of silver for the past three years have averaged around 266,000,000 ounces during which time the price has fallen from about 60 to 25 cents. Those interested in silver in the United States claim this reduction in price, which has greatly restricted the purchasing power of China, countries in South America, and other nations on a silver standard, is owing to the threat of dumping by the British government for India since the rupee was pegged to gold in 1925. However some economists dispute this. Exports of silver from the Dominion dropped 2,262,070 in 1930 to a total value of 11,569, 835.

As to copper the figure for 1930 shows a falling off in world production amounting to 350,000 short tons as compared with 1929. Consumption for the United States showed a decided drop. The visible supply of non-ferrous mineral raw material at present in excess of current requirements. Nickel, however, is stronger. Canadian exports of copper were up last year in value by almost $13,000,000 reaching a total of $27,725,413. Nickel exports which totalled $25,094,975 were up $1,154,-483 although the quantity of exports decreased by 18,600 hundred weight.

Statistics for the cattlemen of Canada are not particularly encouraging. It is noted that in six of the eight major producing countries cattle numbers are on the increase, the peak of production being expected about 1932. The number of cattle exported from Canada last year was about 11,000,000 which represented a decrease as compared with the previous year of 1,500 and a loss in revenue of $1,500,000. Reduced consumption in the United States and Europe is attributable to economic conditions is given as a reason for the present low price of beef cattle.

World production of cattle hides as reflected in figures for the United States, Argentina, and Uruguay, which furnish one-fifth of the world supply, dropped almost 30 per cent. since 1923, while the United States consumption of hides has risen from 21 per cent of the world producing to 23.8 per cent. in 1930. Nevertheless, while Canada exported 66,864 more hides in 1920 than in 1929 exporters took a loss of $1,743,777 as compared to the amount they received for fewer hides in 1929.

SCHMELING WILL MEET STRIBLING

Heavyweights Will Make Appearance in Cleveland in July

South Bend, Ind., April 16—With a failure of several attempt at ballyhoo, officials of the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois announced officially yesterday that the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling bout for the world's heavyweight championship will be held at Cleveland the night of July 3. Legislated out of New York and mussed out of Chicago, the bout was welcomed with open arms by Cleveland, according to announcements by Dick Dunn, representative of Madison Square Garden, and Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling.

The bout will be 15 rounds and will be Schmeling's first defence of his crowded title. He won it from Jack Sharkey last year on a foul, but the New York State Athletic Commission has since withdrawn its recognition because the German refused to meet Sharkey in a return bout. The National Boxing Association still recognizes Schmeling as champion.

The new Cleveland Stadium with its seating capacity of 110,000, which will be virtually completed in June, will be the scene of the bout. Prices will range from $25 to $2 including tax.

The announcement was made here today because of Schmeling's presence on one of the last appearances of his exhibition tour. Curiously enough, the last time any negotiations went on here for a heavyweight title bout was back in 1926 when Jack Dempsey signed to meet Harry Wills for Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons. That match was never held, and from the interest shown in both Schmeling and today's announcement, it seems that a lot of people won't care if the same thing happens to this one.

Sheldon Clark, Chicago sportsman in an official statement, said the fact that Illinois had no legislation for 15 round bouts and the attitude of the Chicago press prevented the Windy City from getting the match.

"Cleveland was picked because of its central locality," said Jacobs. "Half the population of the United States is within 500 miles of Cleveland. Neither Schmeling nor Stribling has ever boxed in Cleveland and they are sure to draw a $1,000,000 gate. The new Cleveland Stadium is an ideal fight arena. Every seat will be a ringside seat."

Schmeling will go to French Lick Springs, Ind., tomorrow for a two weeks' vacation before completing his exhibition tour. He has five more dates to fill and will wind up in Chicago May 8. He will begin training near Cleveland about the middle of May.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report startling gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pickup, noticeably starting, smoother running motors and more power. The Stabilovolt Mfg. Co. Dept. 178-S, Stirling St. Milwaukee, Wisc. for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. They also need men everywhere to make up to $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write them at once for free sample and big money making offer. —Adv.

GERMAN WOMEN TURN ELECTION

Feminist Voters Turn out in Large Numbers

Montreal, April 16. (CP)—Decidedly conservative was the temper of the women's vote in the last general elections in Germany, and their acquisition of the franchise in that highly uncertain and exciting political moment militated strongly against the radical movements in that country. This is no "hit-or-miss" estimate, but is based upon the actual figures as to the party affiliations of the women voters as shown by their ballots.

Speaking recently of the interest taken in elections and the franchise by German women, H. Schafhausen, German Consul in Montreal, stated that from the very first they turned out in large numbers to cast their ballots. There was no necessity to make any effort to get out the feminine electorate, as from the earliest days of the Republic a large proportion voted.

An interesting feature of the last election, from the point of view of the use made of the privilege of the franchise, was the much larger vote cast by the women than that of the men. Over fifty-six per cent of the total vote was cast by the women.

Figures indicate that the relative strength of the various parties would have been very different had there been no feminine vote. The radical opposition parties, right and left, Nationalist, Socialist and Kommunist—the former the Hitler party —lost in no less than twenty-three contests because of the women's vote. One of the other of these extreme groups would have won three. Had it not been for the women's ballots. The importance of such a difference made in the political situation today, it was pointed out, may easily be appreciated. The middle group of parties gained many contests through the political convictions of the newly-enfranchised sex.

Men who know most about Building are Strongfor TEN/TEST

ARCHITECTS, contractors, heating engineers —the men who know most about building — are TEN/TEST'S warmest supporters. TEN/TEST Insulating Building Board is stronger than wood sheathing, and more economical. It is made in solid thicknesses varying from one-half to two inches, to afford you a higher degree of protection against extremes of winter cold or summer heat.

Because it is easy to work and has almost no waste, its use in your floors, walls, and ceilings will lower your construction costs. Because of its exceptional insulating quality, it keeps down fuel bills in winter time, TEN/TEST, applied to the beams inside your roof, will give you still greater comfort—and a cosy livable room instead of a cold, bare attic, good only for dead storage.

Ask about TEN/TEST.

A PLEASING INTERLUDE

Such a farewell party as the one tendered Miss Bennett, now Mrs. Herridge, wife of the Canadian minister to Washington, provided the leaders of the two parties in Canada with an opportunity to meet on a very human footing with the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Opposition, toasting Miss Bennett, and the brother of the bride-elect, Rt Hon. R. B. Bennett, a very interested participant in the amenities of the occasion.

These leaders are not enemies as sometimes their followers paint them or seem to think them, but they are men who delight in an opportunity to be friends. They are the leaders of two systems of political thought, seeking one object—the development of Canada, and the increasing happiness and welfare of her people.

Ardent political partisans who look askance at the members of another party, would profit by the possession of a little of such goodwill as attended this banquet. Such opinions as the leaders have on the trend of political affairs end with politics, and do not enter into their private business nor color their entire lives.

Such an incident as the wedding of Miss Bennett and the antecedent ceremonies form one of the most pleasing interludes in the stress of the political life of the capital.

ENGLAND THE REFUGE

England, the home of the stablest monarchy on earth, and of democracy as well, is the refuge of men who seek liberty, safety and freedom; it welcomes ex-kings and the poorest. In the days of Queen Victoria it provided a haven for an Italian reformer, today it is ready to welcome Alfonso of Spain. With all the political refugees she has welcomed, none has ever betrayed or embroiled England.

Surely this is a tribute to the sense of security and freedom when the political refugee's first thought whether he be king or commoner, is to get to the shores of Albion.

There is another country containing a noted fugitive, Holland, which at Doorn houses the last of the Hohenzollern kings, William of Prussia. Owing to the fact that Holland was one of the few countries not involved in the war and that it touches Germany on the west, it was natural that William should take refuge there.

England, Scotland and Ireland seem the natural home of freedom and security; there is something in the atmosphere of Britain, in the mood of her people, and in the entire picture of British nature and life, which agrees with the refugees of any nation. Britain worked out her political freedom early, while other nations are yet struggling towards theirs. Today the British crown is so integral a portion of British Government that while other nations are throwing their crowns in the dust, the British islands is still honored for what it represents in the national life.

SOUTH AMERICA

Speaking of the impression which Canadian visitors brought back from South America, the Mail and Empire, says:

"The delegates point out that in the development of Canada's trade with Latin America emphasis should be laid not only on our exports thereto but also on our purchases therefrom. Even though some of the products of the Argentine, for instance, are in competition with those of Canada, much could be done to improve our present commercial situation with these countries by deflecting some of the trade direct to Canada on Canadian steamship lines, which now passes through United States ports. Correspondence and interviews with the Ministers of Commerce in Argentina and Brazil make it clear that both countries are prepared to negotiate special treaties of commerce with Canada based on mutual preferences. In view of the efforts of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson to secure a general agreement for the orderly marketing of wheat it may be noted that Argentina is prepared to consider an international agreement between Canada, the United States and that country with reference to the production and export of wheat to the world's markets."

PUBLICITY

Does a citizen of Belleville ever wonder why the city uses publicity of its advantages and of its immediate surroundings as likely to appeal to tourists? If there is one such he probably thinks that no larger city goes in for it.

It will be a shock to this type to find that so great a city as New York with its teeming millions, which might be expected not to appreciate visitors, has a board of strategy to raise funds for publicity for an energetic publicity campaign designed to attract tourists to the city during the usual summer slump in business. Railroads, industries and theatres will cooperate.

Even the great city of New York finds advantages from publicity.

It is a good thing that the days are long and growing longer so that discussion on daylight saving and standard time need not be curbed. There will be plenty of time to talk upon the question and perhaps even to vote upon it.

NAY! NAY! PAULINOS!

He caught her hand, and pressed it to his lips,
And whispered—"Dearest, say that you'll be mine!
Crown all those joyous hours we've spent together;
Let Love's light shine
From out those dear, blue eyes; just whisper "Yes!"
With that sweet mouth, then made the happy day!
See, how the roses fly into your cheeks!
You'll not say "Nay!"
You CAN'T say "Nay," when you remember all
The glorious weeks and months that we have had Together! The dances, shows, and all the money spent .....
Say "Nay" and I'll go mad!
She raised her eyes, those wells of mystery;
"I'll not say "Nay,'" she whispered, "Mr. Slow ,
If that would send you mad I'll not say "Nay" .....
I'll just say "NO!" "

SAINTS AND SINNERS

CIRCUS WEATHER brings thoughts of circus people, and it may be of interest to note that the management of the Show of All Shows, which controls all the lesser lights of circusdom, has abandoned the policy of eliminating wild animal acts from the Big Show This season one of the principal features of the show is Clyde Beatty, in a huge steel cage with a class of nearly forty lions and tigers. John Ringling figured a season or two back that the public did not want dangerous animal acts. Evidently he has changed his mind. Perhaps the public has not changed much since the old days of the Roman arena when they clamored for a "kill!". Folks look at the wild animal acts and know that some day the trainer will have to fight for his life and be lucky to save it. Perhaps there is a hope with some that they will be in at the death. Anyway the animal acts are back in the big show. Mabel Stark, who a couple of years ago was torn and mangled by a big black tiger, suffering terrible injuries, her life despaired of for months, is back in the show business, risking her life twice daily—for what?

Circus and the radio are now linked up together and last Saturday midnight the Saints and Sinners banquet in New York City brought to the mike some familiar voices Dexter Fellowes, Prince of Publicity, and the greatest newspaper circus man of all time, who visited Belleville and met a few old friends of the Fourth Estate the day before the Big Show visited here last, spoke to his million and one friends all over the continent. Stanley Dawson also spoke and to one listener came a memory of the strangest funeral oration ever heard in this world, words of farewell, friendship and appreciation, from one trouper to another, when Stan Dawson paid tribute to the virtues of young Brutus, the lion, killed by over-enthusiastic circus cowboys at Kingston, and buried on the lot in Belleville, between the dressing room tent and the menagerie oval, that sunny July day a few years ago, while all the circus folk listened with appreciation.

Courtney Ryley Cooper, noted author and historian of the circus, was also a speaker, and the guest of honor was Charles Hutcheson, treasurer of the big show, and well known as a circus man of many years standing dating back to the days of James A. Bailey with whom he was associated in circus enterprises. The Fat Lady, the Giant, the Midget, and other freaks spoke and the broadcast was interesting beyond words.

x x x x

Sains and Sinners is an organization affiliated with the circus world, the Saints are the circus folk themselves who live under the big top, and the Sinners are folk who love the circus but are not actively identified with it.

x x x x

The feature announcement of the banquet and broadcast was the news that arrangements had been completed for the establishment of a home for retired circus people iff Virginia. Eighteen acres were donated as a site and ample finances are assured to make the enterprise a success.

x x x x

So the Saints and Sinners dined together, laughed together, and sang old circus songs together, led by Uncle Bob Sherwood clean of circus clowns, and recently of Dicies Radio Circus—and if you don't believe that a good time was had by all, you're as cuckoo as the girl in the sideshow—you know the one I mean.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—How soon after dining in a woman's home should one make a call?

A.—Within two weeks.

Q.—Why should an invitation to a week end party be answered promptly?

A.—So that if one is unable to enjoy the offered hospitality, it may be extended to some other more fortunate guest.

Q.—Is it permissable for a man to reprove a girl whom he is escorting, if she becomes too loud?

A.—Yes, and she deserves to be reproved.

THE INDIAN AND HONESTY

"Page Diogenes and his lantern!" says the North Bay Nugget, which adds: "An honest man has been found. He is a Sioux Indian in North Dakota. This Indian recently got into a fight with another Indian, which was perhaps justified or natural but the aftermath of the fight is another story and of rather outstanding according to what most people would do. This particular Indian happened to think after the fight was over that he was a justice of the peace and ought to be stopping fights instead of starting them, and generally setting a good example for the other people. In view of that he decided to punish himself. He fined himself ten dollars and sentenced himself to serve thirty days in jail and is doing it. His name is John Goodhouse and he would put many a Christian to shame for not so very many take literally the remarks of the Master about the motes and beams in people's eyes.—Oshawa Times.

SEEKING A NAME FOR "LOOKER"

Experimenters with television seem to be progressing more rapidly than the linguists or others who want to name the observers who will use this new medium. An eminent physicist has estimated conservatively that television receivers will be in some-what general use within ten years. One wonders whether it will take that long to agree upon the name.

"Telespectator" is too long, and so is "radiodiscover", which makes the "o" do double duty. "Teleer" might serve the purpose if everyone would pronounce it "te-er"; otherwise, it would connote "forseeing". "Viseer abbreviates the important parent word "tele", in addition to raising the foregoing objection. "Televiser" sounds all right, but it changes the meaning of "viser", a mask. "Television-viewer", which meets the test of appropriate might be applied as well to an astronomer, with his telescope, as to the observer of television. Neither is thin thesaurus nor a voluminous dictionary seems to help coin the word so obviously needed.

"Spectandidor" has been proposed by George B. Cutten, president of Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., but Dr. John Grier Hibben of Princeton University considers "observer" sufficiently descriptive. The radio manufacturer favors the simple word. "looker"; a pioneer experimenter with television recommends "radio vision-ist"; and a research engineer believes "radio spectator" would be better.—Christian Science Monitor.

There is a tremendous opportunity for Canadian business in Latin-America. It is a hard fact that the South Americans, sentimentally would be glad to divert much trade from the United States, whose tariff and other policies are unpopular there. It is an equally hard fact that South America prefers, in general, certain typical North American manufacturers, such as automobiles, agricultural machinery, etc. Canada is in a position to get the best of both worlds. Her production is of the North American type. Yet, as a member of the British Empire, she inherits great good will in Latin-America. Given such natural advantages in our favour, surely it cannot be that Canadian business will miss its cue.—Montreal Star.

MACHINES AND JOBS

That seems to be a sensible report on machines and unemployment which the International Chamber of Commerce has just made public, to judge from the summary in yesterday's Times. The report is careful enough to admit that in some instances the increase of machinery has reduced employment. But for industry as a whole since the year the much-discussed "technological unemployment" has been so small — if, indeed, it can be established at all — as to make that period an exception in the normal progress of invention since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution.

The Chamber of Commerce report has avoided the main error which underlies the usual treatment of machines and unemployment since the war; and that consists precisely in overlooking the war itself. Figures for employment are taken as of the year 1919 or 1920 and compared with 1929 and 1930. The undeniable shrinkage is purely abnormal, chronological unemployment. But by far the largest part of it will be found to have taken place in a single year, or at most two years, after 1919. In other words it is the result of transition from an abnormal war effort to a normal peace basis.—New York Times.

SPANISH MONARCH GOES OUT

Bowing to the inevitable, King Alfonso of Spain has abdicated. After Sunday's vote, he must have realized that the vast majority of the electorate were against a continuation of the monarchical form of government. It was the first opportunity the people had been given to express their wishes in nine years, and they spoke with no uncertain voice.

To have attempted to retain the throne would have led to bloodshed, misery and revolution. Alfonso has given proof before now that he wishes his country well. Today he has made the supreme sacrifice. There will, of course, be some who will argue that he should have refused to give way and should have held on to the throne at all costs. But surely the King who renounces his throne to save his country from the horrors of revolution is a braver man, in the people than one who plunges it into civil war with all its aftermath of bitter hate?

Alfonso has chosen the nobler way, and posterity will set that down to his credit. Spain must now work out her own destiny. She has many gifted and able sons, and there is nothing to prevent her from taking a foremost place among the nations of Europe if counsels of moderation and of prudence prevail.—Montreal Star.

Fashionally Speaking

By Lucille

The selection of accessories becomes a serious business in a season when the mode has gone color mad. Never has it been quite so easy to ruin a good costume by a few ill-chosen additions. By the same token the right finishing touches lend a distinction impossible for the out-and-out monotone ensemble to achieve.

In general the well-established notion that bright touches set off black and dark ones afford smart relief to light costumes holds good. But the main thing to remember, is that accessories, whether they match or contrast, must be a part of the ensemble they accompany—a general statement which, we grant, sounds rather meaningless until you come to test it out.

The couturiers are giving noble aid in this connection by presenting accessories right along with the dress or suit. For example, there is a Chanel suit with a pique blouse and an amusing necklace made of white pique flowers. An ardanse novelty is a pair of lace elbow mitts in lieu of sleeves. On the dress, of the formal afternoon type, she places a corsage bouquet of violets and roses, and with it she shows a ring set with a big artificial violet.

A hat with two color notes will often set the pace for an ensemble. For example, one with a braided brim of blue and green would be smart with a black or blue suit. The green might be echoed in a bouquet for the combination of green and blue is one Paris approves. Navy and yellow is another, and brown and light blue still another. Nelong favored this one particularly.

The vogue while jewellery is enjoying at present is a helpful matter. When in doubt choose white, for it is tremendously smart and can be worn with any number of costumes.

Gold and silver are offered in new versions. Arabian jewellery, inspired by French colonial styles, is presented in jewel arrangements with Arabian gold mounting. Crusader jewelry, is a modern interpretation of this antique silver motifs wrought by the craftsmen of the crusader period. Chromium beads with hammered surfaces are used for necklaces and bracelets.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

I LOVE TO TELL THE STORY

I love to tell the story of unseen things above,
Of Jesus and His glory of Jesus and His love;

I love to tell the story because I know
It's true
It satisfies my longings as nothing else can do.

Chorus—
I love to tell the story, 'twill be my theme in glory,
To tell the old, old story of Jesus and His love.

I love to tell the story more wonderful it seems
Than all the golden fancies of all the golden dreams,
I love to tell the story it did so much for me,
And that is just the reason I tell it now to thee.
Chorus: repeat.

I love to tell the story, 'Tis pleasant to repeat
What seems each time I tell it more wonderfully sweet,
I love to tell the story for some have never heard,
The message of Salvation from God's Own Holy Word.
Chorus: repeat.

I love to tell the story, For some who know it best
Seem hungering and thirsting to hear it like the rest.
And when I tell scenes of glory, I sing the new, new song,
'Twill be like the old, old story that I have loved so long.
Chorus: repeat.

Sung by D. P. Cory in Salvation Army Church April 12th.

Advice to the Lovelorn

He Boards at Their House

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with the most wonderful boy on earth, I am 19 years and he is 26. He is engaged to another girl but seems very fond of me. Do you suppose he will ever give up the other girl? What could I do to get my mind off him? He boards at our house and has been here about six months. Is that the reason I love him so? Should I leave home? Puzzled.

It would be very foolish to think of leaving home under the circumstances. Take a brace and try to fill your thoughts with something else than your man who happens to be engaged to someone else. Have you got a job? Have you any outside interests? Go out among young people and try to acquire a beau of your own.

She No Longer Loves Him

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I am 23 years of age, my wife is 22 and we've been married almost five years. I was obliged to leave home for a year for business reasons. When I returned my wife told me she no longer loved me. We had always been happy, had a nice home and two lovely children. When she told me she didn't love me any more, she said she didn't want a divorce. I left home and have been staying with my mother. I still love my wife and miss the children. We have been separated about three months.

I can't help feeling that during your absence your wife became interested in someone else, even though she may have been merely faithful to you. Why don't you ask her to talk things over with you and tell you why she has changed. You have rights in regard to your children which you shouldn't forgo. If you like to write me more fully, send me a self-addressed envelope.

Would Like to Meet His Family

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 years old and I have been going with a young man for the past six months. He is 20. I have never met or seen any of his people. Don't you think he ought to invite me to his house some time? He wants to give me an engagement ring for my birthday, but I'd rather like to meet his people before I am engaged to him. He has met all of my people. What do you think is the reason that he doesn't ask me over? Shall I tell him to invite his people over to my house some night. Or shall I just wait until he invites me over to his house?

A Blonde.

When a girl becomes engaged, the young man's family makes the first call. No doubt the young man has been waiting for the engagement to be announced to bring this about. It would be quite proper for you to suggest some definite time when you would be at home, and you could all become acquainted. Perhaps the reason he has not invited you to meet his family may be that they might consider you are both too young to become engaged.

Fashion Fancies

By Alice Alden

Stay at home nights and you will miss the newest evening ensembles. Here's one of black velvet with an account made of stitched bands of leven der blue crinale, collared and bordered with gray fox. This is worn with a frock of pale pink crinale.

A passport is necessary when travelling and a place to keep it safe is necessary, too. For fair travellers there is a splendid new underarm bag of natural pigskin with a narrow frame of red enamel and gilt. Inside, guarded by a zipper, is a special compartment divided into two parts, one for the passport, the other for tickets.

Footprints on the sands generally yield a cue to the season's shoe success. Thus we have a smart resort shoe of white linen with a slip-ping and heel of red morocco leather. It is a pump.

Be careful of your hands and wear gloves when out. Ideal with a black and white outfit would be perfect black antelope with white kid pipings and a trim of black and white braid on the flaring pull-on cuff.

Suit your suit with a lingerie blouse. With a smart tailleur of Navy is worn a blouse of batiste with all-over square eyelet embroidery, pinhuted collar and bow edged with lace. It is a sleeveless model.

A song of other days echoes through the sartorial symphony this season. That is why we are all going to wear hats that are quite obviously inspired by Watteau. On these lines is a lovely hat of white balibriad yet on a coral crepe bandeau that ties in a bow under the left side of the brim.

By Beatrice Fairfax

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax.

Nearly all the men in our office are married except a couple of old widowers and some young ones of the type who will always draw small salaries and think a bag of peanuts is a swell treat.

Some people are like that and it's their misfortune, but the weak brother, content with next to nothing don't appeal to me. One of these was known as "The Perpetual Proposer," because he'd asked every girl in the office to marry him and had been refused with thanks, by all. Last Summer an oldish girl joined our staff and we knew he'd propose to her next. We thought she'd take it as a joke, like the rest, but she said yes, and married him the following Saturday.

She's kept her job and we respect her for that, but why does she quote "My Husband" till the rest of us are nearly insane. It's "My Husband" this and "My Husband" that. Even breakfasts "My Husband's" criticism of the rest of us. He thinks I'm foolish for wanting to buy a bungalow, he thinks another girl silly for being a vegetarian. It wouldn't be so bad if this fellow were a big shot, but he isn't, even bears a bean, almost, and as we all turned him down and fled from his deadly dullness. It's awful to have him quoted every turn. My landlady says brides are like that, they're the most arrogant creatures on earth, and this girl will quote "My Husband" till she gets his number. Do you think brides are arrogant?

Inquisitive Girl.

Where is your charity, consideration, readiness to overlook human frailty, my dear girl, if you can't stand a little of a bride's brag?

Yes, I think nearly all newly married women are given to quoting "my husband," but what of it? It's an amiable weakness and why shouldn't a bride keep her illusions without getting on the nerves of her associates?

Suppose the man is, as you say, a very small "bean," isn't that all the more reason why you and the other girls should be good sports and help the "dizzy girl" to keep the image of her hero for a little while at least? You tell me the rest of you turned him down—an added reason for a little benevolence.

Under the circumstances, I believe a group of men "could be better sports. They'd hand a bouquet to the girl who hadn't been successful in landing one of their own particular group, but had at the last brought down someone else. When the deluded husband said that he'd married the "best little woman in the world," they'd join in and say, "Lucky old boy"—or something like that—instead of visibly freezing, as you've probably done when the poor little bride began to brag about her man.

And I am glad she had the courage to take him. She was older than the rest of you and probably had the home-making instinct strongly developed. What seemed unpromising to the rest of you may have represented her only chance at all those things the really feminine woman craves—a place to call home, possessions to be accumulated, and saving that really represents an adventure. And the man turned down by all of you may be like the book rejected by every publisher and which accepted at last, turns out to be a best seller.

DO YOU FORGET?

"I did mean to remember," exclaimed Gwen, woefully, " and so I forgot! It's the Kellers' Golden Anniversary," John and Gwen considered for a time. Then came inspiration—and a prompt telephone call to the out-of-town Kellers. It pleased them so, and saved an embarrassing situation.

We are apt to mistake a mere fresh of words for the very whipped-cream of fancy.

Persian Balm creates and preserves lovely and youthful complexions Tones and stimulates the skin. Fragrant as a flower. Cool as morning dew. Swiftly absorbed by the tissues, making the skin wonderfully soft-ened, velvety. Unrivaled as an aid to feminine elegance. Delightful to use. Imparts additional charm to the daintiest of women. Persian Balm is the one toilet requisite for the exacting woman. Peerless as a beautifier.

BRIDGE STREET SCORE NINTH CONSECUTIVE BASKET VICTORY

St. Andrew's, Bridge and Christ Church Winners

Although outplayed in the opening period, the St. Andrew's Quints, much better than Judeans throughout the closing session and their 40 greatest play called them through for a win, Judeans were leading 7 at the half way mark and gave promise of slipping a win over the Presbyterians however, a return to form by Benny Ritchie who scored three field goals and a pair of basket by Campbell and W. McCreary settled the issue. Zeke Tobe also notched three goals in the final half but was the only member of his team to locate the basket during the hoop during the second stanza.

St. Andrew—Ritchie 7, Campbell 4, W. McCreary 8, A. McCreary, A. Shire—Total 19.

Judeans—A. Tobe, L. Yanover 3, J. Tobe 6, J. Goodman 4, B. Yanover, S. Samuels.—Total 12.

Bridge Street Win Holloway 26.

Although Bridge Street won their fixture from the Holloway Street boys and incidently clinched the title to the league championship, they did not look any too good in victory. Whether it was a case of too much self confidence or they were merely working a poor game out of their system we do not know but certainly they were much below their usual form and on the play they were lucky to win. Holloway on the other hand were quick to take advantage of the loose checking and fumbles of their opponents outscoring them 16-8 in the final half. Bridge Street by their work in the opening period when they counted 22 as against 8 by the Holloway Quintet, managed to weather the gale.

Bridge Street—Ostrom 6, Higgins 10, Cather 6, Cole 6, Countryman, Swan, Lazier.—Total 26.

Holloway—Sinfield 15, Harris 2, McMurray 8, Goodman 4, Wright, Phillips.—Total 26.

Christ Church 37—St. Georges 28.

Although St. Georges pressed hard all the way, the Christ Church Quintet had a slight edge on the locals and were deserving of their win. Probably the Scouts had just as many shots or even more than the winners but whereas they were checked hard at all times, they allowed the Colonan Street team some rather easy chances right under the hoop. When the winners missed their shots they followed up for the rebounds and the basknts scored in this manner were more than sufficient to give them the verdict.

Christ Church—Barriage 8, Edwards 4, Scott, Angell, Saunders 6, Adams 6, Powell 4, Foster.—Total 28.

St. Georges — Burley 3, Morris, Embury, Gardiner, McLean, Flagler (Capt.), Churchill.—Total 20.

Saturday evening three more games will be played to complete the schedule of one of the most successful Church Basketball Leagues ever staged at the Campbell Street Armouries. The games have all been keenly contested yet the best of sportsmanship has been shown by all the players. Many of the players were comparatively new to the game having played but very little before but the average spectator would not suspect such to be the case after watching the various teams in action.

YANKS SCORED WIN OVER BOSTON

Errors Prove Costly to Indians Who Lost to White Sox

New York, April 16—The New York Yankees made it two in a row over the Boston Red Sox here, winning 8 to 1.

The winning tally came in the fourth inning when with the score tied at 7 to 7 and three men on bases, Babe Ruth lifted a long fly to right field. Dickey scored after the catch.

The Red Sox tied the score in the eighth on Berry's home run, a double by Finch Hitter Vancamp and Scartella's single.

The Yanks rapped three pitchers for 13 hits including a home run by Lou Gehrig.

Cleveland, April 16—Errors proved costly to the Cleveland Indians as they dropped the second game of the season to the Chicago White Sox in ten innings, 7 to 6.

After scoring four runs in the third on Hunnefield's two errors to overcome a two-run lead, Chicago won in the tenth on Tate's double against the right field wall scoring Walwood from second.

Caveney started for the Sox and lasted until the ninth, when McKain relieved him. After being nipped for four hits in the third Willis Hudlin retired in the sixth and was replaced by Harder.

Earl Averill, Cleveland centre fielder made the first Indian home run of the season in the third.

Washington, April 16 — "Bump" Hadley proved practically invisible to the Philadelphia A's and the Washington Senators took the second game of the series 7 to 1: Hadley allowed the champions only four hits, struck out five and walked six, but was tight in the pinches.

The A's collected a single in the first and fourth and a walk coupled with Miller's triple in the sixth collected the A's only tally.

Ossie Bluege's timely single in the third and drive Big George Earnshaw from the mound in the next inning, scoring five.

St. Louis, April 16—Sam Gray, St. Louis Browns' pitcher who won only four games last year, had a victory in his first start of the season when the Browns won from Detroit Tigers 6 to 4.

Gray gave up 14 hits but was strongest with runs on bases. The Tigers were left stranded.

Walk Hoyt was hard hit by the Browns in the pinches, Goslin and Ferrell leading the batting attack.

The Tigers were dangerous all the way, scoring their last run in the ninth, but McManus filed out with two on to end the game.

Now Face Powder Is All the Rage

That lovely, natural bloom of youth! Find it in MELLO-GLO. Purest smoothest face powder known. New French process makes it stay on longer. Colorless—approved by United States government, blends perfectly with any complexion. No flaky pasty look. No ugly shine. MELLO-GLO prevents large pores, never irritates skin. "Sold through Druggists and at Toilet Goods Counter."

FLYING blind through fog and darkness—the pilot knows that life itself depends on perfect reading of charts and maps—unflagging attention—accurate calculation of wind-drift. Throughout the scientific world better results always reward extra care.

In the modern precision plant where the new Valet blade is made—workers and keymen alike jealously guard quality for millions of discriminating shavers. Rigid and unvarying conformance to meticulous standards is a creed.

Praised by men who know steel—used and endorsed by those who know faces—the new Valet is an acknowledged favorite among scientists. Acclaimed by metallurgists—this remarkable blade is prescribed by dermatologists for the relief of skin troubles requiring freedom from shaving harshness and irritation.

The new Valet is built exclusively for the Valet AutoStrop Razor—also a fine example of precision workmanship. Cleaning and stropping do not require removal of the blade. Valeize steel is triple-hardened and finished to a marvelous, long-lasting shaving edge. Every blade must pass electro-magnetic and magnifying mirror inspection.

Accept the opinion of famous authorities when you shave tomorrow morning. Try the scientific Valet. Buy blades today—and the razor if you haven't one.

LEAFS CAPTURE OPENING GAME

Baltimore Have Little Trouble in Defeating Royals

Jersey City, April 16. — Toronto Maple Leafs opened the season on the right foot in the International League marathon of 1931, when in the presence of 9,000 fans, many of whom had to stand during the playing field, they took a 9-5 fall out of the Jersey City Skeeters. It was the Leafs' first game under the ownership of Sam Colacurcio, former bat boy, and under the management of George Toporcer, for the last three years second baseman of the champion Rochester Red Wings.

The Leafs' success was accomplished without the aid of any long hits and the Leafs' defeat came with the residents socking Arthur Laird Smith, who pastimed here once for five doubles and two homers as well as for five, on spite.

Laird gets the credit for the win though he was not among those pre sent so the claim of victory.

Pittenger's double in the wake of Clancy's home-run with Sekkin on base, finished Arthur in the eighth. Bob Shawkey then chose to send O'Neil to stop an uprising on the part of Toporcer and Co., walked one man and had one hit off his offerings when Warren Harvey Ogden, of the famous Ogden family, of Ogden, was picked to finish the game.

Ogden finished at Dalhousie, of Columbia, owes Ogden, of Swarthmore, something for keeping Bertie his opening day International League record. A year ago Smith, then with the Royals, presented Festa on kick-off afternoon by a score of 8-3. Ogden is going to do it year until the eighth.

Baltimore, April 16—The Orioles downed the Montreal Royals in the opening game of the season here by the score of 6 to 2.

The Royals tied the score in the eighth as did the Orioles in the ninth but the Flock pounded out three more runners in the last half, aided by three walks.

Monte Pearson, who followed Kousel and Smythe to the mound not only pitched a steady game here, but his single sent in the run that would have been enough to win, in the ninth inning.

Reading, April 16.—A crowd of 7,000 saw Reading open the season's International League game to Buffalo 7 to 5 here this afternoon, the offerings of Johnny Welch for 15 hits and he was removed in the ninth with two out.

Reading could touch Johnny Wilson for only nine hits and 3 runs.

Jay Partridge hit a home run for Reading with two on base in the fifth.

Newark, April 16.—The Rochester Red Wings, three-time winner of the International League pennant got off to a flying start here when they slugged their way to a 7-4 victory over the Newark Bears before an opening day crowd of 20,000. The Red Wings got 13 hits off Timmons and Spence.

George Sisler, former big league star, making his debut with Rochester, singled three times in four trips to the plate.

KLEIN KNOCKED THIRD HOME RUN

St. Louis Cardinals Have Easy Time Defeating Reds

Cincinnati, April 16.—Burleigh Grimes limited the Cincinnati Reds to seven hits and had comparatively easy time pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to victory here yesterday 4 to 0

The Cardinals bit Lucas safely in every inning except the ninth, but got their runs one at a time.

Spectacular catches of liners by Szrigo and Adams furnished the field ing features.

The Reds got one man to second and one to third until the ninth, when Cullop singled and Ford doubled with two out before Bukeforth filed out to end the game.

Philadelphia, April 16.— A second inning rally in which the Philadelphia Phillies scored six runs on seven hits, including two home runs, gave the Phillies a 10 to 7 victory over the New York Giants yesterday, thereby evening the series at one all.

Chuck Klein's terrific hitting featured the game. He had a perfect day at bat, pounding out a home run in the sixth, a triple and two singles.

With three home runs in the two days to his credit, Klein leads both major leagues in home run hitting.

Chicago, April 16.— The Chicago Cubs pounded Claude Willoughby hard in the early innings to take their second game of the series from the Pittsburg Pirates 8 to 5.

Rogers Hornsby's first home run of the season in the fifth inning gave the Cubs their sixth and deciding run.

Bob Smith pitching his first game for the Cubs held the Pirates hitless until the fifth inning. The Pirates bunched hits in the fifth and sixth innings to score all their runs.

The locers had two men on base in the ninth with two retired but Pie Traynor failed to come through.

Boston, April 16.—The Brooklyn Robins felt before the pitching of "Socks" Seibold yesterday afternoon and the Boston Braves won the second successive game of the season by a score of 9 to 3.

The Braves virtually won the game when they launched a four-run rally in the third inning. The Robins pitched Batiss ball, making seven errors.

Alta Cohen, recruit outfielder, replaced Babe Herman in the fifth inning and singled twice in three times at bats.

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

With two Junior clubs in town the interest in minor league ball will be much keener this season.

The new local entry to the junior series is being sponsored by the B.A.A.A. under the direction of Joe Shortt and Vern Weir.

The B.A.A.A. Juniors met at the Y.M.C.A. this week and about twenty enthusiastic boys attended the meeting, which is only a start.

The Juniors will practise at the Fair Grounds with the Seniors, while the Moose Juniors will no doubt practise at the Alemite grounds with the Intermediates.

The Junior Moose will meet next week to make arrangements for the coming season as some of their players have graduated to faster company.

The Junior League this year will be composed of the two local entries, Wellington, Point Anne and possibly one more outside club.

Here is a question that puzzles some fans: There was a runner on first base when the ball was hit to the shortstop, who threw to the second baseman for a force-out. The second baseman did not touch the base. In fact, he never came within a yard of the bag. The runner slid into the base and was called out by the base umpire. In an ensuing argument the umpire-in-chief reversed the decision of the base umpire and called the runner safe. Was that correct? Answer: This play involves one of those frequent disputes between umpires during a ball game. Often an umpire-in-chief takes it upon himself to reverse a decision of the field umpire because he thinks the latter is wrong. This is distinctly contrary to the baseball rules, which provide especially that one umpire may never reverse another. Even if one umpire is satisfied that the other is wrong, he must hold his peace. Either umpire is privileged to ask the other for information. It is not necessary then to change a decision, although the man who asks information may do so if he thinks it is advisable.

Nearly a century ago, Abner Doubleday of Green's Select School, Cooperstown, made the first diagram of a baseball diamond, drawing a stick through the dust to indicate what appeared to him to be the best "paths" and to show the players' positions. With a pencil, Doubleday then made notes on rules for the game, which he named "baseball." Abner Graves, one of the youths who took part in the game under Doubleday's direction, lived to tell this to an official commission appointed to study the origin of the game, in 1911. The first diamond now is known as Doubleday Field.

Every year, Jean Dubuc, coach and scout for the Detroit Tigers, is called upon to follow up a number of the more promising ball players for the future market. Some of the leads prove little short of ludicrous. Last summer, Manager Harris sent Dubuc out to a small town near Boston to investigate a lip on a short-stop, who came back all smiles. "He's a good prospect for his age," reported the scout. "How old is he?" asked Harris gaspingly. "Thirty-nine!" was Dubuc's reply.

A slide ball may be introduced into the majors this year by Stewart Bolen, left-lander drafted by the Phillies from Baltimore. Bolen says it neither breaks like a curve, drops like a knuckler nor hops like a forker. It just takes a sudden, side-wise slide when it reaches the batter. "Even the umpires miss that one the first time they work behind me," declares Bolen.

Joe Hauser of Baltimore, whose feat of driving out 63 home runs last season, stands as an all-time record for Organized Baseball.

In thirty-six years in the International League the Leafs have only nine times finished outside of the first division, and Vice-President Dunn is confident that they won't mar this great record this year.

Here are a few records earned in last year for the 1931 rookie pitchers to shoot at: Games won and lost—Grove (Philadelphia), 23 and 5. Earned runs per game—Vance (Brooklyn), 2.61. Strikeouts—Grove, 216. Complete games—Lyons (Chicago), 29. Bases on balls—Earnshaw (Philadelphia), 126. Wild pitches—Bush (Chicago), 12. Batters hit—Hubbell (New York), 11. Balks—Schaffner (Cleveland), 3.

FASHION HINT

"How to make my old short skirts conform to the new length was a problem to me until I hit on this plan. I dropped the hems; and as the part that had been turned under was darker than the rest, I redyed the entire dress, after having bleached the goods, following directions in the Diamond Dyes package.

"Now my skirts have the appearance of redyeing, of course. I have dyed dresses with Diamond Dyes successful colors. They have saved me many dollars and have never failed to give perfect results—smooth, even colors that will not spot, streak or fade. Don't think my things are new when I redye or tint them with Diamond Dyes." Thus did the wife of Jesse Christ. —Wilhelmine E. Champagne.

HEAH DEM BELLS, MINSTREL BOYS ON DE MARCH

Banjos Ringing, Silver Voices Singing, Old Time Minstrelsy Combined With Surprising New Features

"The sun do move," said the old darkey, and the word do lose its correct sound to Hoyle, Bell, or Harlow, in this jazz age of hurry-up and hustle. But the sun do move, and the sad bilious days and hectic, hilarious days do move, too, after, just to serve to emphasize that there were many things in the past which have almost entirely disappeared and are remembered as pleasant. Radio has dropped out of the scheme of things The movies, silent and audible, have ruthlessly spoiled entertainments at low prices but have never destroyed the old time minstrel show, and the old minstrel shows of long ago. Member 72 Gi. Fields, Hi Henry, Honest Chatcher, Primrose and West and all the other bunch of other wonderful smirth makers of the minstrel clan? I'll say you do.

The minstrels are coming back, they're on the way, with the big parade, the concert and then the opera house, merry end men, the big chorus, sweet chorus, the bones, the tambo, and the funny farce—a great big laugh to chase those blues away.

The big minstrel show, with a chorus of 50 or more singers, that Belleville lovers of minstrelsy have ever heard, and that's no jest, really something extra fine in the way of singing, all new songs and everything. Paul Lavoie says it's the best minstrel show ever turned out and Paul has seen them all and made the best of them.

Some old jokes, but all new features and a rapid, whizz-bang show from start to finish. More soon. Listen in.

Monday and Tuesday, April 27 and 28 are the dates, so mark them and don't fail to be there if you have to go a hundred miles on hands and knees.

TO VISIT CANADA

London, England, April 16—Three hundred and fifty boys from the Great Britain are expected to visit Canada this summer as members of the 1931 tours which have been organized by the Allied Newspapers. The first party, numbering about forty, will reach Montreal in June on the Duchess. The visitors will see Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Niagara Falls, sailing for home from Quebec on July 9th.

A winged postman may circumvent New York's traffic jams by collecting letters in a shuttle plane. The plane would be an amphibian.

RADIO FANS CORNER

A little rough on the waves last night but those who stuck out are to be congratulated on their perseverance. Reception in my particular district is poor but didn't have too much to say so shall hope for more and complete.

The frills and ruffles by Marie last night, were there Ena? She doesn't put on any airs and graces for the public, but "Ena" at Marie any time you see or hear her. Polly Morris's accident, Polly, you are not in two places as she did in Hollywood recently sort of called an enforced hail to their new picture, so Marie has to cool her heel until Polly gets ready to come back. We'll wait, too.

Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees have as their guest artiste tonight the Nerional Cavaliers—you haven't got a hope, Rudy, Graham McNamee at the Mike and the time is 8 o'clock, the station WEAF.

Cuban rumbas by the guit'ar ensemble tonight and vocal solos and duets by Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit. Tilla, Marie is away, will be over the Plantation program from 8 to 8.30 p.m. so don't forget to tune in. At this same hour WLW Nelly Kelly will be singing songs including Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C Sharp Minor, Easter Monday on WJZ's Jack's chat and Ted Hill the march, Middleown Triumphant.

The outstanding guest star on the WJZ hook-up tonight will be Marie Lambie, Metropolitan tenor and the program will open with Frank's "Allah Hu Akbar," Chamlee sings Primi's "Only a Rose" and a group of songs, including, "Sylvia," "Mother Machree," "Dreams of Long Ago" and "Mona." Ena, Marie's playing on board at 9.30 over WJZ.

The big Five Sale tonight at Everybody's Equipery, to come promptly at 8 on WEAF for the best bargains, Uncle Abe and David are ready and waiting to serve you. Mid-Week Pederation Hymn Sing at 7 from WEAF, and at 9.30 Jack Denny's Orchestra from the Ritz-Roilit at ten and at 11.15 Cab Calloway and his Cotton Pickers and at 11.45, and Harry Richman's Orchestra at midnight. I'll be seting you.

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises.

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises and want relief, you can get 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water, and a little sugar. Take a teaspoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises, great relief from deafness, and nothing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone can mix and use this prescription. Ad.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

"Good for you—it was a crime to waste your beauty back of a counter. I'll have to come and see you on a pretext of buying gowns for my sisters—only I have no sisters."

"It isn't a retail place," I explained.

I laughed at my bashfulness. I was happy again, all the world seemed rosy as we drove along the Palisades over the beautiful Storm Drive, and I had a wonderful new position, I would have money enough for pretty clothes and I had the friendship of this adorable Thad Parsons. I hoped that many a society girl would jump at if she could get the least opportunity.

Molly Pelham I always smiled when I thought of her because she had the same name as Thad—Molly had been openly envious when I told her about my new position. She had asked me to try to get her a place down there with me. I intended to do so. I couldn't help thinking what a thrill she would get if she were in my place right now, instead of down at Coney Island with one of her boy friends from the store. And Dolly Hawkins' disappearance was still a mystery—how she would envy me this wonderful afternoon!

"Dreaming dreams?" Thad asked.

"Yes; nice dreams." I admitted.

"Hope I'm in them."

"That's why they are nice, Thad."

"Is that a line or do you mean it, Kitty?"

"Guess."

A WONDERFUL VIEW

"I forbid you to dream any nice dreams without including me hereon mended.

I wondered at what nice country place we would stop for dinner, but had a surprise coming.

Away up in the mountains, in the vicinity of Haverstraw, Thad turned off into a narrow road through some woods, and at the top of the road he parked his car.

There was an opening, a small plot of grass and ledges and the most wonderful view imaginable up and down the Hudson. I shuddered as I looked down the almost sheer drop from the ledge.

"Look out, Kitty," Thad warned. I had run ahead when he was parking the car. I turned and saw him coming with a great big black-covered case.

He put it down on a smooth place on the ledge, well back from the edge, and opened it.

"That—you darling!" I exclaimed, for it was a wonderful supper, with dishes and silverware and sentiments and generous jars. It meant a real picnic, just the two of us up there in that picturesque spot—so much better than any roadhouse dinner could have been.

"Darling myself," he answered.

"I had it put up out at Roxmonte and those are stored but the servants are all there," he explained when I asked how he ever managed such a spread.

A WARNING

Roxmonte was the name of the big place out on Long Island that belonged to his people. I had seen pictures of it and wondered why anyone would want to go any place else on earth when they had such a lovely estate with private beach and everything.

Thad was pouring iced orange juice and I wandered over to the edge of the cliff to watch some canoes with sails far below—they looked like toy boats. Thad kids all in a batch bah.

"Come away, Kitty, that's too dangerous there," Thad called. "If you went over that would be the end—and how could I live without you?

I turned sharply, there was so much sincerity in his voice.

"Why Thad, do you really mean—" Something in my tone brought me to my feet and I felt myself slipping down over the edge of the high cliff.

When I felt the ledge and sod give way beneath my feet and knew that I was slipping down over the cliff, I screamed with mingled fright and horror.

But above my shrill scream I heard the agonized shout of warning from Thad.

A warning seemed too late, then.

I clutched blindly and felt a sharp pain in my knee.

Something was stopping me from falling farther. I looked down to see what it was, and closed my eyes in terror.

I couldn't see what slight thing was holding me, but I could see the jagged rocks among the scattered trees far below, so far that the sight sickened me.

Then a strong grasp on both of my wrists!

"You are all right, dear; you are all right now," he was saying as he lifted me up.

"Put your knee on that edge—there," and as I made her released one wrist and put his arm around me under my arms, helped me back to the top of the ledge.

NOT GOING TO FAINT

"Are you going to faint! I've a little brandy in a flask," he said, as he took his arm about me and led me over toward the hamper.

"I'm not going to faint now—I felt like it when I looked down."

He released and stared at him. I felt my face burn. Half of my skirt was torn off and I stood revealed in little pink silk bloomers.

Then I laughed.

"There's no use being modest, Thad—here I am, half undressed, and it isn't my fault, but how on earth am I going to get home?"

Thad looked at me. "Kitty, you are a corker—just a corker, to take it that way. Don't worry about getting home. You can wear my top coat when we go into some country store around here. You can pick up some sort of a dress, good enough to get you home—look, there's an ell to Ernest!"

And so I had. I remembered feeling the pain.

"First aid and then some eats," Thad was talking rapidly to cover up his own fright. He hadn't got that color, back yet.

He brought cushions from the car and with a handkerchief and some brandy from his flask he washed the dirt out of the cut.

"The brandy is a good antiseptic," he declared, "and certainly made my knee burn like fire.

Then he opened up the containers and we began to eat. All sorts of dainties had been put up, cold chicken, cold meats, jellies, bread and butter rolls. I was all over my fright by this time.

Thad stopped suddenly and put his arm about me.

"Kit—if—if you'd gone over there I would have gone after you," he said.

A KISS FROM THAD

"Why Thad, what good would that have done?"

"I can't help it—that's just the way I feel—you know I'm crazy about you," and then and there I got my first kiss from Thad Parsons. I hoped he didn't hear or feel my heart thumping. I was no longer right then—I knew that Thad loved me and felt that I was his!

"You do care for me, don't you, Kitty?"

"I don't fly into a rage every time anyone pays me precious old dear," I answered.

Another kiss.

"I am certainly glad no one is here as I must be an awful sight with a dirt-and-jam face and—and—that skirt," I said as we had resumed eating.

"You couldn't be anything except a beautiful sight—and we are going to be mighty happy, aren't we, dearest?"

"I hope so," I said, honestly.

Thad had a ring in his imagination, a solitaire on my engagement finger.

Thad went over and examined the place where I had fallen. If I had remained on the ledge all would have been well, but I had stepped over some sod and the stones beneath had washed out so that it gave way. Thad brought back sod and lay down flat, reaching down and hauling up the half of my skirt that had torn off. It had held me for a moment, and when he hauled me up he had torn pink bah bah.

"Come away, Kitty, that's too dangerous there," Thad called. "If you went over that would be the end—and how could I live without you?

I turned sharply, there was so much sincerity in his voice.

"Why Thad, do you really mean—" Something in my tone brought me to my feet and I felt myself slipping down over the edge of the high cliff.

Then a strong grasp on both of my wrists!

"You are all right, dear; you are all right now," he was saying as he lifted me up.

"Put your knee on that edge—there," and as I made her released one wrist and put his arm around me under my arms, helped me back to the top of the ledge.

NOT GOING TO FAINT

"Are you going to faint! I've a little brandy in a flask," he said, as he took his arm about me and led me over toward the hamper.

"I'm not going to faint now—I felt like it when I looked down."

He released and stared at him. I felt my face burn. Half of my skirt was torn off and I stood revealed in little pink silk bloomers.

Then I laughed.

"There's no use being modest, Thad—here I am, half undressed, and it isn't my fault, but how on earth am I going to get home?"

Thad looked at me. "Kitty, you are a corker—just a corker, to take it that way. Don't worry about getting home. You can wear my top coat when we go into some country store around here. You can pick up some sort of a dress, good enough to get you home—look, there's an ell to Ernest!"

And so I had. I remembered feel-

SAILOR CHANTIES ONCE ECHOED IN OLD SAINT JOHN

Saint John, N.B., April 16.—(By Douglas A. MacLennan)—Twinkling lights shone across the harbor through drizzling rain; port noises blended with the rattling of a train of dump cars on their way to the Mill Pond, being filled in as part of the necessities of harbor development. The new West Side elevator loomed scrubbed-like in the dark.

And a former sea-rover stood at head of Market Slip with remembrance in his voice as he mused aloud on the changes wrought with time. He was William Hammond, now a resident of Union Street West, whose home was once sure corner where he might toss his clothes-bag.

Gradually the noises of progress faded, to be taken up by the phantom ring of caulkers' hammers.

"The last vestiges of sailing vessels have almost vanished," said William Hammond. Ships laden with lumber, their bowsprits and skinning poles high in the gale, Old shipyards where once hundreds of men cheered over the christening of vessels are waste places. Machinery rattles where once the sound of mallets, the squeak of saws, and chantey songs filled the air. . . . The building of "the ships of grey St. John."

"Few sail-spurred ships sail today," he muttered angrily.

Scavangering sea-gulls cried over the flats of the Pond as if to remind all that on far-off shores "new" old-time ships rotted or were used as coal barges—their history, built ere and port of register forgotten. But still there remains a handful of ageing men who know those vessels—and looking men with wistful eyes, jealous of honors bestowed on fast liners—strangely bashful.

"We always like to see a 'sailer' come up the harbor," the story-teller said. "You young fellows can't understand."

"Something's missing," he continued as he dragged on his ancient pipe.

He became loquacious, speaking in quick short sentences.

"Who cares about those days?" he demanded, pacing back and forth along the deck. "Why, when I was a boy back in '60, Mr. John Stirling like it never has since. Then upwards of 25 blacksmiths, 27 ship-builders 24 shoemakers, 23 carriage and sleigh makers dozens of boarding houses, more than a score of hotels seven sailmakers, five block and pump foundries 13 auctioneers, and close to 300 beer retailers flourished here and employed lads. They're all in my book at the house—wonderful men they were.

"What? Well there were bellhangers, a beer factory brass foundries many carvers and gilders, only 2 engravers, tanners and curriers, small boat builders."

The vision faded for a moment as a tug steamed down the harbor to meet an ocean liner arriving, arrayed in lights out of Liverpool. Gradually, the rattling of the dump cars and the shouts of the lumbermen were again surmounted by the curses of foreign sailors operating brawl-contests.....old chantey songs.....flapping canvas lumber ponds. Story-cars, operating between foot of King Street and Indiantown, silk toppers, hitching posts in King street, the Saxby Gale of '03 and the ruin it left in its wake, the great fire of '77, followed by the erection of tents and shelters in King Square.

"I remember the Scammell fleet of bird ships of about the year '66 and '67—the Tropic Bird, Snow Bird Prairie Bird, King Bird, and a host of others. And the Scars who built one of the finest full-riggers ever on Strait Shore. Now they're gone forgotten," he said.

"And my back in '68 or '69. Mathewway and Small, Tom McLeod, Tippett and Goldsworthy Bro. Stack house and others built ships around the corners of Middle and Union streets and King and Market Place; West Side, I remember dads used to send their sons to the yards after wood.

"I say nobody cares nowadays. Some do?"

It was his defense. With his ancient pipe gripped in his teeth, he leaned forward as we sat on the edge of the wharf.

"Saint John's ships were known the world over. Part of the second, grandfather built ships.....four generations built ships.....Robert Holder made sails for 'em. So did the late John Roop on Queen's Wharf, John Gardiner on Lawton's Wharf and a half-a-dozen others. Some could have been called Sail and ship chandler line." 'Twas paved with wooden blocks.

"Local ships in '66 were valued at about a million dollars and in '70 or thereabouts more than 800 vessels were owned here or more, valued at around seven millions of dollars. A dollar a day was a good wage then. You had to work from dawn till dark .....nobody had to loaf though unless they wanted to," he said. "Men loved their work and took pride in their trade..... master craftsmen all of them.

"And what a thrill folks used to get when a big one slid down the ways and splashed into the water, perhaps of the harbor or Marsh Creek. And now we old gaffers can only dream, talk, swap yarns and look at old pictures."

Then came a story of the world-famous Marco Polo, best known ship ever launched in Marsh Creek.

"James Smith built her..... she went to Liverpool in 15 days..... ran to Australia in 68 days, beating a steamer by a week. Fastest ship in the world at that time. She went trampings at last and eventually was "laid-up" near home, she piled up on the rocks of P.E.I.

"And there were lots of ships plying between here and the Upper Pondports, with lumber and provisions. Water was more popular for transportation of such things in those days when I was a boy. And the old wood-boats down river, gaunt rivermen all spirits now.

After that he told of the chantling river-men who chanted no more. Where barrow boats, millions of feet of lumber piled on the sides of the Mill Pond and Strait Shore. schooner or rigged barges that took on cargo to go to Fredericton. Captain Paddy Gallagher, unerwned king-of-the-river-men. He piloted his tug through the falls over with the Mic-Mac, few ever taken through by a single craft. Hundreds fought the old Suspension Bridge. "Here comes Gallagher was a favorite shout along the river-shore.

"But the worlds is quick to forget .....idols of old days are forgotten.....only old men now.....

"Those were great days for us young fellows when a locally built ship started in open water, and sailed ten, their shining white canvas, huge sailors, who on going ashore, loafed in Water street or swapped tales in bar-rooms."

As the night waned the story-teller told of the old tide mill on the Mill Pond. The wheel turned when the tide rushed in and at slack tide the men went home.

Fishermen made comfortable livings from their harbor-ever catches. Open air markets in Market Place on both sides of the street where horses and feed were sold in huge quantities and where country folk from up-river sold their wares. All gone now, only memories.

They Do Us More Good Than any other Medicine

Says Toronto Man Of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mr. McMullin Always Keeps a Box in the House

Toronto, Ont., April 13 (Special)— What most people want these days is a medicine that they can turn to with perfect confidence in time of need. Mr. McMullen, 341 McRoberts Avenue, Toronto, has found such a remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills. He writes,

"We are never without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever we feel out of sorts we take them and find they do us more good than any other medicine. We have used them for six years."

Your health, strength and vitality depend upon the condition of your blood, for it is through the blood that every part of the body is nourished and built up. To enjoy good health the blood must be kept pure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are an excellent blood purifier. They do not affect the Liver or Stomach, they are just an effective Kidney medicine.

CENTRE

Centre, April 15 By Mail— Centre Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. Roy Giles on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance. The afternoon was spent in sewing and plans were made for a social evening in May to be held at Mrs. Murray Sherry's when a quilt will be disposed of.

Community Club was held at Victoria Church. Mr. Scott of Belleville was present and gave a fine address.

The young people are going to Demorestville on Friday night of this week to put on their play "My Irish Rose."

Rev. Lorne Burr and Mrs. Burr and children were guests of Wellis Fox and family on Friday.

The farmers of this vicinity are on the land this week being much earlier than last season.

Mr. C. Stoneburgh of Wellington agent for Watkins Med. Co. was through this community last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wellis Fox were guests of Mr. Arthur Stewart of Consecville, Thursday night.

Mrs. Annie Allison has been spending Easter week at her home Jericho Street.

As a vermicide an excellent preparation is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. It has saved the lives of countless children.

SMART WEDDING AT THE CAPITAL

Ottawa, April 15—Under the cherished omen of a bright and cloudless sky, Miss Mildred Maritann Bennett today became the wife of Hon. W. D. Herridge. A radiant sun shone throughout the day and poured through the colored windows of Chalmers United Church as Premier R. B. Bennett gave his sister in marriage to the recently appointed Canadian Minister to Washington.

Although the ceremony took place at 1.30 o'clock, crowds had begun to assemble in the neighborhood of the church by noon, and later thousands thronged the streets. As the time for the wedding approached eager throngs were seeking places of vantage to catch a glimpse of the charming bride. At the bride's request the doors of the church were thrown open, and as many as could find room were present to witness the ceremony. Aside from the Viceregal party invited guests included immediate relatives only.

Viceregal Party Arrives

The Governor-General and Countess Bessborough arrived a few minutes before the ceremony, and were conducted to the front of the church at the right of the centre aisle.

The nuptial processional hymn signified the arrival of the bride. The room entered with Rev. Dr. J. W. Woodside. Both paid their respects to their Excellencies before taking their places at the communion table, which was banked with palms, ferns and great clusters of Easter lilies.

DROPS DEAD ON STREET

Oshawa, April 15—Dropping suddenly to the sidewalk this afternoon while walking near his home, 158 Celina Street, Stephen Ukrop expired before medical aid could reach him. Death is attributed to a heart attack; and no inquest will be held Ukrop was 24 years of age, and had been in Canada only one year—from Czechoslovakia. He is survived by a wife and one child in his home land.

Miller's Worm Powders not only make the infantile system unbearable for worms, but by their action on the stomach, liver and bowels they correct such troubles as lack of appetite biliousness and other internal disorders that the worms create. Children thrive upon them, and no matter what condition their worm-infested stomachs may be in, they will show improvement as soon as the treatment begins.

Little Benny's Note Book

MEDECINE

Medecine is what the doctor perscribes on Sunday when you forgit to take it and get better just a same, and sometimes you take it and dont get better anyways.

This proves the hardest thing to do is to know what to do.

If the doctor came to see you and didnt write out a perscription for you, you mite think you was paying him for nothing, because you could hold your own pulls and look at your own tung in a looking glass and even cani write yourself out a perscription.

For this reason the doctor gennerly always writes one out for you and you send it around to the drug store and the drug store man reeds it with out taking serprised and says it will be reddy in about a hour without even telling you what color is going to be.

Medecine usually comes either in bottles or pills. Bottle medecine gennerlly tasts so fearse that you begin to make a face as soon as you start poring it out in the spoon, while pill medecine has no taist but you never know weather it will go down easy or need eater swalowing, being why most people have silitly doubtful absent minded expression while they are taking a pill.

When a fellow has to take medecine his mother shakes the bottle for him and pores it out and holds the spoon for him instead of letting him take it himself, his only regret gennerlly being that she didnt swaller it by him too.

This proves nobody can do everything for you.

Spring—and thoughts of the country! Martha's "guest" could hardly wait to select their little camp by the lake. They scanned the advertisements, and a few telephone calls to the various owners brought great results. They were ever so pleased with their new home. And it was all arranged so easily—so satisfactorily!

The examples the past has left behind must make very many better in the present.

WILLIAM POWELL DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE AT BELLE

No other actor on the screen today can smash across a climax, hold the interest at such a white-hot pitch, fill his part with such a sense of of drama as William Powell. We have believed this since he first took particular note of this suave, restrained star in "Street of Chance." We repeat it with the utmost assurance after seeing his performance in "Man of the World," at the Belle Theatre last night.

True "Man of the World" presents Powell with the opportunity to do great things; gives him a supporting cast of unusual strength; a story of virile power. It is Powell who wields all the elements together and holds the attention, first as the pitiless blackmailer who preys on the weaknesses of millionaire Americans in Paris, then as the lover awakened to new desires which he realizes are beyond his reach. Lastly as the man whom love has made big enough to renounce the only thing he wants for the sake of the girl he loves.

Carole Lombard, who has been stepping right along in moving picture circles for several months, has her best role so far as the lovely American girl who captures Powell's heart. She handles the part with great skill for a telling effect. Her rival, the many-sided Miss Wynne Gibson, is splendid in a character role that requires the ultimate in careful handling. The men in the cast, Guy Kibbee, a recent new-comer to the screen but well-known on the Broadway stage, and young Lawrence Gray are well cast and capable.

Altogether, "Man of the World" is grand entertainment, moving in the glittering world of Paris and New York a remotely sinister note underlying its always charming action. In bold relief, the terrific scene of Powell's dilemma stands out with splendid force. It is a picture of mingled contrasted lights and shadows, of surprising changes in mood, of finely drawn characters.

Daphne Pollard in a very funny comedy entitled "America or Bust,' an interesting reel of news events, Jesse Crawford, famed Organist in a brilliant melodious treat, and other entertaining talkies were also presented.

"Wypers" Day

Throughout Canada "Wypers" Day will be celebrated on April 14 next, the 16th anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres—the day when Canada's First Contingent saved the day for the Allies, held the enemy at bay despite the fact that they were greatly outnumbered and partly overcome by poison gas which was first used on that day as a means of warfare.

Throughout Canada today, in offices, in factories, in shops, and even in hospitals, a few war veterans wearing a small red cherub in the lapel of their coats, are all that are left of the gallant Thirty Thousand that comprised the First Canadian Contingent.

Only a small percentage of the Originals of the First Canadian Contingent is left. The spirit that moved them in 1914 remains as strong as ever and every year those residing in the Ottawa district as in other parts of Canada forgather on the anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres, or "Wypers" as the Tommies called it, to pay honour to those that failed to return and to live over again the stirring days of 1914 and 1915.

The annual re-union of the Red Chevrons of Ottawa district is being held this year at Chaudiere Golf Club, on the Hull-Aylmer road. Arrangements have been completed for handling an even larger contingent of District Red Chevrons than in previous years. From Kingston, a representative contingent headed by Lt. General Archibald D. Macdonnell commander of the First Canadian Division in the early days of hostilities, will attend. Similar contingent's are expected from Brockville, Smiths ville, Pembroke and other sections of the Ottawa Valley.

Arrangements have been completed by the executive of the Red Chevrons to ensure the comfort and pleasure of all members attending the annual re-union dinner. They will leave the Plaza, by the Chateau Laurier at 7.30 p.m. sharp to transport members to the Chaudiere Golf Club, Frank Rogers and Ben Ayer are directing the entertainment, a good dinner is being provided and speeches are to be curtailed.

FAIR SEX FIGHTS WITH WHEATEN DIET

Enquiries among restaurateurs in several Canadian cities suggest that the fair sex has decided to rent and letter diet to preserve that sylphlike figure. Gone is the starvation menu—the diet of toast and—the glass of water. Instead the modern miss is slimming on whole wheat, usually in prepared biscuit form—with cream and fruit added.

The enquiries which were made of restaurant owners by the Canadian Shredded Wheat Company included the following question: "Are individual foods of all types more popular with lady customers than five years ago?" The reply was an almost unanimous "YES" with the cried that whole breakfast is still the big cereal eating meal, whole wheat items have become increasingly popular at other meals, particularly tea.

Asked for reasons for this change many replied that waitresses reported to them that customers had decided that, whole wheat, fruit and milk was a slimming nourishing diet.

Apt is thought by the Canadian Shredded Wheat Company that the current new era has been inspired partly by advertising but more certainly by personal medical advice through various channels emphasizing the complete food value of such a diet without increasing bodily weight.

A Household Medicine.—They that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household medicine and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is an inexpensive medicine, do, keep it at hand and you'll find for it may come most unexpectedly.

In certain sections of North Carolina may be found sandstone that is as flexible as rubber when cut in thin strips.

"Jack Oakie Gag's Gang Gangdom's Kings in Joy Fest

Jack Oakie is "Put on the Spot" in his newest starring picture, "The Gang Buster," which comes to the Belle Theatre, Tomorrow and Saturday, matinee daily, but with his usual dumb cockiness, Oakie not only manages to survive slivery threats and countless dangers but comes out on top revealing the original Oakie smile.

In his buoyant, boisterous manner Oakie creates out of his best roles in "The Gang Buster." Cast as a small town insurance agent ,Oakie comes to the big city where before he can say Jack Robinson, finds himself surrounded by all sorts of desperadoes modeled along the "charming" lines of Al Capone. Jack Oakie, nothing loath, tries to sell them insurance and when (later on) this gang kidnaps the girl he loves, Oakie sets out to do a little rescuing act. And if you know your Jack Oakie, you'll understand that he accomplishes this mild task with little effort. For gangster or no gangsters, Oakie is a law abiding citizen who happens to be in love. And with love as the incentive, anything is possible. With Jack Oakie anyway.

The girl who is greatly responsible for Oakie's "gang-busting" propensities, is played by Lya Arthur, the comely blond haired young actress who played in the "Fi Manchu" and Van Dine resin. Oakie's father is "put on the spot" and Oakie feels responsible for his future—but he gets mixed in between selling insurance policies Oakie defends Lya's father in court (to the loughest gangsters you've ever seen. As a gay picture, this "gang-buster," one that is sure to keep you in the best of humour.

The gangsters are played for all they are worth by the hardest looking group of actors now appearing on the Talking screen. Included among them are William Orlamond Boyd who played an important role in "The Spoilers" Warner MacDonald, Tom Kennedy, and Harry Stubbs. All of them sock and kick their part perfectly.

"Rango" the thrilling sequel to "Africa Speaks,"-is the added attraction on the same program. "Rango" is not merely a photographic account of thrills and adventures. It is more much more than that. The story itself is the most fascinating part of "Rango." From some mysterious manner Ernest Schoedsack, the producer of "Chang" and "Grass" has developed a parallel drama of man and beast that compels interest. In short, you will find "Rango" an exciting, breath taking film of magnificent, unconscious courage. Those who, ever so often, seek the unusual in screen entertainment, should make it a point to see Shoedsack's saga of daring and courage. A good comedy, Belle News, and closing chapter of "The Spell of the Circus" serial, will also be exhibited on the same program.

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon, April 15 (By Mail)—The auction sale of Mr. Jay Haggerty was very largely attended on Wednesday and good prices were paid for things in general.

Mrs. Haggerty's two sisters, Mrs. J. Kingston and Mrs. W. Richardson of Tweed were stopping a few days on account of the sale.

Mr. Nelson Sarles has taken up his abode in Madoc township where he is making cheese in the Bacon Factory, to which he goes every morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Reymonds and Jas. also Mrs. M. Latta were callers at Mrs. J. J. Wilsons on Monday night, were pleased to see Mrs. Latta so well.

Mr. W. H. Kincaid of Toronto visited his sister last week accompanied by Mr. H. Moorcroft, Toronto.

The box social at the home of Mr. P. Carr was rather a disappointment as the weather was not too good. The programme was fully carried out and a real good time was had. Stapley's family were the entertainers and a real orchestra furnished the music, a good evening was spent those that were absent missed a whole lot.

Several attended the pancake tea at the same evening at Ambrose Presbyterian.

Glad to report Mrs. A. Adams improving after her severe cold.

Mr. Paul Kingston has a bad cold also.

Mrs. M. Johnson spent a few days with Mrs. G. Post last week.

Mr. M. Johnson spent a few days with Mrs. G. Post last week.

PEACHES 2 No. 2 Squat Tins 25c

Ontario Peaches are without a doubt the finest flavoured peaches the world produces. They have not however, the smooth, finished appearance of peaches grown and canned in warmer climates, and being "tree-ripened" before canning, are not as firm in texture and the syrup is more inclined to be "cloudy." Ontario produced a bountiful crop of peaches last season, packing continuing very late into the autumn, resulting in a considerable quantity of STANDARD QUALITY fruit, and more ripe than usual, going into tins. This accounts for the special sale this week in which we are featuring "TREE-RIPENED" STANDARD QUALITY ONTARIO PEACHES at this very low price.

MARINE STIR IN VICINITY OF LOCAL HARBOUR

Belleville's water front is a hive of industry these days. The shipmen and shipwrights are in great demand, as the locals yachts are being overhauled. Ralph Boulter, who operates a marine engine station at the harbour, told the press that the outlook for boating seemed to be on the upward trend as more motor boats are acquired each year. Although the larger steamers have disappeared from the bay, the lighter launch is coming back. Mr. Boulter is rigging out "Sherry" Hatchly fine big yacht for the coming season and he will be busy for the next few weeks overhauling some of local boats.

The fishermen are very busy on the bay at present. The firm of W. Black and Co. handle in the vicinity of forty tons of fish each week. These fish coming in by water, help swell the marine trade locally.

"Jack" Robbin, veteran of the harbour, stated that this was about the earliest season for the marine men in years, and that they were taking advantage of the fine weather. Mr. Robbin is overhauling the sailing vessel which the local Naval cadets will use for training purposes this summer. It is a fine looking craft about forty-four feet long with a twelve foot beam, and no doubt it will be the pride of every cadet. "Jack" also stated that the water had receded about three feet since last season, but that this was no cause to worry, as last season was very nearly high water mark. He also complained about the grease which seems to come from the river and lodge in the harbour, thus damaging the newly painted crafts. This could be avoided by closing up the culvert that runs under the park. Mr. Robbin also spoke on the advisability of placing pins or spiles on the park dock so that visiting yachts could tie up at the park, as there are more and more visiting marine men each year.

This fine vessel winters at Belleville every year.

Also at the dock the men are painting gas buoys and getting them ready to be placed in the bay, so that they may guide the ships to safety.

The smaller craft such as skiffs and canoes have not been in prominence during the past few years but there is a tendency to return to this form of sport.

Later in the season the gasoline companies intend bringing in the product by water. The British-American Co. have an eight inch pipe line from the old dock at present. While the Imperial Oil Co., have purchased the old Dorsey coal barns and are planning to erect gas tanks, which will be filled from schooners operated by the company. So these combined with the coal schooners, will make Belleville a busy port this season.

At the old Belleville dock there is a dredge preparing for the coming season as there is to be considerable work in that line to be done in and around the bay of Quinte this summer.

All in all it seems that a big season is ahead of the men that follow the water. There is nothing quite as fascinating as going down to the water front and spending a few hours with the sailors and ex-tars.

LIFE-EXISTENCE AND THE RIGHT TO EXIST

Life as here used, means existence and the right to exist and to enjoy all the blessings incident thereto. Jesus came to earth that the people might have life, he said: This is Life eternal that they might know Thee the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. Jesus Christ by His death and resurrection purchased for man the right to live. As the people progress on the highway going in the way of holiness the Lord will gradually reconstruct them that is in the way. He will bless them with peace, prosperity, health and strength. There are multitudes who are not wicked because of the wicked influence of Satan, the enemy. This wicked work the Lord will undo for all of those who are willing to have it undone.

If these wicked ones turn away from their wickedness and go on up the highway in the way of holiness and righteousness they will gradually be reconstructed and continuing to the end thereof, will be granted the right to live forever....When the wicked Ones turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed and doeth which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive. Because he is considereth and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed he shall surely live, he shall not die.

It will be the obedient who will be given the right to eternal life and who will live as Jesus stated: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep My saying He Shall never see death." Then he that lives and believes and keeps on the road shall live and not die. The reign of Christ will destroy all of man's enemies and the last enemy that will be destroyed is death. For He has put all things under His feet. But when He saith, "All things are put under him it is manifest that he is accepted, which did put all things under him.

The faithful shall live forever and never die receiving from the Lord the right to live.

It is hopeful anyone reading this how Life eternal can be obtained; will pay heed to the sayings of Christ if not already prepared for eternity will not neglect this important matter.

Address, 23 West Bridge Street, Belleville, Ontario.

SCATTERED FAMILIES

It isn't always easy to keep a family together. One member goes one place—another drifts somewhere else. Letters are infrequent. The purest, cleanest, pleasantest way to keep in touch is by telephone. Long Distance brings back the old-time intimacy.

Exposed to hot winds and sun, and far from the base of water supplies, a treetop becomes more or less like a desert plant.

GOOD VALUES IN USED CARS

See the Ford dealer when you want a USED CAR. He has many good values taken in trade. Wide selection in makes, types and prices.

HOW THE FORD POLICY PROTECTS YOU

THE Ford dealer will give you good value in a Used Car just as he gives you good value in a new car. The Ford policy is one of fair dealing in every transaction.

The Used Cars offered for sale by Ford dealers have been taken in trade for new Fords. Because there was no over-allowance at that time, there is no overcharge in the price you pay.

The Ford dealer bases his allowance on the true worth of the Used Car. It is resold to you on the same basis.

The Used Cars sold by Ford dealers include many makes and many types—open and closed. Some are relatively new—some have seen a great deal of service. There is a wide range of prices, depending on the make and condition of the car.

Before the Ford dealer offers a Used Car for sale it is gone over carefully by experienced mechanics and put in good serviceable condition.

The Ford dealer's business grows in accordance with the service he renders motorists in his territory. He knows that giving good honest value in Used Cars will lead to more sales of new Fords. He wants your business, your friendship and your respect.

See him, therefore, when you want a good Used Car. You can be confident of receiving good value for your money.

TURN 26 CHICKS OVER TO S. ARMY

Newark, N. J., April 16—The prohibition unit here turned over to the Salvation Army this afternoon twenty-six hens, four roosters and a growing number of eggs, after having cared for and fed the birds for twenty-four hours at the government warehouse at 167 Vanderpool Street.

Much against their will, the dry agents acquired the chickens yesterday. The poultry in four crates had been used to camouflage seventy-nine half-barrels of beer on a truck seized by State troopers near Toms River Saturday, it was said, and the police insisted the chickens were part of the seizure.

The first egg was laid soon after the chickens reached the warehouse. There were more today. Caring for the hens became a problem, which there indulge his appetite.

It is the belief of Mr. Fellows en-tertes as the historian. It was he who from Casablanca to Fez which passes through this town and makes the journey in six hours. There are two certain trains daily to Fez and in addition four electric trains to Rabat from Casablanca, making the trip in one hour and a half.

Although Morocco is a French Protectorate, the country is still under the control of the Moors, with the Sultan at their head. Religious freedom is allowed. The laws are respected by the native and foreign populations and the streets through the towns and villages are clean and well kept. In sanitation the French officials have worked wonders.

The chief articles of food for the stranger in Morocco are fowls. Fowls are plenty of good eggs. All kinds of flowers, fruits, vegetables and salads abound everywhere, as the soil is very fertile. There are 26 comfortable hotels at all the stopping places from Casablanca right through to Algiers, under the management of the Societe des Voyages et Hotels Nord Africa, which also operates six-wheeled touring cars that travel across the desert.

Marrakech is the star Winter resort in Morocco and is fast becoming a rival to Cairo, as it is much nearer and only four hours by automobile from Casablanca. A port is under construction at Tangier, which is under international control.

The poorest paid laborers in this country earn about 45 to 50 cents a day, United States currency, carrying stones or small baskets filled with soil, or sweeping the roads. Although there has been no much financial depression in Europe and in America during the past Winter, Morocco and Algeria have not suffered well. So far there have been more than 2,500 tourists, mostly Americans, taking the 19-day motor tour from Casablanca to Algiers and several families and parties are booked for this month and May.

The industries are being developed and the manganese and lead mines in Eastern Morocco are operating, to the surprise of the Moors who owned the land and sit in the shade of their marble floored patios listening to the splashing fountains as they smoke their chibouks. The old Moors of pure blood who are called like Europeans, do not smoke cigarettes. The masses do as they can, cheaper and easier to carry around.

Back in the country the people still cling to their little donkeys for traveling and carrying small packages of freight and their bullock plows drawn by oxen or camels. Their forks and shovels are of the same material.

Moors Attract Army of African Tourists

(By T. Walter William in New York Times.)

Rabat, Morocco.—The French Government has spent billions of francs in the development of the country of the Moors since it was placed under the protection of France in 1912, and its opening up has been a wonderful boon to the traveling public. With all the improvements in Morocco, the ruins of the old palaces have been repaired and the beautiful gardens are well kept.

Casablanca, which was a fishing village of 200 to 300 inhabitants in 1908, is now a flourishing seaport and town with a population of 200,000 that is increasing daily. Villas have been erected for the wealthy French people who come there for the Winter, business buildings and five-story apartments are being built in the outskirts and the real estate business

Moors who owned valuable sites along the seacoast have cleared them by their ancestors, found themselves rich overnight when the boom started and now drive about in luxurious automobiles, their harem following closely veiled, in less pretentious cars.

When the French took over the Protectorate of Morocco it was a land of magic mystery to the white people of Europe, and travelers generally confined themselves to the coast ports of Tangier, Ceuta, and Mogador. There were no roads into the interior and the only means of transportation was by horse, camel or donkey over the old caravan trails. Today there are well-kept asphalt roads everywhere except through the Riff country, which is still unfriendly to all foreigners.

Formerly it took three days to travel from Casablanca to this ancient stronghold of the pirates, a distance of eighty kilometers; now the journey is made by automobiles and motor buses in one hour and a half. Recently 550 American tourists landed from the French liner France and had ample time to spend five hours visiting the ruined palaces and gardens dating back to the eleventh century and see the interesting sights in Casablanca before going back to their ship.

In 1912 travelers visiting Morocco had to land in small boats and be carried through the surf by the sturdy Moorish boatmen as they still have to do at Tangier and Mogador today. The time from Rabat to Fez was seven days on horseback, stopping at native khans and there were under an escort of soldiers, as the natives in the villages were hostile to foreigners. There is a railway now

Invention Uses Water to Clear Sound Waves

A new acoustical device which sends sound waves through a tank of water in order to eliminate natural sound, has replaced the ordinary horn loud-speaker for the presentation of music and talking pictures in the Chanin Exhibition Theatre on the fifteenth floor of the Chanin Building, Forty-second St. and Lexington Avenue, New York.

The instrument, known as the Volt Reonator, is the invention of Christian A. Volt, an acoustical engineer, and is covered by patent applications owned by Murray T. Quigg of 165 Broadway. The reonator was used with marked success in the Chanin Theatre recently at a private preview showing of the Columbia picture "Dirigible," at which Dr. Hugo Eckner was present.

The instrument consists of a square box about four feet high, in which more than 100 metal tubes are suspended. The box is placed over a tank of water, one end of which the tubes below and in front of the screen. This end is fitted with an angle which gives the water a shallow margin against a slope of about 45 degrees. The cone-speaker is fitted to a baffle fastened snugly on top of the box.

Each sound wave set up by the unit is directed into the box and is resonated by the air column appropriate to it which is furnished by the resonating tubes in the same way the original wave was resonated by the musical instrument or the human mouth of a person.

After resonating the wave passes to the surface of the water, from which the full value of the wave is discharged into the air at the surface of the water in front of the screen. In this manner all waves of both high and low frequency are distributed upon a path of the same order acteriale by radiation from a single source point.

The method is in marked contrast with common systems of sound distribution which divide the waves into separate streams emitted in different directions from the sides of the horn. The effect, it is asserted, is to give a remarkable naturalness to the human voice, the clarity of musical tones, a greater audibility in the range of the unit and the even distribution of sound throughout a theatre.

Garnitures on Lamb Lost Job for "Iron-Tongue"

A new voice bellowed lustily through Madison Square Garden, New York City, a new face lifted the weight plainly labeled "500 lbs." Purple in the face with the strain, veins stepped into tights and accepted the challenge of the ailing "Gino, the Man With the Iron Tongue"—is no more. He deteriorated, or, perhaps it was put too much protein. His tongue softened. He lost the fight.

Elmo was known as a worthy man. But food got him; he was given to garnitures on his lamb and veal. Under performances it was his habit to lay down to sundry pieces and first noted the decline of Elmo. He noticed his friend was having a hard time raising the "500 lbs" from position. He was present the night Elmo dropped the weight, smashed it against the wooden flooring, and he knew the end was near.

"I did everything I could to save him," said Mr. Fellows, "I arranged with one of the mechanics to get a new weight made of tin. But he couldn't lift it very well. Then I tried cigar-box wood, and when that failed, molded one of pulp. But even this did not work.

Feeling with the props, I felt perhaps I could do something to strength-en Elmo's tongue. He seemed weakened it, probably starch or something would fix it up again. I gave him large quantities of candy, maple syrup, apples, figs and raisins. I figured this fact would be pretty good for weight lifters, but it wasn't. "Elmo got more and more depressed, so I took away the pulp weights and painted a couple of "500 lbs" on balloons. But they went up so suddenly they nearly lifted him off his feet. Just experimenting then, I attempted a vegetable diet, but I might just as well have saved it.

"Well, to make a long story short, Elmo showed no signs of improvement. Then he got into a fight with the sword-swallower. At the last performance in Jackson, Miss., the sword pierced a small dagger into Elmo's weights. They exploded, and the game was up. He was, I regret to say, fired."

STANDARD BRANDS LIMITED REPORTS RECORD YEAR

W. C. LECKIE APPOINTED VICE-PRESIDENT

At the annual meeting of Standard Brands Limited held in Montreal on April 15th, Mr. Arthur Whyte-Gleeshan, President, announced that the past year had indeed been a remarkably successful one, particularly in the Canadian Confectionery throughout Canada.

Sales of the majority of Standard Brands' products have shown steady gains in the past twelve months, and an unusually large increase is shown in the fact that, for the first three months of 1931, sales of all major products have eclipsed the record they reached in the corresponding period a year ago.

Mr. Whyte-Gleeshan also announced the appointment of Mr. W. C.

W. C. LECKIE

Recently appointed a vice-president of Standard Brands Limited in charge of Gillett Products Division.

Leckie, Toronto, as vice-president in charge of Gillett Products Division of Standard Brands Limited. The remainder of officers is now as follows: J. S. Wickersham, president; J. W. Horsey, vice-president in charge of Confectionery Products Division; John Anderson, vice-president in charge of Coffee and Spices Products Division; W. C. Leckie, vice-president in charge of Gillett Products Division.

Mr. Leckie has been actively connected with the marketing of Gillett Products: Magic Baking Powder, Gillett's Lye, Royal Yeast Cakes etc., for many years, having served, previous to the merging of E. W. Gillett Company Limited into Standard Brands Limited as vice-president and general manager of the former organization.

End Piles Quick

No Salves—No Cutting

Your itching, bleeding, protruding piles will go when you actually remove the cause—bad blood circulation in the weak, flabby parts and not one ointment, lotion, Salves or cutting can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, succeeds because it corrects the circulation, drives out congested blood, tones and vitalizes the blood vessel parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record high in this city that J. S. McKeown's Dug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must cure your Piles agony or money back.

The Terror of Asthma comes like a thief in the night with its dreadful throttling, robbing its victim of breath. It seems beyond the power of human aid to relieve until our trial is made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Dream Remedy. Relief comes with a rush. Life becomes worth living, and, if the remedy be used per directions, it is safe to rely confidently to rout. Take no substitute.

PROF. ROY ON MODERN DRAMA

Discusses Some of Leading Playwrights of Recent Years

Prof. J. A. Roy of Queen's University delivering the fourth and last of a series of lectures on the modern drama before the members of the Belleville reading group, on Monday evening.

Arthur Schnitzler represents prewar Austria, with its liaisons and its analogy of the waltzing music. He is psycho-analyst, dealing with the light love, with its irresponsibility and its inevitable disillusion and sadness. He is not immoral but is amoral and his philosophy is that nothing matters and that men are the creatures of a day. Among his best works are "Anatol", "Green Cockatoo", "Living Hours", and "Feast of Reckoning".

Herman Sudermann, the German, pandered to an unhealthy element, he got hold of popular ideas and "worked them up". His fame is decreasing and of his best works are "Magda" and "The Three of St. John."

Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian, is one of the decadents, a bigger man than Sudermann. His philosophy has been called neo paganism and his remedy for passion and sin is not to conquer them but to indulge them. He believes man's nature is fundamentally pagan and that is a tragedy to try to graft Christianity upon a pagan nature. His scenes are large canvasses, he deals with the glories of antiquity and of the renaissance and his conceptions are vast like the traditions of Italy.

Spain has produced a number of dramatists, Benavente, one of whose works is "Bonds of Interest", shrewd, big a world of rascals and rogues and men as puppets. He is fantastic and grotesque, he brings charm and poetry to his art and resembles Barrie. There are also the Quintero brothers who wrote "One Hundred Year's Old."

Rostand, the French dramatist, is in the tradition of the French romantics, Victor ugo, the Dumas and Balzac. He is one of the leaders against naturalism and realism in the drama. His "Princess Faraway" is attractive and his "Cyrano de Bergerac" is one of the greatest of plays. It has the faults of romanticism and yet it serves to draw the audience away from today to the glory of the past, the adventures of this amazing character of the middle ages. "L'Aiglon" is a brilliant dramatic work with theatrical touches of course but it is great drama.

Opposite the Rostand's was the influence of Henri Becque and Brieux Rostand like Blevenzon, and Kipling carries one away to the romantic and spells reaction from realism.

Verhaeren, the Flemish writer, who died young, founded a school which treats groups as characters, the very form of expressionism. He dramatizes the crowd. His work runs parallel with that of Andreyeff, the Russian. Both saw that the old gods of capitalism and self-seeking must be swept away. "The Cloister" is one of his best works.

There is a tremendous vitality and variety in the drama of today, says Prof. Roy, and the profundity of these dramatists are working out the problems of our own.

Mr. Dozoe of Albert College occupied the chair and expressed the pleasure that the group members had taken in the lectures and the hope that possibly next year the group would hear Prof. Roy again.

HOSPITAL OPENS "SNEEZE CLINIC"

Montreal, April 16—Alarmed at the number of sneezes indulged in every summer's day by hay fever sufferers the Montreal General Hospital is coming to their rescue. In order to alleviate the "a-tishoo's" of these unfortunates, the hospital has decided to open a hay fever clinic.

Long-suffering straphangers in street cars, roused to a frenzy by hay fever sufferers who are suddenly over come with fits of sneezing when packed together like sardines will welcome the news. To them the announcement will be as welcome as it is to those who are sufferers.

The General Hospital's announcement comes perhaps as an answer to the claims of residents of the Gaspe peninsula, who insist that this locality is the one place in Canada hay fever can be cured. "Come to Montreal and lose your hay fever sighs" proves a tempting tourist-attracting slogan for the city this summer.

RETIREMENT OF RAIL OFFICIAL IS ANNOUNCED

George A. Hoag in Service 47 Years Quits His Desk

Announcement was made today by G. A. Stokes, superintendent of the Canadian National Railway at this terminal, of the retirement of George A. Hoag, assistant superintendent at Trenton, after 47 years of service. Mr. Hoag has been on sick leave for some time and his retirement takes effect from April 15th. The district over which he has jurisdiction, will be divided between R. E. Orr, assistant superintendent at this terminal, and E. W. Burns, assistant superintendent at Lindsay and the office at Trenton closed.

The retiring assistant superintendent entered the service of the Grand Trunk Railway in July 1884 as a switchman and worked through the various grades of railway work. In October 1905 he resigned from the Grand Trunk to take the position of trainmaster with the Canadian Northern Railway. He was stationed at various places in the system which was absorbed by the Canadian National Railways when that system came into being. Mr. Hoag served in various capacities in this system being at one time superintendent or trainmaster of the Maynooth sub., Smiths Falls sub., Gravenhurst sub., Westport sub., Tweed sub., Orono sub. and Deseronto sub. He was an efficient railway official and well liked by the employees serving under him, also by those in higher authority. Mr. Hoag has well deserved his retirement and his many friends will wish him many happy years in his new environment.

IRWIN APPEALS TO THE HINDUS

(Canadian Press)

Bombay, India, April 16—Earnest appeal to the Hindus to allay the fears of their Moslem neighbors in working out India's problems, was made today by Lord Irwin, retiring Viceroy of India, who is sailing for England today.

Lord Irwin received Mahatma Gandhi later and the two conferred for nearly an hour, discussing how well the government, as well as the National Congress, is observing the Indian truce.

MANY EXCHANGE MEMBERS FAVOR "WILD" MARKET

Big-Scale Speculator Explains After-Closing Privileges

SESSIONS END

Grain Futures Commission Moves to Regina—Farmers Ready to Testify

Winnipeg, April 17 — Westward from prairie farmland last night moved the Royal Commission seeking to determine the effect of trading in grain futures on the price received by the producer. Four days' session at Winnipeg ended, the inquiry headed by Sir Josiah Stamp journeyed to Regina, where a host of farmers have made application to testify.

Twenty-one witnesses have been heard by the commission, all but one called by the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, all they had to say about the system of buying or selling grain for future delivery. Seven of the testimony of 20 witnesses has been that futures carry the burden of grain holders' risks, enabling an actual cash saving to be transferred back to the producer.

The Canadian Wheat Pool, which spurns the opportunity of "hedging," its huge grain holdings by selling on the future, all but one of its 20 heard a witness, though pool counsel has been attentive to evidence. The chief critic of the futures system, W. G. A. Gordon Hamblin, K.C., a director of the Manitoba Pool but spoke only as a trader on grain.

Some grain exchange members like to see a "wild" market, Sir Josiah learned today. Under questioning by George E. Caldwell, large-scale speculator in his characteristically dark and clear-thinking style, Mr. Caldwell, appearing for the second time before the commission, explained to the commission the use of "wild" and "offers," which are privileges granted to a trading member after the market closes to sell or buy the following day at stipulated prices below or above the market close of the current day.

ELLIOTT FREED MURDER COURT

Magistrate Sees No Reason For Committing Accused

Barrie, April 17.—To a crowded courtroom last night, Magistrate Compton Jeffs announced that he would not commit Robert J. Elliott for trial on a charge of murdering Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Graham, after holding that the Crown had failed to connect Elliott with the actual death.

Mrs. Hisey met death on Feb. 18 when her automobile, driven by Gordon Cole, who Magistrate Jeffs committed for trial on a similar murder charge yesterday morning, plunged into the bottom of the Hydro-Electric Power Company's plant at Magnetawan Falls.

"There is no doubt that a woman met a violent death, and I think that I said the Magistrate before giving his decision at 10.15 last night, after a hearing that lasted from 11 a.m. today. "Under the circumstances that may be caused by explanation at a trial, her death had the probability of foul play."

"Having found that in the other case, there was no direct evidence implicating Castle, whether it was murder, manslaughter or accidental, I must let the question of connecting Elliott with the death is not so simple by any means."

Daughter's Evidence Stressed

"There was the suggestion, Elliott's connection with Castle; there was the suggestion that the wife of Castle was a most peculiar thing," continued his Worship. "Elliott had a right after a hearing that lasted from 11 a.m. today. "Under the circumstances that may be caused by explanation at a trial, her death had the probability of foul play."

"Having found that in the other case, there was no direct evidence implicating Castle, whether it was murder, manslaughter or accidental, I must let the question of connecting Elliott with the death is not so simple by any means."

Daughter's Evidence Stressed

"There was the suggestion, Elliott's connection with Castle; there was the suggestion that the wife of Castle was a most peculiar thing," continued his Worship. "Elliott had a right later, owing to the activities of Captain Meyers, the village was called Meyers' Creek. This 'creek;' the present Moira River, had been known as Shingleton's Creek, named after a certain Captain John Shingleton, also a United Empire Loyalist.

It was in 1794 that Captain Meyers erected the first brick house in Belleville: not only the first brick house to be built in this city but the very first in Upper Canada.

Captain Meyers, too, started the first industry in this part of the country, building a dam and starting a sawmill, which had a flourishing trade for some time. The home that he built was called Meyers Lodge, as it stood many ago but at that time was considered quite a fashionable mansion and was noted for its hospitality.

In 1832, it is interesting to note too, Captain Meyers entered the Masonic order, in the province of Quebec. When the Grand Lodge of Canada was formed, C. T. Kimball, who he was wrote him about the home.

SIGNS OF BUILDING ACTIVITY ARE SHOWN

Signs of more activity in building are beginning to appear in the city planner's office with the issuing of permits for the construction of buildings. Yesterday there were two permitted, one of which was for a residence.

SPEED QUEEN

With the same plane in which she established new altitude and transcontinental records, Ruth Nichols (above) society aviatrix, sped over a three-cities course from Detroit at 210 miles an hour. This is the fastest pace ever set by a woman.

CRITICS FAVOR LESLIE HOLMES

London, Apr. 17 (CP)—London critics speak favourably of the qualities of Leslie Holmes, formerly of Toronto, Ont., who gave a song recital at the Wigmore Hall. An ambitious item in the programme was his performance of the entire "Dichterliebe" cycle of Schumann, consisting of 16 numbers, set to poems of Heine. "His interpretations of them showed great sympathy, considerable standard, and abundant evidence of close and conscientious study,' says the Daily Telegraph. "The chief defect lay in a certain monotony of tone-color, also a slight lack of the requisite flexibility and ease in the execution of the more rapid numbers. On the whole, however, the performance reflected great credit upon the singer ,who was well supported at the piano by Reginald Goodall, apart from an occasional fruitless of tone in the lower register.

NEW PRESIDENT DESCENDANT OF AN OLD FAMILY

Captain John Walden Meyers Erected First Brick Home

Perhaps the great majority of the finer homes in the city are built of brick, but it is interesting to recall that at one time there was not one brick house here. The first house to be built in Belleville of this material was erected by Captain John Walden Meyers, a United Empire Loyalist, and stood approximately where the home located at No. 14 Mount Pleasant Road now stands. Nobody seems to recall just when this house was dismantled and the present one erected, although W. C. Bowman, K.C., local police magistrate, has some interesting data on the earlier history of the city.

Captain John Walden-Meyrs, Mr. Bowman said this morning was a member of the British forces, fighting in the Revolutionary war with the United States. In company with about fifty other United Empire Loyalists at the termination of the struggle, Captain Meyers journeyed across the lake to the junction of the Moira River and the Bay of Quinte and, liking the location, decided to settle down here. The settlement was first called Shingle village, but later, owing to the activities of Captain Meyrs, the village was called Meyers' Creek. This 'creek;' the present Moira River, had been known as Shingleton's Creek, named after a certain Captain John Shingleton, also a United Empire Loyalist.

It was in 1794 that Captain Meyers erected the first brick house in Belleville: not only the first brick house to be built in this city but the very first in Upper Canada.

Captain Meyers, too, started the first industry in this part of the country, building a dam and starting a sawmill, which had a flourishing trade for some time. The home that he built was called Meyers Lodge, as it stood many ago but at that time was considered quite a fashionable mansion and was noted for its hospitality.

In 1832, it is interesting to note too, Captain Meyers entered the Masonic order, in the province of Quebec. When the Grand Lodge of Canada was formed, C. T. Kimball, while he was here wrote him about the home.

DONATED DUCKS TO ABBEY DAWN

Mr. W. M. Peck, Carrying Place, has donated two pair of wild mallard ducks to Abbey Dawn Sanctuary which has ideal conditions for wild fowl and animals. The lake is now ready, and wild ducks come down to rest and nest again. Last Mr. Peck's gift makes the first attempt at Abbey Dawn to decoy birds. No effort had been made to feed wild birds to any degree and a few handfuls of corn as a gesture of welcome and safety. Decoy birds will be fed. The intention is to give complete sanctuary, and there is plenty of well protected water and marsh for that purpose. Hawks and owls are nesting in the perfect safety. Plenty of Partridge are in the woods. Wild ducks, and particularly some Canada Geese decoys are needed. Red squirrels and pheasants are also wanted, but almost anything in the wild line will be welcome. Wood ducks, geese, raccoons, hawks and owls, partridge, Mallard, Hawaiian fowl will be pleased to have anything that will help the sanctuary, such as berry bearing shrubs, hardy, special ornamental trees. What a nice thing to do—to go with the post to some charming location in the sanctuary, and there to plant a memorial ash for the birds, or a maple for memory's sake! Anyone wishing to plant a tree of memory at Abbey Dawn may communicate with Mr. Hoch. Arrangements can be made to put permanent markers on such trees, as a token of the planting, and case of the ceremony, with the donor's name if desired.

FRUIT TERMINAL STILL POSSIBLE

Union Building for Toronto May Come Through C.N.R. Attitude

Ottawa, April 17.—That the C.N.R. by softening its attitude toward competition, might yet clear the way for the erection of Toronto's mooted union fruit terminal was reported as a possibility tonight when it was learned that Hon. T. A. Kennedy, minister of Agriculture for Ontario, was in the capital to confer with Hon. Mr. Manion tomorrow morning he goes to Montreal, where the heads of the C.P.R. railways are located. He declined tonight to forecast any decision as to the significance of his trip to Ottawa and Montreal or as to whom he interviewed here. It is believed, however, that Hon. Mr. Kennedy is the Federal Minister of Agriculture, who is known to be strongly favorable to the erection of the terminal.

As a result of representations by Mr. Kennedy, the Federal Government is said to be considering placing upon the C.N.R. to step down from the attitude which it took up in the terminal conference called by Col. Kennedy at Queen's Park some weeks ago.

Truck competition is equally abhorrent to the C.P.R. and C.N.R., the latter railway, nevertheless, was willing to discuss the matter sympathetically and turn it over to an operating company that would be fair with all. But when the C.N.R. declared itself not a station willing to do so it was impossible. The C.P.R. is believed to be still ready to enter the project if however the C.N.R. becomes more tractable.

HORSE RACE MEET HELD JUNE 10th

At a meeting of the Belleville Agricultural Society held last evening it was decided to hold their annual races on June 10th, instead of June the 3rd as in previous years. The reason for this change is that Kingston are having a big "air meet" on June 3rd, with airmen from all over Canada and United States in attendance. This delay of a week will give Belleville a chance to get in better condition and better race will be the result.

BRITISH PRINCES SAIL FOR EUROPE

Disembark in Shirt-sleeves For Farewell at Pernambuco

Pernambuco, Brazil, April 17—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, winding up their visit to South America, sailed for Europe aboard the steamship Arlanza yesterday.

The royal visitors spent three hours in Pernambuco, the princes barked in their shirt sleeves and went to a nearby beach, where they had a swim. A crowd of 10,000, was gathered around the city with the British consul.

Representatives of the Brazilian Government greeted the princes and conversed at length in French.

All vessels in the harbor were decorated in honor of the visitors.

MILL DESTROYED AT MORRISBURG

Morrisburg, April 17—Danger in the setting of grass fires was shown again here today when the mill and lumber yard of A. H. Merkley, valued at between $40,000 and $50,000, was destroyed by a blaze which spread from a near-by lot. Planed by a brisk wind, the flames attacked the mill, and before help could arrive the whole lumber yard was ablaze. Several pumpers threw streams on the fire, but efforts of firemen were not sufficient to put out the blaze, which eventually burned itself out. There was no insurance on the property. Anderson Bros. are the owners of the mill, a resident is said to have set alight the dry stubble of last year's crop.

PENSION CLERK IS REMANDED

(Canadian Press)

Toronto, April 17—Following an investigation into the Old Age Pension payments being conducted throughout Western Ontario, local police today arrested Percy Bousfield, thirty, employed as chief clerk in the Pensions Department.

Bousfield appeared in court charged with forging 36 twenty-dollar cheques, and was remanded in custody on bail of two thousand dollars.

Though it was at first intimated a series of arrests would follow the investigation ordered by Major W. J. Stewart, it is understood no further developments would be made in connection. The Mayor announced he would give full details of the case in a special meeting of the Board of Control later in the day.

PREDICTS END OF THE SLUMP

Statistician Thinks U. S. Will See Labor Shortage Soon

Washington, April 17—President Hoover was told today by Roger W. Babson, statistician who predicted the stock market crash in 1929, that business has definitely turned the corner, and he should not be surprised to see a shortage of labor in some lines before the end of the year."

"If statistics tell anything," he said, "they show that business has turned the corner. Stock prices are increasing. Earnings are increasing, particularly in the chain store industries, and one or two big firms in each industry are showing signs that few them the corner has been turned."

Mr. Babson had just come from the Department of Labor where, he said, he had urged Secretary Lamont first actual pick-up in employment. public data. He said that the effect of the enormous combination of direct and state construction programmes, which were started early in the year, would be felt in April, and poses, had not yet been felt in a great degree and that these would add their benefits to the upturn.

SENATE VETOES RELIEF PLANS IN AUSTRALIA

General Election is Inevitable Within Next Few Months.

WHEAT BONUS

Prime Minister Strongly Attacked Opposition

(Canadian Press)

Canberra, April 17—The death knell of the government's inflation programme was sounded when the Senate of Australia today rejected the finance bill by 21 votes to six.

The bill provides for an issue of up to ninety million dollars in Fiduciary notes, designed to provide work for the relief of unemployment, bonus to wheat growers and to aid farmers generally.

The government will immediately send the bill back to the Senate which is allowed a statutory period of three months to again decide on it. If it is rejected for the second time, the prime minister will call for dissolution of both the Senate and the House of Representatives and call a general election going to the people on the issue.

As a result of the Senate's action which had been expected the government was forced to immediately drop its wheat bill which received a second reading in the lower house only yesterday. The bill concerns wheat bonuses and was entirely dependent on the authorization of the Fiduciary issue.

The Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. James Scullin, angrily attacked the opposition for the defeat of government's measures, declaring the members had shown "no compassion for the wheat growers or unemployed."

The Commonwealth bank has decided not to honor further government notes and bonds.

Hon. John Greig leader of the opposition Nationalist party resigned his leadership to make way for the formation of a strong consolidation of all right wing element behind the leadership of Hon. Joseph Lyons, prepared to put up a death grapple with Labor and the extremists in the general election that is inevitable within the next few months at the most.

BASS FRY DYING AT BURLEIGH FALLS

Peterboro, April 17—Fears were expressed here at the meeting of the Fish and Game Association that tens of thousands of bass fry which have been planted by the Department of Game and Fisheries in the dam at Burleigh Falls during the past few years will die as a result of the low water. Mr. Gravenor A. W. Gravenor, president of the association, said last night that the Trent Valley Canal authorities had removed the logs from the dam, and that as a result nothing but a small stream was flowing where once there was a rushing torrent. Mr. Gravenor said that he had found bass already dead and many others floundering around in the low water. Photographs have been taken and a full report is being made to the Department of Fish and Game. Mr. Gravenor, Kawartha, from seven to eight feet lower than normal this year.

BUTTERMAKERS QUINTE AREA CONVENE HERE

Prof. Sproule of Agricultural College Chief Speaker

Buttermakers of Bay of Quinte district met at the Y.M.C.A. here last night for instruction from leading authorities in the province on the development of a higher grade of cream and butter. The chief speaker was Prof. W. H. Sproule of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, while J. L. Baker, local creamery instructor of Belleville and J. H. Scott, chief dairy instructor for the province of Ontario, of Toronto, were also heard.

During the discussion, the officers for the coming year were named, and the result of the ballot was as follows: Hamilton Creamery, President; Tomlinson, Stirling Creamery; Prescott Dunn, Tweed, Secretary-Treasurer; Belleville; Vice President, James; Walbeck, Tamworth Creamery; Secretary Treasurer, Arthur McCarey, Tweed Creamery; Directors, Norman Seeley, Picton Creamery; Rex Rose, Belleville Creameries; Arthur Casteel, Trenton Dairy Co. It was decided that the Quinte branch will meet in Belleville on Thursday, May 28th with Prof. D. B. Shiuh, Dairy Bacteriologist, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, as speaker.

Mr. Alexandre Dumont, of Richmond, the delegates to the conference had visits and discussions in his home, a renewed success in their endeavours this year. He gave the Government officials' report on the production of butter which is now being produced. They Tomlinson, Stirling and said it was more than pleased to note the improvements that are being maintained by the club members.

Defends Fields

Mr. J. L. Baker, of Belleville, described the work on the sediment tests and the grading of cream. Poor grade cream is caused by dirt getting into the cream, he said. Some have contended that the farmer should be educated to try and produce a higher grade of cream, eliminating the solution of this problem in the home, he recket. He exhibites charts to show the tests as drawn taken from the farm which showed the relationship of first, second and special grade cream.

The patron must be informed of the causes assigned for objection to the farm" Mr. Baker said.

Prof. Sproule declared that in order to test the acidity correctly the strength of the alkali solution must be accurately maintained and the cream sample for acidity determination must be measured with a pipette, he said.

Birth Grade Neutralizer

An high grade buttermaker must be used in order to obtain composition and excellence of flavor, he continued. He gave a comparison of the limit and safe standards of acidity.

Commercial and experimental evidence indicates that neither lime nor soda should be used to neutralize from imperfect cream and properly ripened cream, he said, because of the latter. Whether we shall use lime or soda from cream depends on the kind of pend upon our preference, based upon the quality of the product and also as their respective properties and reaction on cream."

Prof. Sproule pointed out that if lime is used, it should be of fine texture from calcite rock, he said, and not from limestone.

He also spoke on the "Standardization of Butter Fat." Standardizing is done particularly to the salt content. Salt from cream is added to butter.

"High salting holds the delicate flavor of butter and prevents the objectionable flavor of poor quality butter. Salting of butter improves the keeping quality considerably. Medium salting is best, while high salting is not good and low gives a flat taste producing fishy flavor."

Prof. Sproule explained an experiment conducted at Guelph O.A.C. by the Dairy Department in which large dining hall on the consumption of butter by the students was tested on different percentages of salt. The experiment continued forty-nine days. Salt was added in 2-3 per cent. and

The Grand Moment

By Ethel Willis Hewitt

Rita Sylvester drove her roadster up and down the line of hangars at Roosevelt Field, twice before she drew up beside a tank figure in a pilot's outfit.

"Want a flit?" she called.

The man shot her a side-long glance, a shade of suspicion in his blue eyes. Rita laughed. The suspicion faded into a show of reckless determination.

"Sure—if you're going toward the station" he said, pleasantly.

"Better than that. I'm going in to New York."

"Fine." The man climbed in beside her.

As she threaded the car through traffic at the exit, she appraised him, mentally. Every bit as attractive in flying togs as in a dinner jacket, she concluded. Long limbed clean cut profile and the same engaging smile. He was decidedly worth while.

"What do you do at Roosevelt?" she asked, once they were out on the road.

"Fly, for sport—mostly. My name's Scott, Larry Scott," he offered politely.

"Rita Sylvester. I saw you at the University drag last week," she added simply.

She caught his side-long glance. Again, that hint of suspicion. He was decidedly the type that held to man's rule as purser. Rita took the cue.

"Oh, there's no harm in me. I'm engaged," she added, disarmingly.

"Yeth—that's interesting," he said, grimly.

"Thought it might ease up things a bit," she replied in an amused voice.

She caught a glimpse of his tan profile. There was a little pick up of interest in his expression. One of a man finds you are out of reach, you immediately become attractive. Funny, must be their natural flare for pursuing. Anyway she had let down the barriers—put him at ease.

For a while there was no time to talk. She tucked her skirt, what there was of it, under her knees, and began to drive. She took the narrow, winding road with the speedometer hanging between seventy and eighty. It was a breath tak ing ride, with none of the safety of flying. As she slowed down at Nassau Boulevard, Larry turned to her with admiration in his keen eyes.

"I'll say you can drive—and how! You should learn to fly," he added in a gust of excitement.

"I'd love it. There are instructors at Roosevelt, I suppose?" she questioned.

He smiled at her, a ravishing little smile.

"Sure—but—if you care to learn, really, I'd be glad to teach you. A girl that can drive like that—"

"Well, so much for doing away with the flying lessons cannot be easy, so did little dinners, on the way home in the moonlight. Larry was just himself. No need for the defensive attitude with no chance of being ultimately lured to the altar. Rita was sure, but she'been (fancy free, there would have been no flying lessons.

As it was, there were long thrilling hours in the air. She was an apt scholar. Took to the air like a bird, Larry said, with enthusiasm.

On rainy day he took her up through the clouds, into the warmth and sunshine above. Flew with her separated them from the world below and the deep blue of the sky arched above them. There were more alone than man and woman had ever built they learned to do. It was a rare, exalted moment. Larry's blue gaze met hers, and in an instant of abandonment, he rent the plane spinning and diving through a hazy mist of clouds. Later, gliding down to earth, they were caught in a radian, pulsing silence too thrilled for words. Yet, in the little Italian restaurant, at dinner, the presence of other earthly mortals, landed their senses, and they talked with unrestrained gayety. They talked like each trying to outbomb the exploits of the other. Larry with his head off, no fear of committing himself.

On the day before her first ride flight, he took her for a last ride. At seven thousand fee he flattened off and across the white waves of beach out over the ocean. Rockaway peninsula looked half sunk in the blue silken sea, and the setting sun splashed crimson stains a few miles across the glistening water. The two shared the same breathless thrill, the same unforgettable moment. As they flew back across the tumbling waves they clouds, not found nothing to say.

Driving back to New York in the dusk, Larry turned to her abruptly.

"This man you're marrying—what's he like?" he asked out of a strained silence.

It was the first time he had mentioned him. Rita slid down in her seat, a faint smile curving her luscious lips.

"Like—why, he's about your build, quite as attractive and lean — in fact he's an altogether likeable chap but naturally, I'd think that," She laughed, her eyes on his lean, scowling face.

"He'll be back any day now. That's why I wanted to learn to fly. He's a crack air man, did I mention that?"

Larry was silent. They were crossing the bridge, lights blinking weirdly in the dusk on either side. Often he felt her at the end of the bridge. This time he didn't slow down.

"Does he—he fly a commercial ship, or what?" he asked desperately.

"Oh, no, just for sport," Rita replied, sweetly.

"Have you ever been up with him?" He evidently made no attempt to keep the bitterness of his mood from coming through.

"Oh, yes—often." Rita smiled and dug her hands deeper in her coat pockets.

For a moment Larry was silent.

"I mean, up and into the sun set like—like—? the words clicked down.

"Never, only with you, Larry, there could never be another moment like that, it would be sinful, too much of life," she interrupted, with a little sigh, mindful to take her hand, nearest him, out of her pocket.

Larry slowed down at the traffic stop. In the blaze of light, Rita met his gaze. He leaned nearer.

"Was it that way with you, too," he asked in an agony of hope.

"Every bit as much," she answered a bit shakily, and right there, in the blazing light of a traffic jam, the swung that breathless moment between them, the moment designed to separate two people, very definitely, from the rest of the world.

He looked down at her, a desperate look in his clear, young eyes.

"Hang it all, Rita, you—you can't marry this other fellow. That means that we—" The green light flashed and traffic shot forward with a roar.

Rita slid down and tucked her arm under his.

"Do I have to tell you in more than one way—there never has been any man but you. Do I have to tell you—"

They were clear of the traffic and Larry's arm went around her with a quick, definite gesture.

"Not a darn thing, honey. Let's go some place where we can talk—I want it to me." He grasped in a breathless little whisper.

"You think he'll insist on marrying me?" she teased in a perfect daze of happiness.

With a sudden move of his big arm, he crushed her to his side.

"How does it look—darling?" he whispered against her cheek.

For answer Rita gave a contented sigh. Something in the hush of his deep voice, and the feel of the tender, compelling arm about her made her aware that it was good business to leave the pursuing to him—now, that they were safely over the first hurdle.

What Housewives Say

In reply to a questionnaire issued by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa in connection with its Beef Grading Service to over 1,200 housewives in the twelve leading cities in Canada, 65 per cent of the ladies sending in replies stated that the official brand mark in red or blue was their guide in buying beef of dependable quality, the other 35 per cent stated that as yet they knew nothing about branded beef. Those who bought branded beef without exception that they were satisfied with the quality of the branded product. While a majority of those who were not then familiar with branded beef stated that they would buy such a more beef if they could be sure of getting beef of dependable quality.

WILLING TO TAKE CHILD'S PUNISHMENT

London, Apr. 17 (By The Canadian Press)—A dramatic plea was made by the mother of a well dressed girl of 21, Ena Gatwood, described as a motor driver, who was charged at Brighton with the murder of her infant child. The girl was traced through a laundry mark on some of the clothes.

Her mother cried bitterly when she entered The witness box. She said that her husband died when the girl was a baby. She herself was a nurse. "Can I ask a question?" she asked. She was advised to do so at this stage, but replied, "I only wanted to know if you could punish me instead of my girl, I could do anything."

New Wheat Area

In a recent radio talk on "Pushing Canada's Productive Ornin Area Northward," L. H. Newman, B.S.A., Dominion Cerealist, made the following interesting statement: "One of the most productive and potentially one of the most extensive wheat growing areas of Western Canada is now found far to the north in the great Peace River Country. In this district the great frontier occupies an area exceeding the combined areas of Ireland, Scotland and Wales. While a number of new early maturing varieties wheat production in this area has extended rapidly, the output having increased enormously during the past ten years.

WELCOME NEW FIRM

Belleville welcomes the American Hardware Corporation of Canada, Limited, successors to the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited. The success of the local plant is known to every citizen and there is a general impression of the importance of the linking up of the local corporation with the great companies known under the name of The American Hardware Corporation. Expansion of trade and development of the local industry are anticipated as a result of the business change.

Belleville has reason to be proud of the fact that United States hardware men have seen opportunity in Canada for the enlargement of their business prospects, and have chosen Belleville as the scene of their efforts.

Business changes of the past few years and the coming of new companies to Belleville have inevitably met with success. One has only to think of a few to realize that hope placed in this city as a site of industry has not been disappointed and President Turnbull of the American Hardware Corporation of Canada and of the U.S. company, the American Hardware Corporation in which are linked P. and E. Corbin Co.; Corbin Cabinet Lock Co., Corbin Screw Corporation and Russell & Erwin Manufacturing Co., no doubt realizes that the step taken with the purchase of the Springer Company, is a happy omen for the expansion of the American Hardware Corporation of Canada, Limited.

W. C. SPRINGER

It is fitting that at the present time when an important change is being worked in the purchase of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited, by the American Hardware Corporation of Canada, a tribute be paid to William C. Springer, who has been the president and managing director of the Springer Company for many years. Throughout the years given to the management of this plant, a total of thirty years in builders' hardware manufacturing business in Belleville, and altogether a total of forty-six years in the business since the foundation of the first hardware factory in Canada, is the record of which Mr. Springer ought to be proud. The success of the business has been the direct outcome of the personal supervision of Mr. Springer to the industry which has in a very real sense girdled the world with its products.

Mr. Springer came to this city when industry was in a less prosperous condition than it occupies today despite depression. The success of many another enterprise here is the indirect result of the stimulus he gave industry here in his plant he began to manage. His confidence and enthusiasm in Belleville as a manufacturing centre have made him a touchstone for local business. This was clearly demonstrated in the large part which coperation has occupied in his mind, for he has always stood with the other manufacturers and with labor as a united body to further the development of the industrial life of this city. He has always been identified with the Chamber of Commerce and is an ex-director of the body. His opinion on anything relating to the welfare of the local industrial situation and of industry in Canada has always been sought and is highly esteemed.

He has devoted his adult life to the study of machine industry, that of the manufacture of builders' hardware with the inevitable result, he has made a success of his lifework.

It is fitting that Mr. Springer should still continue to hold office in the new company and he will have the advantage of seeing the business he has built up so many years in bringing forward to a high place, continue to progress under the new management. He has touched Belleville at many points, all for the better. He is one of the city's most successful of manufacturers and this city shares him with the whole of the Dominion in this field.

Belleville should have no inferiority complex when the people consider that within a very short period two great hardware firms have taken an abiding interest in this city's industrial life. The outsider can see the advantages offered here. It will be well if all others have the same vision.

Will it be that some one who objects to the cost of holding a referendum on daylight saving will also object to the council's accepting the offer of citizens to give their services free in order to find out the real trend of opinion, claiming that those who so serve should be paid for acting as deputy returning officers and poll clerks?

The present season is considered one of the most unique in the point of the sedateness of the arrival of spring and dry weather. Seeding is advanced, and the fall grains have come through well. The effect aced is rain.

Will does so much gratifying now-a-days that nothing but the airways suit him, in fact he wirelessed his daily commond in the New York Times recently from a plane, and remarked later that the paper was on the street with his article before he came down out of the clouds. Will gathered together a troupe of entertainers and toured the southwest in aid of the drought sufferers, cleaning up nearly half a million dollars for the fund. Showing his sagacity Will took his barnstormers right down to the drought stricken country where they knew the next most and played to standing room only all the time. Now Will turns up among the earthquake ruins of Nicaragua and asks if there is anything he can do to help the folks get on their feet again.

TO SPEED UP NEVADA'S DIVORCE MILLS

We do not know whether the people of Nevada have less respect for the obligations of matrimony and the sanctity of the home than the people of other states, their divorce laws not being a reliable guide on questions of morals. They probably regard divorce as a business, an inland industry which may be encouraged with considerable profit to the state. It is said that there is $3,000,000 spent in the state on divorces that would not otherwise find its way there, but for the facilities which Nevada offers those desirous of shuffling out of the marriage entered. A bid for more divorces and more money is made by the bill which has passed the Legislature providing that petition for a divorce may be filed after six weeks' residence. Another bill has been introduced to protect prospective residents from profiteering by Nevada lawyers. It provides that the maximum fee for securing an uncontested divorce shall be $35.

The States of Arkansas and Texas are also in hot pursuit of the golden eggs of the divorce business. They have reduced the time necessary before a divorce action can be entered to three months, which was the period required in Nevada before the more recent legislation. Now, to double the competing states will meet this cut and they may also offer superior inducements in the way of restricting legal fees. They might also increase the number of frivolous causes for which divorces can be granted. If the competition goes far enough it will not be long before a divorce is granted for the simple and sufficient reason that a party to a marriage desires freedom. To exist a month or a week the time necessary for residence would be, of course, to defeat the state's own end which is to induce people to live there and spend their money in the knowledge that the reward is a divorce recorded everywhere in the United States.—The Mail and Empire, Toronto.

PROTECTING THE BIRDS

Jack Miner spent the sixty-fifth anniversary of his birthday showing some hundreds of visitors around his famous bird sanctuary in Essex county. The veteran naturalist, lover of birds and lecturer upon bird life, is doing splendid and self-sacrificing work in the fight, migration, feeding and nesting habits intelligence, friendships and musical abilities of our feathered minstrels. Mr. Miner has made the protection of wild birds his special mission; this not so much by way of legislative enactment as by the spread of knowledge and the moral reason which is more effectual than any external command. And to him is largely due the awakening of many of the broad prejudices and ill practices that formerly obtained concerning the ill-used and unoffending of bird tribes. Being himself a farmer, and an active years a close student of bird habits, he can speak with authority on the subject matters; and it is gratifying to note that the widespread campaign in the interest of the conservation of bird life has many able exponents and is achieving good results. It is realized that birds are destructive to crops is bred of sheer ignorance and is wholly misfounded belief. Birds have been called the "police patrol" of the insect world. Financial loss by insect ravage to the forest products of the United States has been estimated at a hundred million dollars, and of the Dominion at a million dollars. Any interested in the field and garden and orchard crops would double this figure.—Montreal Gazette.

Criminals are Hard To Place in Category

The psychologist and the criminologists have written countless books in an attempt to explain the criminal. They have analyzed and dissected him, classified and indexed him. They have pictured him as a moron, a monster, a physical and mental weakling, a victim of environment and a mentally and physically diseased member of society in order to separate him from the rest of mankind. In many respects their study of the criminal has been invaluable, yet their picture of him as the sinister, evil minded satanfactory, and he sometimes appears an enigma to persons who daily come in contact with him.

Of course, there are certain familiar types of criminals who are easy to understand, and one does not have to be a physician, a psychologist or a criminologist to recognize their work and to put them in their proper classification. There are the morons, the feebleminded, the mentality of children. If they had been reared under decent surroundings they would pursue the even tenor of their way without doing any great harm to society. One frequently encounters them in the less of families. They are usually just harmless creatures who need a little attention and are content with their physical wants are satisfied.

But thrust the moron into a hard environment, neglect him and he becomes a serious menace to society. He follows the lines of least resistance and is strong hands in the gutty. Astute criminals take advantage of his dumbness and dullness and use him for their own evil ends. He is a familiar figure in station houses. The police are quick to recognize him when they see him, and as a rule, his crimes land him in an asylum instead of the pen.

Mentals Types

There are gangsters of a moronic type. If they do not have the feeling for their children, they suffer to some degree from arrested development and fixation on the mother of such subjects and they are mostly neurotic individualities. They seldom see beyond their noses and in the excitement of their criminal deeds lose all sense of proportion.

The average gangster has been pictured as a puny creature, an habitual user of drugs and as yellow as a sunflower. There are also gangsters who fit into this category. The gangster of today is of a much higher type. He has a weakness for modish clothes of an exaggerated sort, wears rich jewelry and if he acts in a brawl, does not hesitate to use his fists. Although he is addicted to liquor, he is rather proud of his ability to hold it. In his leisure he is a gambler and loves to frequent dance halls and night clubs. His chief weakness is girls. In order to satisfy their wants he is willing to pay all manner of risks. They are the root of his trouble and they unconsciously lead him in the toils of the police. Back the girl and you'll find her charmer, is an old axiom of the police.

In recent years the words mobman and gangster, hoodlum and gunman have been used so loosely that they have come to mean little because of it. Yet the police make a careful distinction between them. Mobman and gangster, however, are practically synonymous, and mean that the subject is the member of an organized gang. There are gangs today which number 100 members. A "big" mobman or gangster boasts that he has that many men in his organization. The leader of such a gang is known as the commander and is usually well versed in the bootlegging racket. A man may be a bootlegger on a small scale, however, without being a gangster. Little racketeers are called gangsters because they are imitators of the big hind schemes.

Although the racketeer who coolly directs his men to put a man "on the spot" or to "take him for a ride" shows an extreme cruelty and indifference to human life he may be a kind husband and father. Like other men, he is proud of his wife and children and provides for them generously. After giving such an order he may go home and play with his pleasant evening in the bosom of his family. Once in the family circle he is interested in hearing how the wife and the boys and girls passed the day and laughs with them over their experiences. If he has any qualities of conscience he does not show it by word or action. He is not at all troubled because he has been the order for the execution of an enemy, even if the victim has been paid, happens to be a husband and father. Evidently the "bumping off" of somebody is purely a matter of business with him.

Difficult to Analyze

It is difficult to analyze such a man. When in the home circle he is to different from any other husband or father. He wants to give his boys and girls a good education and to bring them up in the pew-yawa that her heart craves. Nothing he can afford is too good for the wife and the children. If he lives in one community he is careful to keep his true calling from the knowledge of his neighbors, and as they watch his comings and goings they are like ly to regard him as a model and sub stantial citizen.

Some such men frequently have in their homes pianos and they are able to discuss politics, baseball, art and literature intelligently and appreciatively. They are intelligent and attractive, and if one did not know their criminal antecedents one would be attracted to them. Detectives who have come in contact with such characters sometimes have fallen under their spell when talking to them. detectives have found them congenial and entertaining, and they have been puzzled to know how such men could do the bloodthirsty things of which they have been accused. Yet these criminals are the same gangsters who exhibit in their crimes a savage cruelty that always shows they are worse in that respect than their cavemen ancestors before the dawn of history. They seemingly defy analysis for they are human contraditions.

FINIS

Give me a few more cents to pass
With the mellow flavor of the china-berth Infant;
And then no more than the lovely trees
And the birds calling.

Give me a few more cents to keep
With a fluffy love and a little nest;
And then the dawn in the shoes of sleep
And a dear tomorrow.

Give me a few more years to fill
With a little work and a little loving.
And turn the night on a starry hill
And the road's ending.

What are Screenings

The food branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has adopted the following specifications for screenings.

First: "No. 1 Feed Screenings"—consisting of broken and shrunken wheat mixed with wild buckwheat and which may not contain more than 2 per cent by weight of small cultivated weed seeds.

Second: "Mixed Feed Oats"—consisting largely of wild oats but which may contain a proportion of domestic oats and barley.

Third: "Barley Screenings"—which are made up of chaff and injurious weed seeds and so are unsuitable for seed purposes.

PRAIRIE AT EVENING

Down sinks the sun;
Down falls the wind;
Down cools the lonely plain;
Up surges all the scent of night;
The scent of stocks, the fading light,
The night-jar, and the nesting bird.

And now the dreamer's eyes may see
Beyond the shadow-haunted plain
The hills, and golden in the sun
Where romance lurks, where poetry
Will rise when day's dull prose is done.

Cooking Asparagus

By Hannah Wing

Asparagus is the most delicately flavored of all vegetables, which flavor can be enhanced by care in cooking and seasoning. The tips of asparagus are much more delicate than the lower stalks, and allowance should be made for their delicacy in cooking.

After the asparagus has been carefully cleaned, the lower scales removed, and the stalks carefully brushed to remove all kinds of sand and dirt, cut off the toughest portion of the stalks and tie the remains in loose bundles. Stand the bundles upright in the water with the tips above the surface and cook until the stems are tender. During the last eight minutes' cooking, tip the bundles over so that the tips are submerged or, better still, cover and let the tips cook in the steam. Asparagus is not to be cooked to be mangled by overcooking as it often is. When finished and drained it should be tender but still crisp and not soft or rather mushy.

The lower butts of the stalks should not be cleaned utterly but should be added to the soup kettle or cooked until tender, rubbed through a sieve to take out the fibre and the pulp, and water added to the left-over asparagus from the table to make asparagus puree.

Nothing is better to dress asparagus with than hot, melted butter. Hollandaise, cream or mousseline sauce may be used occasionally for variation. Or the hot, buttered stalks may be sprinkled with grated cheese and put in the oven until the cheese melts. Finely minced fried onions and a few well buttered crumbs may be added to this combination to accent the asparagus flavor. Too much must not be used for the asparagus flavor must not be covered by the other stronger flavored vegetables which should be used merely to accentuate the flavor.

Another combination of asparagus and cheese is this:

1 bunch asparagus.
1-2 cup grated cheese.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 tablespoon butter or butter substitute.
1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Cut asparagus in pieces and boil in salted water for ten minutes; then place it in a baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese and seasonings and add the fat in small pieces. Bake in a moderate oven.

Asparagus may be interestingly served as a luncheon dish in this way.

How to Put Familiar Vegetables to New Uses

Familiar Vegetables in New Uses

By Hannah Wing

When you tire of buttered peas, peas with carrots, peas with mint, or creamed peas it is time to begin to make any one a number of cutlets, croquettes, souffles or soups in which peas and other summer vegetables may be used. While pea soup may be made from the canned product, and is truly delicious when so made, it is an even more genuine treat when made from sweet fresh peas. A souffle of peas is almost equally delightful.

For a luncheon or supper souffle boil five cups of peas until soft, drain and season with butter, salt, pepper and just a dash of sugar. Rub through a colander to a paste. Blend a tablespoon of melted butter with one of flour and four cups of hot milk. Stir until smooth and then beat it into the pans. Add the beaten yolks of three eggs and beat until the whole mixture is creamy, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a buttered baking dish, set in a pan of water and bake for an hour. This dish with a salad is quite a meal in itself.

Peas may also be made into custards which may be used either as a dessert or as the main course of a vegetable dinner. One cup of seasoned pea pulp is used with one cup of milk and two well beaten eggs.

Now that tomatoes are considered in the fruit class for the value of their seeds and vitamins one may become quite fanciful in the use of the tomato enthusiast makes a delicious vegetable using tomato pulp in place of lemon. Another makes a tomato shortcake which makes no pretense however of being a dessert as it is intended to form a hot sandwich for the vegetable dinner. Roll out baking powder biscuits and cut in thin rounds. Put together with sliced ripe tomatoes and thin slices of onion and green pepper, and a slice of bacon and salt and pepper and then bake.

Corn dumplings are an excellent addition to stewed chicken. Two cups of cooked corn put through a ricer with two beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste and enough flour to bind together will make these dumplings which should be cooked in boiling water for twelve minutes.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers:

The outline for spring is forecast by the jacket suits which are now being seen south from Paris. A jacket may end at the waistline, bolero fashion, or cover the hips; it may fall straight, and, when open, show a waistline, a blouse, or a trimmed dress front; it may be caught to the waist with a tied, buckled, buttoned, plain or twisted belt of suede, leather, ribbon, or the dress material. The longer of a jacket may be shaped to the hips, flared or pleated as a peplum; the corners may be rounded or sharp; dress, creased over, and the upper fold may be the shorter.

Collars on jackets are cut in many ways. On some jackets there is no collar, so that a knotted handkerchief or scarf is all that is wanted to give a pattern or color. Others are cut with Italian shoulders shaped and seamed like a cape. There are flounce collars usually in silk contrast; cowl collars drawn down and fixed to one side, shawl collars tailored with long ends and flat upright tailored collars. Again, a lichu can be tied in front, and there are little roll collars fastened with cords, ribbons or leather bows.

Sleeves are trimmed on the wrist and the arm below the elbow. Undercuffs show under a loose three-quarter length sleeve. Long plain tailored sleeves are also in fashion. Linings agree with costumes, and when a costume consists of two materials, one plain and the other figured, the linings correspond. A checked or diagonally-striped coat is lined with plain color when the dress is plain, and the dress is trimmed with the check or diagonal stripe. Whether the cuffs and front are decorated, so that when the jacket is opened the trimmings or the draperies show. Skirts fall straight to below the knees with pleats, folds, overs, or seaming to shape them. Light woolen crepes with a check or little pattern of artificial silk are popular materials. Figured crepe de chine and heavier silk crepes are also used.

Since all patterns on wool and silk are small, the spring costumes look neat and youthful. The color tones are bright and light. Head scarfs to extravagance in the Rue de la Paix where machinery has threatened to kill one of the nation's finest crafts. Much has been opened to train girls, and prizes are given by dressmaking firms. Silk and wool manufacturers offer similar encouragement; research in dyeing is diligently pursued; and dressmakers work in closely with manufacturers.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

BIG BEN TESTED OUT BY COLOR

LONDON, April 17.—By the Canadian Press.—Big Ben went pink one night recently. Then St. Stephen's Tower also went pink during the astonishment of passing crowds. It was the first of a series of flood-lighting experiments by experts, as part of the programme for the International Congress, to be held in London next September. Twelve flood-lights were placed in the garden of the Speaker's house, and when they were operated the tower was illuminated. The effect was magical. The bright light of Big Ben's dial faded out as the clock glowed with a rosy pink color. Then the experts tried several other colors. These experiments lasted for nearly an hour.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Corlelius Beeckman

We Don't Just "Drop In" These Days

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The young man I go about with is a little older than I and in consequence most of his friends are married. Of course, since they are his friends, they have also become my friends. Now this is what puzzles me. Whenever we happen to meet any of these people they usually invite us to call. Merely that and nothing more. It seems quite natural for people to say, "You must come and see us," but they never make it definite. Is it all right to call without any further invitation, or should we wait until they set a time? I would feel much better if they would say "come and see us some evening next week." Then if it was not convenient to call that week I would feel that I had the privilege to telephone and ask them if they would be at home another time.

If it is all right to call without a definite invitation, should we "drop in," or is it better to telephone and let them know that we are coming?

Miss Q.

"Merely that and nothing more" thoroughly describes their casual manner that many people have of indicating their social interest, but, from what they say this invitation, they often do not mean to have it taken very literally. Life is, as a matter of fact, usually too busy now for such dropping-in, unless, you are well established.

What I would do, if I were you, is to plan a little informal party — bridge, perhaps, or bas[illegible] — and invite some of these friends that you wish to become better acquainted with. This would start the ball rolling, and would suggest your friendliness and hospitality so definitely that they would probably make some return of hospitality, and the friendship would be started.

The Gallant Youth Will Ask The Question First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1. Do you think it is correct for a boy to kiss you the first time you have been in his company, if he intends to go with you steadily?

2. Is it a girl's place to ask the boy to her home, or is it his place to ask if he may come?

Anxious.

I'm as "anxious" as your signature that you do not be so lacking in self-respect. Aren't you taking a bit for granted—that the boy wishes to "go with you steadily" when he has met you only once? Of course, I don't intend to be suspicious, but—may not that be his cajoling way of getting that inappropriate kiss? (What did I hear you say?)

2. Either is quite correct. The girl's youth will ask for the privilege of coming to your home, and you, as the gracious hostess, may invite him to come. There is fine reason for either, you see.

Midnight is a Very Late Hour at 13

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am fifteen years of age and go to quite a few parties. It has often been discussed as to what time I should return home. Mother thinks at twelve o'clock, but I think no earlier than one o'clock. Am I wrong?

Ed.

Indeed you are, my dear girl. And I am afraid that I should not be as lenient as your mother is in her twelve o'clock rule. On week-days, until Friday, you should not go out in the evening at all, for there is school work to be done. Most schools make this a rule with girls your age, and they should do so. On Friday and Saturday evenings, when you go to informal little parties, you should be at home by ten o'clock or earlier than one o'clock. Am I wrong?

COUNTY BASEBALL LEAGUE ASSURED

R. A. Elliott, President of O.B.A.A. Keenly Interested in Movement

One of the largest league baseball meetings in history was held in the Y. M. C. A. last night. No less than nine clubs were represented. The new circuit was held in an attempt to form a class B Intermediate baseball league in this district. This class "B" series is for the advancement of the game in the small urban centres.

The president of the O. A. A. A., Mr. R. A. Elliott, opened the meeting and welcomed the delegates of the clubs. Mr. Elliott explained the advantages of a league which is well balanced, so that the keen interest may be kept right up until the end of the season. Although he is president of the "parent body", Mr. Elliott is very interested in the advancement of the game, especially in the eastern part of the province where it has fallen off of late. Mr. Elliott opposed any strong club predominating the league throughout the season. He also suggested that they form two leagues, one in the north and one in the south, and that a double schedule be played in each league and a single interlocking schedule each league as well. This idea is a great asset to ball and has met with great success in western Ontario. After much discussion it was deemed advisable to try the interlocking schedule this season. The first and second teams in each league play off and the winners meet under the O. B. A. A. playdowns.

A general voice of the meeting was cast and each club delegate gave his opinion. It was decided that another meeting be called on April 28th at the Y. M. C. A., when each club will come prepared to pay their entrance fee and be ready to elect officers and draw up a schedule, etc.

The standing the meeting were Napanee, Deloro, Sulphide, Madoc, Belleville Victorias, Tartyville, Point Anne, Havelock, Wellington, and possibly Picton. It is expected that all these clubs will start the season, but at least seven are assured. Point Anne have agreed to release Gibson, Buck and the two Green boys to the Belleville seniors, so as to make the league more even. This was appreciated by the meeting.

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

Kingston rare threw a scare into the C.O.B.L. on Wednesday, but it was not long lived, as the new organization are strong for Senior ball.

Remembering how well Wes Parrell went his second year with the Indians, Cleveland is looking to Clint Brown, who had a games his first season with the Tribe in 1930, for a close duplication of Parrell's feat. Brown, himself, expects to keep his victory string to 20 this year, which would give him 34 wins in two seasons, a worthwhile record for a young hurler who had only about two years of professional baseball experience before joining the Indians.

The burning question is Oshawa's stand in the league, a delegation from the league will be in the Motor Town on Saturday.

A syndicate of wealthy Japanese men are financing to the extent of $6,000,000 a professional league of eight clubs, modeled after the major leagues in this country, according to word received by Herb Hunter, former big league player, who, with Fred Lieb, is promoting a trip of American players to Japan this fall. Hunter has been offered a three-year contract to serve in an advisory capacity to the league and has indicated he will accept. Japanese cities ten actively selected for franchises in the proposed league, include, Tokio, two teams; Yokohama, Kobe, Kyoto and Asaka.

It has been suggested that the Mi-Y League enter the O.A.B.A. as a midget division. This would give the winners a chance to enter the Provincial play-downs.

Close scrutiny of the schedule shows that McGraw's young men have to ride only 8,696 miles on the railroads this season. The Brooklyn Robins are almost as well off—they have to click off only 9,704 miles. The Pittsburgh Pirates, on the other hand, must travel further than any other club—13,876 miles. Maybe these figures mean something. Maybe!

The question of using the old Ontario field on Bridge street E., instead of the Alemite grounds, is the best suggestion we have heard in years. This old field could be fitted up cheaper and better than any in town, for the minor league.

An outperspiring Philadelphia scribe, seeing the chance for a good story, wired the Great Art Shires at the Milwaukee baseball camp in Hot Springs for a confidential report on George Earnshaw of the A's, who has been conditioning at the spa. "He won't win more than 40 games this season, was the Great One's reply.

Also it has been suggested that the old Albert College grounds be made into a ball diamond for the kiddies on that hill.

There's room for only one winner in each major league, but the National League promises to have one of the most riotous races in chaos, anyone has seen in years and there is a chance that the battle may be long and close in the American. Which is about all baseball needs for a good season.

Why can't baseball be revived in the public schools? That is where all the old veterans of the local teams got their start, and good ballplayers they were, too.

New Erasmus, rookie of the Athletics, was declared by Mickey Cochrane, who has caught the world's champion's ace hurlers for years, to be the "best pitcher I ever saw." Cochrane also said that Erausmus has an unusual abundance of natural stuff, poise and control.

Perhaps the Mi-Y leaders can place a Juvenile league from this town in the O.A.B.A. as well as a Bantam.

Jackie Mitchell, 17-year-old girl pitcher with the Chattanooga team, made her debut in professional baseball against the Chicago White Sox. Yankees. Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig struck out and Tony Lazzeri walked during her short appearance on the slab. As Babe Ruth limited the pointed out the dangerous re-action should a liner whistle through the box and hit her, the fast in framing him and Gehrig can be taken with a grain of salt.

COUNTRY CLUB ANNOUNCE THE GOLF PROGRAM

William Little, New Instructor Is Here Now

Mr. William Little, the new professional at the Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club has assumed charge, and those who have had the opportunity of playing golf with Mr. Little recognize that the club has a distinct acquisition to golfing circles in the community.

The course has wintered extremely well, and play on the permanent greens is already possible. The new green at the 9th hole has been contributed to the Club by Mr. W. Z. Rowsome of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation. It is a decided improvement, and should be available for play by midsummer.

The following excellent program of golf has been arranged:

May 6—Dubbs vs. Duffers (chosen by the President and Vice-President).

May 15—Opening dinner and dance.

May 20—Belleville at Bay of Quinte Club.

May 27—Belleville at Napanee.

June 3—District Tournament; 36 holes—Stableford.

June 24—Cataraqui at Belleville.

June 27—Belleville at Bath Bay invitations to enter.

July 8—Belleville at Belleville.

July 15—Belleville at Gananoque.

July 22—Cobourg at Belleville.

July 29—Belleville at Belleville.

Aug. 5—Napanee at Belleville.

Aug. 12—Belleville at Picton.

Aug. 19—Gananoque at Belleville.

Aug. 26—Belleville at Cobourg.

Sept. 2—Belleville at Cataraqui.

In addition to the above the interclub competitions for the Graham Cup, the Fenton shield and other trophies and prizes will be arranged and the drawings posted at the clubhouse in the near future. Particular attention will be given in the early season district tournament at the Club and other handicap events, with as there will be a large field in a short, six hole match play competition for suitable prizes. Below fifteen-handicap players from all the clubs in the district are being invited to participate, and it should produce some interesting play and help develop a more cordial inter-club feeling throughout the district.

The above has to do only with the early season, and a schedule of ladies' matches and events is going drawn, and will be announced shortly.

YANKS CAPTURE THIRD BATTLE

Detroit Defeat St. Louis 6 to 5 in 12 Innings

New York, April 17.—A heartbreaking defeat at the hands of Boston's Red Sox pitcher, gave yesterday's game to the New York Yankees by a score of 2 to 1. The error came in the ninth inning.

The score was tied at 1 to 1 with three men on base and one out, when Hockey, Yankee pitcher, came to bat. He sent a slow roller toward the pitcher's box. Quinn picked up the ball and threw to the plate for what looked like a double play combination. The throw, however, was about eight feet over the head of Berry, who was on third scored with the winning run.

The victory was the third in as many starts for the Yankees. Lisenbee and Herb Pennock put on interesting although unorthodox pitching battle. Lisenbee limited the Yankees to seven hits in the nine innings allowing no more than one in any inning. Pennock was found for only six hits, but these were almost as well scattered.

Cleveland, April 17.—Joe Vosmik, Cleveland sandlotter, and Clint Brown, Indian pitcher, were the shining lights in Cleveland's 7 to 0 victory over the Chicago White Sox here yesterday.

Vosmik playing his second big league game of his career smashed out two doubles, accounting for two runs in the third and added several activities for two runs in the sixth, Brown allowed but six hits the entire game.

Washington, April 17—The Washington Senators made it two straight over the champion Philadelphia Athletics yesterday, winning 5 to 4. Crowder started for the Nats, while Connie Mack started his pitcher to mound Hankinson. Neither pitcher was effective. Tauscher, another Philadelphia recruit came in the sixth, and held the champions safe until the ninth, when Washington batted to fill the bases and scored two runs.

St. Louis, April 17.—The Detroit Tigers defeated the St. Louis Browns 6 to 5 in 12 innings here yesterday to win their first game of the season. Gehringer was the hero of the game. The lead ter-sawed back and forth throughout the game. Detroit first scored two runs for Detroit in the seventh to send them into the lead. The Browns evened the score in the ninth inning, but Detroit came back in the tenth.

Gehringer walked and Alexander sent him home with long single with the winning run in the twelfth inning. Stone hit a home-run for the Tigers in the tenth inning Herring, Tiger pitcher, helped his own cause by striking out the last two Brownies in the twelfth.

The Sport Eye Column

Contributed By FAIR PLAY

Boosts and Fair Criticism

Do you know? If the organization plans which are being laid are carried out, more than 200 boys, girls, young men and women from Mr. Jeffers will be taking part in competitive sport during the summer in our own city.

With this interest being shown in the different branches of sport the big problem facing executives in charge is the matter of playing grounds.

The city council, and the Parks Board would do well to get together at once, to lay plans to have these citizens and growing men and women properly cared of.

Some locations which could no doubt be put in decent shape at a minimum cost are East Belleville Playgrounds, the old Cricket Field and King George School grounds.

An ideal place would be Memorial Park on Station street. This is a supposition, no doubt that the Parks Board will look upon with favour. But latter friends of the Parks Commission who give much splendid effort in behalf of our city, thing it over. There is plenty of space on this lot and if feet certain that, if properly laid out, a splendid recreation ground could be made there. I also feel that the flower beds can be protected and add to the beauty of useful grounds.

Our city must advance plans for additional playground facilities. The Parks Commission and the sponsors of the arena have built and helped for the future, but the good work is not yet complete.

Ask the old timers if they would like to see conditions the same as in the old days—when on skating rinks in the summer, on the site of the present armouries when ball was played on Coleman Flats, in the old Cricket Field, and later in the old fair grounds, and no playgrounds to give the young and felt a chance to play supervised competitive games?

OSHAWA SQUAD ARE ORGANIZED

Long Jump to Kingston Does Not Appeal to Ball Followers

OSHAWA, April 17.— As a result of a meeting held last by the Aarabs Baseball Club, plans for the season are still very much in the air. Never ever one definite step was taken, that will bring to club a championship. Saturday afternoon at the Motor City Athletic Field, the Aarabs Club at least is a move in the right direction, but there is every indication that the club means to play ball this season.

There is no doubt but that the players wish to play the game this season, but the trouble seems to be to get a convenient grouping. Three players are known to be not present. These are: first, entering a race to Kingston, a distance of which the Aarabs played last year. Sport Sage and Sebourg have both signified their intention of putting in teams, but as mentioned before, on a team that gave the Oshawa outfit considerable trouble last year, are to attempt to run the Kingston race.

The other options are those of joining up with Peterboro, Belleville or the Ontario Baseball Association League, a senior series. This however is not looked upon with favour as to involve a long jump to Kingston and will be considered at least than the intermediate group of last year. The third option is that of joining up with a city team. This will probably be a decided attraction for the fans as the Aarabs have a good chance with the Toronto teams would want to come around to the Motor City annually as when they play in a group by themselves they are not in the same travelling expense. The question of joining up with a Toronto group is to be left open, and it is hoped that members of the executive who will report to a meeting to be held at a later date.

In the meantime the election of officers for the year is being deferred to a later date, but a meeting should be arranged in the near future to be held. Practice of the season is usually on May 24th.

Cincinnati, O., April 17.—Winning in the second straight game in as many days the St. Louis Cardinals took the measure of the Cincinnati Reds here yesterday 6 to 3, by staging batting rallies in the seventh and eighth innings after the first six rounds were tied at 1 to 1.

Gelbert and Adams opened on Frey in the seventh with singles. Wilson sacrificed and Andy Hill, batting for Haines, showed he was right in insisting that the Cardinals keep him this year, by driving a single to right to score both runners. Southworth hit the next pitch to right for a triple to score High.

Chicago, April 17.—George Grantham's home run in the eighth inning with Lloyd Waner on base enabled the Pittsburg Pirates to defeat the Chicago Cubs in the third game of the series yesterday 4 to 3.

The Cubs led until the eighth when Waner singled, stole second and Grantham followed with the circuit clout.

THE MAJORITY DEMANDS GILLETTE

IN LETHBRIDGE OR LONDON

It's Gillette!

IN Lethbridge or London—from one end of the world to the other—the Gillette blade is the overwhelming favorite. Here is proof—speedily secured, and that this finely finished blade gives most men everywhere genuine shaving satisfaction.

Gillette's international leadership is the inspiration for tireless engineering research and strict adherence to the highest manufacturing ideals. Constant improvement is the result. When you shave with this double-edge, double-service blade you share the comfort enjoyed by more than a hundred million men of every nation. Light, swift strokes—easy and smooth—leave your face clean and refreshed.

These are the reasons for Gillette's world-wide acceptance as the standard of quality. Formatchless shaving results the vast majority of men always demand Gillettes when they buy razor blades.

Dazzy Vance was Unable to Stop Fast-Travelling Braves

Boston, Mass., April 17.—Even Dazzy Vance, speed ball king, was unable to check the fast pounding Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Robins in their opening engagement here yesterday.

Big Bill Brandt was in mid-season form, limiting the Robins to five hits one of them, a home run by Babe Herman in the third inning, which scored Vance and Gilbert who were on bases.

The Braves sewed up the game in the seventh inning. Charles Wilson purchased from Rochester of the International League, connected with one of Vance's curves and sent the ball in the right field stand, scoring Spohrer and Brandt.

Philadelphia, April 17.—When the New York Giants ended their third game with the season with the Philadelphia Phillies yesterday they found themselves in possession of a record of two games played for three games won, two games lost and no games tied. The Giants have won two games and the Phillies the other.

Two big innings gave the Giants victory. They scored five runs in the fifth inning and seven runs in the eighth.

Cincinnati, O., April 17.—Winning in the second straight game in as many days the St. Louis Cardinals took the measure of the Cincinnati Reds here yesterday 6 to 3, by staging batting rallies in the seventh and eighth innings after the first six rounds were tied at 1 to 1.

ATHLETES MAKE GOOD SHOWING

Annual Hexathlon Was Held at Y.M.C.A. Yesterday

The annual Hexathlon, a program of six athletic events open only to members of the Y.M.C.A. was held in the gymnasium last night. Ten competitors entered the contest, and from these some excellent marks were obtained. The events were the standing broad jump, 16 pound shot put, 40 yard dash, 16 pound shot for distance, high jump, and 16 pound weight throw.

In the 40 yards Walter Gunne Jr. made the highest total with 433 out of a possible 620. Clifford Armstrong had the 80 lb. class with 333. George Ostrum Jr. headed the 111 pound class with 325. Elmer McMurray Sr. was high man in the 125 lb. class and Jack Bowerman in the unlimited class honors with 384. Jack was closely followed by Hal Ball who made a total of 341.

The prizes, in addition to individual efforts, all boys who made a total of over 400 points will be awarded a gold medal. Those who made from the 350 mark will receive silver medals. Bronze medals have been qualified for the other small boys. Those who have qualified are Walter Gunne Jr. Saunders, R. Adams, W. McMurray, C. Eggleton, H. Burns, Gordon Gill, G. Shilton, R. Morris, G. Bilch, F. Mallin, W. Crowe and C. Ashley.

Over seventy-five boys, members of the Association, participated in one or more of the six events. These latter are to be followed by some potato races, tug-o-war, push ball, relay races, high jump, etc., and fancy work.

ST. GEORGE'S AFTERNOON TEA

Improvements Made at Rapidly-Growing Sunday School

Members of the Guild of St. George's Sunday School held another of their very successful teas and sale yesterday afternoon. The parish hall and Sunday School have just been completed and the extensions were thrown open for the inspection of the public. Many improvements have been made throughout the building and the Sunday School is rapidly becoming one of the largest in the city.

A table was well attended. The delightful arrangement and decorations of the hall added to the rooms a most inviting air.

The guests were received by the President of the Guild, Mrs. W. Young, who was assisted by Mrs. A. Pope. The tea tables with the other basket of roses, and tall red candles was presided over by Mrs. J. Hagar, assisted by Mrs. W. Mills. Mrs. Cook established the candy table, Mrs. J. English, Mrs. W. Beare, Jr., Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. W. McKay, Mrs. The tea table had vases of red roses. The sandwich booth, decorative in yellow, with pale pink flowers was in charge of Mrs. Frank Mills, Mrs. W. Herring. The home-cooking table, in yello wand purple, was presided over by Miss, assisted after by Mrs. J. Collins, Mrs. Bert Bird, Mrs. J. Bird, Mrs. Grimes. The popular candy and toy booth was in charge of Mrs. N. Liddell and Miss Edith Liddell, while Mrs. T. Crozier acted as treasurer for the afternoon.

OVER 4 MILLIONS PAID IN WAGES

While Mr. W. C. Springer has been in employment in Belleville, he has been responsible for wages between that time to the present amount of over four million dollars. This fact was brought out by Dr. G. A. Marshall on Wednesday evening at the presentation to Mr. Springer of a life membership in St. Andrew's Club. From the time the Springer manufactory was built, year after year, there had been paid out in wages an average of over one hundred thousands dollars a year.

WOMEN GLASS BLOWERS

London, Apr. 17 (CP)—Hundreds of women in London are blowing for a living. They earn good wages, too. They are employed "blowing" glass and shaping it into thermometers, scientific, surgical and chemical apparatus, valves for wireless, and other forms of glassware. A woman who possesses fine judgment and can weld her lung pressure skillfully to blow through a hollow tube of glass and convert a "bulge" into a beautiful cylinder of the right dimensions, can earn $18 a week. In one London workshop alone there are 80 young women employed "blowing" thermometers. Plenty of girls apply for the work, but only a small percentage prove suitable after a trial for training to become expert "glass blowers."

CHANGE KING'S YACHT

London, April 17—The King's famous racing yacht Britannia which is being converted to Bermudian rig (similar to Shamrock and five J class), will be launched at Cowes early next month and be completed at Gosport, where her first race in her new rig will be at the Royal Yacht Squadron's regatta at Cowes week, which opens a special week's racing on the Solent.

There's Money in Eggs

"With eggs selling at 17 cents a dozen one can't make much money, if he operates his poultry flock on a business basis," was the recent statement of one of the leading poultrymen of the Niagara District to officials of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Feed costs are lower, and the prospects of lowered production through flock depletion is encouraging farmers and poultrymen to make sure of having a good flock of layers; pullets that fail to lay; buying approved chicks in lots of from 200 to 500 or more.

FOOD SUPERVISOR FOR HOSPITAL

London, Apr. 17 (By The Canadian Press)—Lily Watkinson's Page Editor of "Overseas" writes: "St. Bartholomew's Hospital has appointed a food supervisor, who for the last two years has been superintending patients' meals, in conjunction with the doctors. This is a step in the right direction. But before this hospital was able to have her position and after taking her degree at Oxford, and her training in domestic science at King's College, London, she had to go abroad to study and finish her training in New York. The Royal Free Hospital in Edinburgh appointed a dietitian some years ago. She told me that she also had to finish her training in America, as there was nowhere for her to go to in this country. Here is a career for women — one of absorbing interest and one which will be steadily increasing demand in the future. The day is coming, however, I am sure, when dietetic restaurants will be the order of the day; when housekeeping and health will be studied as a unit instead of as two separate subjects. An intelligent dietitian has now added physical culture to her dreamsalong establishment, and helps her clients to mould their persons to her tastes. It is a sensible move and is certain to be a financial success."

SKINNY MEN

Gain pounds of weight in few weeks with new IRONIZED YEAST—a special combination of dried brewer's yeast plus iron — or pay nothing

Daily the letters pour in telling how Ironized Yeast has put pounds of good solid flesh in few weeks. Has built up new strength and pep in nervous, tired people. Has banished constipation, indigestion and boils.

Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one — special strength-building dried brewer's Yeast and blood-enriching strengthening iron. Two yeast in the same as used in making malt and which make malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured and concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value. Double-tested for strength, purity and potency. Used by doctors and big hospitals.

To this concentrated dried brewer's Yeast is added three kinds of easily assimilated iron to quickly make rich, red blood and tone up nerves and muscles. By this special process Ironized Yeast is made more effective than any of the 50 cent tonics. Improvement to buy from druggists, send only 50c direct to Canada Ironized Yeast Co. AT OFFICERS' MEETING

General Ambrose Pettigrew commanding military district No. 3 and Major Whitelaw from staff headquarters, Kingston, will be the guests attending a meeting of the officers of the Argyll Light Infantry.

Whitelaw gave a lecture with the use of sand tables, which was most instructive and interesting. The staff officers were entertained in the officers' quarters at the conclusion of the lecture.

RADIO FANS CORNER

As a preliminary, have you secured your radio license yet? I'm not telling, it means a fine if you are discovered someday without one. Reception was just to the limit of last night, nothing particularly wrong with it that we could see, so we'll let the matter rest there.

Another "Canada on Parade" presentation tonight from Chesrio station at 8 o'clock and the feature of a prominent guest speaker who will be heard each succeeding week, will be introduced tonight by Love Rolero Cecil, or as he is known in the annals of English nobility, Lord Cecil of Chelwood. Anyway he'll be presented to the radio listeners tonight. The O. M. Concert, conducted by Rombeck will be heard in their own arrangement of Kildour's "Trees", followed by "On the Alamo" and "Peeling the Way I Do." They have other attractions on the program, so tune in at this time.

Madoc Junction wrote in again, and this time I think we heard all the programs they were interested in this week. The Circus Saints and Sinners program, Little Jack Little and the rest. It was a lucky break for us because static didn't kick up car in this time. Don't know how they got on, Madoc Junction, but we put there with plenty of cleared space around you constituted perfect reception. Guess I'll have to follow your suggestion and buy myself an aboid to the country and take my radio with me.

Well here it is Friday night again and once more all the fine programs for this night pop up on the newsworks. Uncle Ed and David first track of course, and if they provide as much fun as they did at the big fire sale, they held last night, everybody should be in for a good time. WEAF 6.45.

Running through WEAF'S schedule we note at 8 Jessica Dragonette and the Cavaliers. The opening number will be "Liza" from Show Girl and included on the "Rose of the Rancho" and "Rose of the Bayou", "Sweetheart of My Student Days", "Only A Rose", "Sing Me Love Divine", and Jessica Dragonette sings, "K'ti Again".

At 9 Harry Reser Biy Chief Eitmno and Raymond Knight, the cuckoo announcer, will present features from the Ice Palace in the far frozen north. At 10 we hear Countess Olga Albani and the Men About Town Trio on the "Week-End" program, at 10.30 the R. C. A. 11 Vicent Lopez, and at 12 Phil Spitalny closes the hooks.

Eliminating Fulhorum

Following the lead which has been given by the Poultry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms, the Department of Agriculture for Ontario has in its press bulletin just issued has this reference: "The Poultry Division has again conducted a campaign for the blood testing of poultry to eliminate carriers of pullorum disease. More than 21,500 birds have been tested (1930) as compared with 16,000 in 1929. The percentage of birds reacting was 3.8 as compared with 4.2 in the last year. Since testing was begun in 1928 there has been a marked improvement in the liveability of chicks."

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

It was during the second week that Molly came down from the stars.

"Is there any chance for me here, Kitty?" she asked, "Gee, my dogs are killing me there in the store."

I didn't know, but did the very best thing. I took her in to see Mr. Miers and told her about Molly.

"The first chance, I'll have Kitty send for you," she promised Molly. I assured her that Mrs. Miers wasn't putting her off, that she meant it, and Molly was delighted.

A few weeks later Molly got the chance and came to work. I didn't have the heart to tell her the truth, and it wasn't for her beauty—Molly was pretty enough in a way—but because she was rather plump and was used to show off the "stout" lines.

With the easier work Molly began to look better than ever.

Once when Thad was there to take me home Viola was coming out with me and we squeezed her into the little car and dropped her off at her street. The next day Viola asked me bluntly how I happened to be chumming around with a rich society chap like Thad Parsons. I told her how we met and also admitted that I expected to marry him.

"Then I'm all for you, Kit," she said, "I didn't think you would be nit-wit enough to lose your head just because a man was rich and socially prominent."

A NEW PAL

From then on Viola Carson and I became great pals.

Sam Jacobs used to drop in to see Mrs. Miers, his sister. Now and then he would say, "got any swell lookers for me, Lena?"

"You can't come and steal my models, genif," she would always answer. She must have seen my surprised look one day for she began to laugh.

"Sam here is in the show business, Kitty——" she started to explain.

Mr. Jacobs looked around at me. I had on a black and gold creation that I had just been showing a buyer. To my momentary alarm, Mr. Jacobs rushed up to me.

"Where you been hiding all this time?" he demanded.

"Go away, Sam, you can't have her," Mrs. Miers scolded.

He waved his hand at her as if to wave her away and into silence. To me he said:

"A hundred a week, any time you want to go on the stage, Miss!"

"What would I do on the stage?" I managed to ask.

"Nothing—positively nothing—just stand there and look swell, like this!"

Mrs. Miers was back of him and I could hear her head at me.

"Thanks, I'm satisfied right here," I told him, but it wasn't really true. From that moment, I was far from satisfied. Visions of what I could do with a hundred a week flitted around in my mind, visions of working short hours on the stage and sleeping half the day, came to me.

At last time, however, Mr. Jacobs shrugged his shoulders at me and said, "think it over, Miss. Maybe I'm over."

When he had gone Mrs. Miers came to me.

"Sam is a nice brother, mind you, but he's all the time looking for swell girls for his shows—a dozen models he's taken from me and believe me when I tell you the show business ain't so good for a girl—my daughter I'd never let go in a show."

It's a wonder that I didn't laugh at her, for Mrs. Miers had a daughter about my own age. She would weigh a hundred and eighty, if an ounce, and half of it seemed to be in her legs and ankles.

A HUNDRED A WEEK

A few days later Sam Jacobs was in the establishment again. He merely nodded when he saw me sliding dresses along the steel rods on hangers for some buyer from Michigan, and then he looked around and came over to me.

"There's the list," he said, in a business-like tone of voice but the way he winked at me was positively funny. He slipped me an envelope and turned away toward the office.

A little later I got a chance to read it. It was typewritten on "Jacobs Productions", stationery and read:

"I want fooling about the hundred a week. Rather than have so much argument with my sister, I said no more. If you want to go on the stage and have a talk with me, I won't eat you up. Bring along your mother or somebody if you are one of the fool girls who think all theatrical men are ogres or something worse—come after you get through work any night, I'm always in my office late."

That set my head in a whirl again. I supposed that it would be terribly angry at me if I left her, but I couldn't see how a hundred a week and the stage seemed such an easy life.

I didn't mention this at home. Sister Cora would have thrown a couple of fits over it, and even father would have objected to that, but if I just went ahead and took the job then I could square things at home.

I told Viola about it and showed her the note.

"Well, for crin'n' out loud—you grab it, Kitty," she advised.

"YOU DON'T WEAR A THING"

A couple of nights later I took Viola along with me and visited Sam Jacobs in his office.

"If you can convince me, Mr. Jacobs," I said, "that a girl who can't do a step of stage dancing and can't sing the scale and can't act, can draw a hundred a week, then I'll sign right on the contract line for you."

"Good! Then you're hired!" he exclaimed.

"But what do I do?" I insisted.

"You don't do a thing—you don't have to. When I seen you in the little gold dress I knew plenty—here," and he took out some photographs of stage tableaux.

"Like that—huh?"

He indicated a group of girls posed as statues!

"But—but what do I wear?" I cried.

"Wear? That's it, you don't have to even have clothes—you don't wear a thing!"

Viola Carson giggled.

I couldn't giggle. I could only see myself up on a stage wearing, as Sam Jacobs so coyly expressed it, "nothing at all."

"It ain't—there's all stage art," Mr. Jacobs said, glaring at Viola.

"No, for me," I said, getting up hastily.

"But why—such a chance as that to throw it down!"

"I thought there was some catch in it—but—it may seem all right to you, but I wouldn't pose that way for a hundred a week, thanks, just the same, for the offer," I declared.

Mr. Jacobs shrugged his shoulders.

"My sister would—Oh, she'd kill me——"

"Bring her along to take care of you ,do be ready with the robe when the curtain falls on each girl—you have a mala——"

"And there are other people——" Viola said with her lips, "Thad," I nodded. I had just thought of it, why, Thad Parsons wouldn't speak to me—at least, he'd never marry me if I did such a thing.

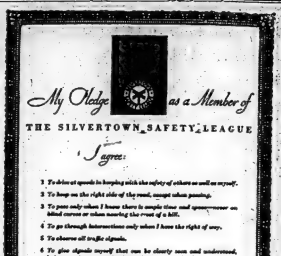
Viola giggled, I'm sorry, and all my dreams of a hundred a week had gone, as Viola said, "Flooey!"

A GOOD LAUGH

At home that night I remarked to Cora that I had thrown down an offer of a hundred a week.

"Yeah? What sugar daddy wanted to put you in a love nest?" she asked.

"Be yourself, Cora, you know well enough that any love nest I step into will have a marriage certificate all nicely framed and hung beside the 'God Bless Our Home' motto," and then I told her about Jacobs.



Cora laughed for five minutes.

"I'd give anything to have seen your face when he sprung that," she cried.

Cora was getting well rapidly. We were all very happy about it. She insisted that in a few more months she would go to work as a dress designer. That had been her work when she married.

"It won't be long now, Kit, before I can pay you back for all you've done for me—perhaps you could go to some nice school if you wanted it," she suggested.

"You attend to getting well; your kiddies need a nice strong mama; as for yours truly, I'm doing quite well thank you."

Reproduction of The Silvertown Safety Pledge recently signed by Hon. Geo. S. Henry as Minister of Highways. Mr. R. C. Groffmann, representative of the Canadian Goodrich Co. Ltd., of Kitchener, sponsors of the movement, acted as witness.

"Do you really expect he will ask you to marry him?" she asked, lowering her voice so father wouldn't hear in the next room.

"Yes, I do," I confessed, "he's in love with me and he respects me."

"And you'd marry him?"

"Try and stop me!"

"If you do I hope you are happy—not so very many are who just fall in love with money!"

"Why, Cora, how can you say that?" I cried.

"I don't know what to say—it's something a person can't put in on. I just have a feeling that what you think is love is a dazzle caused by his wealth and position—and all I want is to see you happy—as happy as I was during the five years my husband lived—

I had to comfort her then and the subject wasn't mentioned again for a long while.

Thad was away on a fishing trip up in Canada.

I had known him almost a year. He had come into Hunter's a year before to buy blades and stuff to take on a fishing trip and had given up the trip, come back to my counter every day and finally became acquainted.

Now we had a thorough understanding. He had told me that he loved me. I knew that he meant every word of it. Yet, somehow, I hated to have him take that trip. I hated to have him away for so long, perhaps, but probably I was a little jealous because he would prefer to go on a fishing trip instead of staying in town and going around with me to our gay little parties.

Viola's married brother had a garage down at Long Beach and a cozy little home. Twice I had been down with Viola. We could put on our bathing suits at the cottage and go to the beach for a swim.

This particular Saturday we were to stay over until Monday morning, Mrs. Miers, always kind-hearted and gave us bathing suits out of stock, for among the many "Miers Creations" were ultra modern and ultra daring bathing suits.

"Kit, we'll knock 'em for a loop when we hit the beach in those things," Viola declared as we settled into a train seat.

"Or else be pinched," I added thinking how much I wished Thad could drop down to the beach and see me. There would be no chance of that, even if he were in town instead of up in Canada, for he didn't patronize such public beaches.

An hour after we landed at Viola's brother's home we were headed for the beach, our long robes clutched tightly about us. We ran through from the cottage right past the garage that Viola's brother, Fred Carson owned, and stopped just to say "Hello" to him.

"Hoo—Hoo—Kitty!" someone shouted.

It was Susie Lawlor!

RAVES OVER SUITS

She and her husband were friends of Thad and twice we had visited down there for a little while on a Saturday or Sunday. She was having something done to her car.

I introduced Viola. Mrs. Lawlor caught sight of our bathing suits under our robes.

"Let me see!" she demanded, and then with a shriek of delight—

"Why can't you and your friend come down to our place—we're going to have some extra young men and you'll need you, really," she insisted.

I explained that I was visiting Viola's people, but that I'd love to be a guest at a really swell Long Island Summer home declared that she could square that.

Back we trotted and got ready. An hour later we were at the Lawlor's beautiful place, a really big house with private grounds and a stretch of private beach.

I was thrilled. I don't mean that I was blase about it by any means, for I got a big thrill myself, although I had been there a few times before.

Susie—Mrs. Lawlor made us call her that—had us get into those "hot" bathing suits again and we down to the beach where there were a dozen or so, including her husband and three beaus. They were too polite to rave or make comments about our suits, but they did create quite a stir and we frankly explained that they were advance styles, for the next Palm Beach season especially, and we told how we got them. I wouldn't stand for any bluffing—if they didn't want to mingle with working girls, that would be their back luck. But Thad Parsons' circle of friends seemed to be real people, not snobs, and Viola and I had a wonderful week-end.

Curt Lawlor seemed especially attentive to the stunning girl named Arline Sarent. If his wife didn't like it and I wouldn't have liked it if I had been in her place) she didn't give any hint of it.

MOONLIGHT FLIRTATION

That night during the dancing it was Viola and myself for a stroll down there were Mr. Lawlor and this Arline, snuggled up together on a sand dune, in the moonlight.

I am glad that a person cannot see into the future, for if I had known then just what part this Arline Sargent would later play in my life I think I would have been tempted to try to drown her then and there!

We had a lively, almost hectic time of it throughout Sunday. Monday morning we got up and got to the station before any of the guests were awake. We were working girls and wanted no tears over the fact, but hustled back to town, grateful for a wonderful time.

Viola didn't get over talking about that trip for weeks.

Thad had been gone almost a month. I had received three splendid letters from him. He was lonesome, if the men with him weren't his own guests, he declared, he would have been back long ago, and he kept counting the days until he could see me.

"I'll never drift away from you so far God for me keeps again, my precious," he wrote in one of the letters. This made me decidedly happy.

A REGULAR PLUMBER

Peter Thompson came over that next Sunday.

Well, Kit, look me over—I'm a regular plumber now—just as I said I'd be—I'm working for a big construction company. Sixty smacking a week and overtime that has been making it simply pinety for the past three weeks—what do you think of that?"

JACK OAKIE IN "THE GANG BUSTER" AT BELLE TODAY

"Rango" Amazing Sequel to "Africa Speaks" on the Same Program

That lively, grinning comic, Jack Oakie, sets a wild and woolly pace in his new starring picture, "The Gang Buster," an hilarious whirlwind packed with hearty laughs and shivery thrills, which is being shown at the Belle Theatre today and Saturday, matinee daily. In this Paramount picture Oakie is cast as a young and pot-too bright insurance salesman from Arkansas who comes to the big town and finds himself surrounded by all sorts of gangsters who menace his life. But Oakie, innocent of all threatening and evil influences, goes his merry way, selling insurance and winning the heart of a beautiful girl whose father has been put "on the spot."

"The Gang Buster" is one of Oakie's funniest pictures. And the most exciting too. Fine comedy, broad and hilarious, works hand in hand with action that's spiced with suspense and countless thrills. Through it all the reckless, smiling Jack Oakie does his stuff in the best approved manner, risking his neck without knowing it more times than you could possible. But as usual with him, Oakie's dumb-cockiness is his chief weapon in attaining success and winning the girl his heart pines for.

The girl to whom the incomparable Jack Oakie loses his heart is played by that soft spoken, talented young actress, Jean Arthur, who disports herself with charm and grace. And the wide assortment of hard boiled characters who menace the life of the "pride of Arkansas" are perfectly portrayed by William "Stage" Boyd, recently seen with Gary Cooper in "The Spoilers"; Francis MacDonald, Tom Kennedy and Harry Stubbs. And what a group of gangsters they make!

Many of the individual action "shots" of "Rango", the amazing sequel to "Africa Speaks", which is being exhibited on the same program, are breath-taking. There are several fights between orang outangs and tigers that are simply nerve tingling. There are also scenes of other animals in desperate battles for life that bring a thrill seldom experienced in any theatre.

"Rango" is a picture to command your attention. It is unusual, truly different entertainment of a setting that makes for admiration and interest. A comedy, Belle Sound News and the closing chapter of "The Spell of the Circus" serial will be exhibited on the same program. "Rango" is a serial picture.

PHILOSOPHY FOR WOMAN'S STUDY

Montreal, Que., April 17—Higher education for women, with particular emphasis upon the study of philosophy, was advocated by Yves Pelletier, a local lawyer, speaking at the month ly meeting of the Club Liberal des Femmes de St. Jacques in the Reform Club.

Since the war, with its depletion of the ranks of marriageable men, marriage was no longer the only career to which women looked forward, Mr. Pelletier stated. To meet these new economic and social conditions, he advised women to educate themselves so that they need not be content with inferior positions, but could take their place as the equals of men. In this province, where the "promotion" as he called it in preference to "emancipation" of women lagged behind the study of philosophy would be felt, he of great assistance in placing the sharp edge of reason on the intellect.

Don't Use Arsenicals

In connection with the control of the Cherry Fruit Worm the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture warns against the use of arsenical sprays because of the certainty that a residue will be left on the fruit at picking time. The use of Gammexane oil emulsion or nicotine sulphate and soap sprays have been found very effective as control measures. Complete formulae for the preparation and use of these sprays will be found in Circular 79, which has just been issued, and which is available without charge on application to the Publications Branch of the Department at Ottawa.

Pearl oyster propagation in Hawaiian water has been proved so definitely a success that efforts are being taken to protect valuable beds.

MODERATOR TO PREACH HERE LATE IN MAY

Comes From Original Presbyterian Church of Canada

Speaking in the auditorium of St. Andrew's Church on Wednesday evening after addressing the Men's Club earlier in the evening, Dr. Baird, Moderator of the Presbyterian church in Canada, outlined the growth of the church in this country. The speaker explained that his name "reaned 'bard', and told of the persecution of the Jacobites after their defeat at Culloden Moor.

There was a good sized crowd awaiting Dr. Baird's arrival upstairs, unable to hear him at the dinner. At the front of the church was seated one of the most distinguished gatherings of Presbyterian divines ever to be gathered at one time in St. Andrew's. In the absence of Dr. Seymour, Rev. Dr. McTavish, took charge of the service and, together with Rev. Craig of Deseronto, minister of the Kingston Presbytery, introduced the distinguished visitor from Picton, Nova Scotia, the Rev. Dr. Frank Baird, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

His church, the moderator said, was known as the First Presbyterian Church of Pictou. From that community has come a steady stream of divines of the Presbyterian, over three hundred in number. They have carried the light of learning to every corner of the world.

"The background of the Presbyterian Church in this country lies in Scotland. It was in 1773 that a band of hardy Scotsmen landed at Pictou, "in search of survivors," said the speaker, "of a battle in Scotland in which the 'Dissenters' were badly beaten. "All privileges were taken away from them," he said. "The main fight seemed to be to break up the clans. As soon as four members of one clan gathered together there was trouble. Famous old clan names had to be changed. MacGregor, for instance, became Drummond and so on. The man who founded my family was named MacGregor. His name was taken away from him."

This band of pioneers, said Dr. Baird, early wanted a boat to get away and in 1773 that boat was found and set sail for the new world. As even time steadily onward from that outlawed, there was nothing left for them in Scotland and in September of 1773, after the Pretender's crushing defeat at Culloden Moor, these Jacobites landed at Pictou, Nova Scotia, and founded the 1st Presbyterian Church.

"This intimate loss to Scotland was a decidedly intimate gain to Canada," said Dr. Baird. "From that time steadily onward from that community in Nova Scotia, have gone out people bearing the torch of learning in their hands. Out from that centre a stream of over three hundred ministers has flowed to all parts of the world." Dr. Baird went on to describe the Presbyterian church today in Canada.

Belleville will have another chance to hear this distinguished minister. On May 24th next Deseronto Presbyterian Church will celebrate its Jubilee and Dr. Baird will be the special speaker at one of the services. For the other service he will preach at St. Andrew's here.

A regular service was held last evening. The full choir with Professor Wheatley at the organ and in charge, was present and rendered some beautiful music. Dr. Baird was welcomed in the city by Dr. MacTavish, Dr. Reid of Stirling, and Rev. Craig of Deseronto. In reply to these addresses of welcome Dr. Baird stated that he had travelled thousands of miles throughout the country but had never appreciated more a welcome he had received in any city than in Belleville.

DAILY MEDICAL SERVICE

FACING MENTAL DERANGEMENT

All persons who discover or suspect mental diseases, owe it to the community to take prompt steps to have the patient examined and treated.

The insane are nowadays recognized fairly generally and placed in hospitals where they will not injure others or themselves and where they can receive treatment which may be helpful toward improvement or recovery. Mental deficiency, however, is regarded by many as perfectly harmless.

Sometimes even teachers and physicians, who have years long experience in dealing with children, feel ashamed—which, of course, they should not feel—that a child in their charge is a defective and sometimes, they continue to hide the unfortunate patient so that the fact may not be discovered.

Every single case of feeble-minded-ness should be recognized, treated and, better yet, placed in an institution.

One can never tell what a person with defective brain cells and consequently defective reasoning powers, may do. Often, indeed, these defective individuals are very suggestible and become the tools of more enlightened criminals.

Education of the feeble-minded in special classes in public and private schools is a worthy aim. Yet, one must not lose sight of the fact that a feeble-minded person, whether he be educated sufficiently to be self-supporting or not, remains a potentially dangerous member of any community unless he or she is closely supervised.

When segregated with others the feeble-minded boys and girls feel "at home." They are among others of their kind and they don't notice their difference from the normal average. Free from being teased and bullied, safeguarded from danger and temptation, understood by sympathetic teachers and guardians, the poor unfortunate leads as happy and useful an existence as is possible with his handicap.

I have mentioned psychopathic cases until the last because, in a way, these are in a class by themselves. That these individuals are born that way can be little doubted, and they never seem to overcome their difficulties, even if they try, is another undisputed fact. Yet, psychopaths may possess superior intellectual ability and usually, if the environment is simple or suits them, they make a success out of treading.

Therefore some of these cases undoubtedly are safe enough outside an institution while others, who have displayed criminal or vicious traits, should be housed in proper hospitals especially created for them to protect the community as well as themselves.

Considerable scientific research is necessary on all types of mental troubles, especially on the psychopathic states. But what no one must do is flinch from the unpleasant duty of calling a spade a spade when it comes to derangements of the mind.

PROFICIENT ARCHERS

Toronto, Ont., April 17— Toronto girls are becoming decidedly proficient with the bow and arrow. A six-team feminine business league under the York Archery Club shoots every Monday evening at the Victoria Recreation Centre, and high scores are often registered. Four women are getting their eye in ready for the National Tournament, which will be held in Canadaigua, New York, next August. The archers will move to an outdoor range soon.

FIRESTONE, pioneers of balloon tires announces a new tire which surpasses in strength, in safety and in wear-resisting qualities, any tire that has ever been built. In addition to the famous Firestone Gum-Dipped cord construction which increases tire life by 25%-40%, and the scientifically designed Firestone non-skid tread, this new tire incorporates two added features—

Balanced Construction—which eliminates "tramp" or "shimmy" and is the only way of holding tires on the road at high speeds.

The Double-cord Breaker—which increases adhesion between the tire body and tread by 69%. It insures that absolutely no road shocks can reach the body of the tire and cause a blowout, and, no matter what the speed or the usage, the tread simply cannot be torn off—The tire is safe at any speed!

No other tire has these advantages!

1 Gum-Dipped for Extra Strength
2 Double-cord Breaker for Security
3 Non-skid Tread for Safety

Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have won and held all official records for milage and endurance. You cannot afford to do without the extra strength and safety that only Firestone can give you. See your nearest Firestone Dealer today—he serves you better and saves you money.

EIGHTY LAUGHS FOR 50 CENTS ROTARY MINSTRELS

A Happy Evening for Patrons—Lifetime of Happiness for Crippled Kiddies

Not for a long time has Belleville been favored with a minstrel show, foreign or domestic, and there is a real live yearning for one among folk who always loved the minstrel type of entertainment and get bored with the prevailing type of entertainment. The Rotary Club to the rescue.

Rotary Minstrels, 1931, model, is in process of development and will be produced in the Collegiate Auditorium Monday and Tuesday, April 27 and 28.

For the benefit of the crippled children, of course, a happy evening for you and a happy lifetime for some of them.

Rotary All-Star Minstrels of 1931 promises to be the greatest that ever was, and then some. Those who have heard the great men's chorus of fifty voices, singing in harmony, tenors, bass, etc., taking their respective parts, say that this is a knockout, nothing like it has ever been heard in Belleville before. That is a real tip, not a mere publicity punch.

All the best singers of Belleville and district "are gladly, joyously giving their services to make this the greatest musical event which ever happened in this district.

Then there is the olio with diversified features and decided surprises, and an all-together bang-up entertainment which no one should miss.

Old men and women will drop ten years from their lives listening to the Rotary merrymakers and young folks will go back to teething rings as the laughs roll the years back.

The cast is a triumphant culmination of Paul Lalonde past training and Reg. Hinchey's present training and directing.

Make no mistake, Rotary Minstrels 1931, is going to make history.

And the biggest surprise of all is the fact that the Rotarians are producing a two dollar show which they will present for one price only, fifty cents, anywhere in the house. Remember the dates, April 27 and 28, Collegiate Auditorium.

WOMEN PAINTERS HAVE EXHIBITION

Edmonton, Alta., April 17—There is nothing noticeably "feminine" either in subject or treatment to distinguish the exhibition of paintings by Canadian artists now on exhibition at the Edmonton Museum of Art Galleries, says a local art writer. If the canvasses were unsigned the observer would have no reason to believe that these were all the works of women painters. They display the same qualities, virtues and faults as Canada's men artists.

With the exception of three pictures, everything in the collection inclines strongly toward the modern conception of painting. Both landscape, which predominates in the exhibition, and portraiture, shows the broadness of treatment and love of color which distinguishes the newer Canadian school. Seven of the artists represented by the 29 canvases exhibited have the letters A.R.C.A. after their names. Several of the pictures are lent by the National Gallery of Canada and one by the Art Gallery of Toronto. There are only five portraits in the collection, two studies of flowers, one painting of cats and the remainder distinctively Canadian landscapes. Twenty artists are included in the collection and while one might regret the absence of Dorothy Stephens and one or two others, it is both representative and interesting.

The artists whose works are represented in this collection are: Estelle Coomb, Kathleen Daly, Clara S. Hagarty, Prudence Heward, Estelle M. Kerr, Mabel Lockerby, Marion Long, A.R.C.A., Isabel H. May, A.R.C.A., Florence H. McGillivray, A.R.C.A., Yvonne McKague, Kathleen Morris, A.R.C.A., Jean Munro, Lilias M. Newton, A.R.C.A., Peggi Nichol, Elizabeth S. Nutt, A.R.C.A., Sarah M. Robertson, Annie D. Savage, Regina Selden, Ethel Seath and Mary E. Wrinch, A.R.C.A.

TORONTO AGAIN BEAT SKEETERS

Montreal Trounce Baltimore in Second Game

TORONTO 60

Jersey City, Apr. 17.—Toronto Leafs again had nine runs yesterday when their afternoon's work was over and they had another ball game, the Jersey City Skeeters who displayed little sting, being able to get only two scores off Arthur Mills, who was pitching his first game for Steve O'Neill.

Mills went the nine-inning route and would have suppressed the residents with only one tally had Morehart done his part in a possible double play in the seventh. But Ray then made a poor throw with a chance to erase Morrow at first and Bob got a credit for a cheap run batted in.

Before this tally was recorded the Leafs were leading. Jim Sherlin having ruined the ball game in the preceding period by making a home run with two men on.

Joe Rabbitt got a Ruthian blow in the eighth with two of his pals waiting to score. Seven of the Toronto markers came from homers, the local fences having been pulled in and it is evident that this ball orchard is no longer a pitcher's paradise.

McHenry Injured

Rabbitt horned into the fray because Arthur McHenry was hurt when he scored in the second inning on Sherlin's fly to centre. Mac had qualified as a base runner through an error by Pettinger and had been promoted to third on a Ruble single past Clancy. Sherlin lifted a short fly to centre and McHenry scored when Morrow dropped Young's good throw.

Skeeter and Leaf bunched each other on the play with Mac getting the worst of it and having to quit. Yesterday he rammed the centre field fence trying to inhale a fly, so this season has been a large one for him so far in the matter of paging dancer.

Rabbitt, once in the game, got three hits, stole a base and caught four fly balls. If anybody ever looked up his record it would be found that he has ruined as many ball games for Jersey City as Ell Henderson was from Toronto, and that's a lot.

Baltimore, Apr. 17.—Montreal defeated the Baltimore Orioles in the second game of the opening series by the score of 5 to 1. Gautreau's home run in the seventh inning netted the Royals three runs and broke up a tight pitching duel between Pomorski and Richmond.

Newark, Apr. 17. — The Rochester Red Wings shut out the Newark Bears 2-0, here yesterday behind the splendid pitching of Herman Bell. The Bruins were held to four scattered hits.

Al Harvin, husky right hander, worked all but the ninth inning for the Bears, and allowed five hits; two of them came in the fourth inning along with a pass to produce a run.

An error by Bobbie Sievens at short let the other two in.

Reading, Apr. 17.—Buffalo defeated Reading for the second straight time yesterday, 9 to 4. The Bisons pounded two Reading hurlers for 12 hits, knocking Ken Jones off the hill in the first during a five-run barrage.

PAINTING DONOR IS VERY MODEST

Gives Many Valuable Work to Art Gallery

Manchester, Eng., Apr. 17 (By The Canadian Press) — A. E. Anderson is the name of a modest benefactor of this city in the way of giving valuable works of art to, indeed indeed that until The Manchester Guardian made special mention of him in anticipation of the coming exhibition of paintings in the Whitworth Gallery here comparatively few citizens had ever heard of him. The Guardian says:

"Nothing has ever been made public about this modest benefactor of Manchester. It is odds that if you offered to confer the freedom of the city on him he would decline because of the public spectacle which would be entailed. He has never been in Manchester, when Whitworth Gallery he first learned of through a casual newspaper paragraph nor has he any intention of coming here. When the doors of his wonderful gifts is opened, there will be no photograph of the donor. Mr. Anderson has never been photographed except once as a member of the crowd on a football match. Watching football matches, giving away pictures, and going to flower shows are his hobbies.

"This giver to Manchester of hundreds of works of art, worth many thousands of pounds, lives in a tiny cottage in Surrey, which gives him roses from the garden he dreads. His last gift to the Whitworth Gallery was made in 1926. It was John Varley's drawing of Harlech Castle, whose picture was given to the nation year; then for two years the gifts were in 1910 there came the pictures by David Cox, and from that year up to date, even including the years of the war, there has never been a year in which pictures have not come from Mr. Anderson. In recent years they have tended to increase; the beneficences have been princely in taste and value.

HIGH PRICED LETTERS

London, Apr. 17 (By The Canadian Press) — Some remarkable prices were paid for Thackeray letters at Sotheby's, all of them being carried off by United States buyers. One four-page letter in which Thackeray paid a generous tribute to Dickens was sold for $900. A small water color portrait of Thackeray, hitherto unknown, and painted by Pere Crone, A. R. A., the novelist's secretary, went for $145. Rare books showed a revival in prices. A first edition of R. S. Surtees' "Jorrocks's Jaunts and Jollities," with Alken's colored plates, realized $1,125. A Kelmscott "Chaucer" $925, and a first edition of Keats' "Endymion" $700. A rare item in the sale room was a copy of the Cuming Press edition of "Gulliver's Travels." This was one of only 40 copies printed on vellum, and realized $1,000.

Raspberry Notes

The Raspberry and Its Control in Canada, Bulletin No. 114, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, summarizes practical control measures for fruitgrowers as follows:

(1) Use no bees but clean, healthy, certified stock. This is the first essential in successful growing of raspberries. Government certified stock is now available. Demand such stock from your nurseryman. For further information concerning certified stock, inquire of the Dominion Entomologist, Dominion Horticulturist, or Provincial Entomologist, Ottawa, Ontario.

(2) Practice clean cultivation.

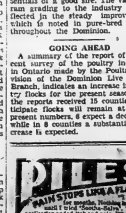
(3) Practice rotation of crops. After destroying an old raspberry plantation do not replant it to berries for at least three or four years. Grow some such crops as corn, potatoes, cereals, legumes, etc.

(4) Destroy wild raspberries or blackberries in the vicinity of the cultivated varieties.

(5) Remove fruiting canes as soon after harvest as possible. At the same time dig and destroy all badly diseased plants.

(6) Systematically remove from the plantation and burn all reputed plants or prunings.

Pure Maple Products



One effect already noticeable in connection with the 1931 maple products corp is marked improvement in the purity and quality of the syrup and sugar coming onto the market. This is attributed to the provisions of the new Maple Syrup Industry Act, and Regulations which came into effect March 1. Under its provisions commercial manufacturers and packing plants selling their product outside the province in which the plant is located require to be licensed, and all other commercial plants require to be registered. In the case of private owners of sugar bush or orchard a license is required only in such cases as where the product of the sugar bush is sold outside the province in which it is located, and for this license there is no fee charged.

Helps Sheep Breeders

One of the outstanding advantages of Ram Grading in connection with Federal assistance to sheep breeding through the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, is the fact that individual farmers, clubs or associations can now either buy by mail or order, by individual selection at the breeders farm, or in the sale ring with greater assurance that the grand animal possesses most of the essentials of a good sire. The value of ram grading to the industry is reflected in the steady improvement which is noted in pure-bred flocks throughout the Dominion.

GOING AHEAD

A summary of the report of a recent survey of the poultry industry in Ontario made by the Poultry Division of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, indicates an increase in poultry flocks for the present season. Of the reports received 15 counties attributed flocks will remain at their present numbers, 6 expect a decrease, while in 8 counties a substantial increase is expected.

POSTPONE THE OPENING OF WELLAND CANAL

Ottawa, Ont., April 16—Because the government estimates do not contain enough money to complete the Welland ship canal this year, it is almost certain the official opening ceremonies will not be held this summer as scheduled.

Though a lock of the structure has been completed and is working, considerable dredging remains to be done at the Lake Erie end of the canal before it may be used to full capacity.

When completed the canal will have cost Canada between a hundred and a hundred and twenty-five million dollars.

KIWANIS PRESENT CABINET SILVER

Picton Bank Manager Transferred to Guelph

Picton, April 17 By Mail— The Kiwanis Club meeting on Tuesday evening, tendered by the presentation of a cabinet of silver to Mr. James MacDonald, a past president who is leaving the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia to take charge of the branch in the city of Guelph. On this occasion the Kiwanis Club was joined by the business men of the town and the many speakers, all expressed regret at losing such an esteemed citizen.

On Sunday, at the United Church, Sunday School, Mr. MacDonald was presented with a silver basket filled with flowers by Mr. S. A. The Superintendent. James Porte, made the presentation and Rev. P. M. Wootton, the pastor, also spoke general regret at losing a capable treasurer and ...alued S. S. worker was heard on all sides. Mr. MacDonald suitably expressed his appreciation of the kindness of his fellow S. S. workers.

Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald leave this week for their new home in Guelph.

The sytrup season is over once again in Prince Edward County, though a few hopefuls are waiting for another flow of sap. The season has been rather short. Syrup sells at $2 per gallon.

Mr. Bert Burns of Rochester is visiting in town this week.

Mrs. S. V. Hamly and Miss Rosemary Hamly have returned after visiting relatives in Toronto.

Mrs. E. P. Stanton is recovering nicely from her recent accident. She suffered an injury to her shoulder in a fall.

Miss C. Cook has returned home after holidaying in Toronto.

Mrs. A. L. Carroll of Toronto Public Library staff, is a guest of Miss Agnes Keane.

Miss Noreen Myers is visiting friends at Cornwall and other points east.

Mrs. Mizon Welch and Lois are visiting Mr. and Mrs Ernest Holt at Oshawa.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Blakely are returning to town shortly from Florida. Their nephew, Roger Blakely, of Cherry Valley, is motoring down to meet them. A short time ago, Mrs. Blakely was struck by a car in Florida and shaken up, but has recovered completely.

KING TAKES PART IN PALM SUNDAY CELEBRATIONS FOR LAST TIME

ALFONSO TAKES PART IN PALM SUNDAY CELEBRATIONS FOR LAST TIME

For the first time in history the Palm Sunday ceremony in the Royal Palace at Madrid, Spain, was photographed this year, and it might also be the last time a King of the Bourbons ever participates in such a ceremony. The picture shows the King, King Alfonso, and behind him the still popular Queen, with the palms, leading the procession which wends its way round the corridors of the palace to the church.

Find Music Offers Most to the Blind

New York, April 17—Music as an art as well as a profession has given the blind the widest opportunities for self-expression and livelihood, and should be accorded first place among the studies of the sightless child, according to the opinions of French and Austrian educational experts who addressed the first business session of the World Conference on Work for the Blind in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

M. Desaules Lelievre of Bordeaux, director of the French National Federation of Societies for the Assistance to Deaf Mutes and the Blind, outlined the trades in which the blind might find work best suited to their needs and tastes, including basket-weaving, book-binding, piano tuning and telephone switchboard operation.

"But we must admit that these trades, in which a few years ago a man could earn a good living, now barely provide him bread; and often only dry bread," M. Lelievre said.

"To the present time, music has given the blind one of the most interesting openings. It is an art as well as a profession, in which he finds a great satisfaction, if he has talent, and a marvelous way to express his thoughts. He takes pride in becoming a player, sometimes the artist courted and applauded by the public. Therefore, music should take first place among the studies of the blind child. As soon as he comes to the school he should be given daily, a half-hour piano lesson and a half-hour of singing exercise."

Are Blind Teachers for the Blind

M. Lelievre outlined a course of musical instruction for the blind child, and recommended that this teaching be given as much as possible by blind music masters who, having conquered the difficulties inherent in their infirmity would better be able to help their pupils overcome their handicaps. The collaboration of a seeing instructor, he said, was necessary also.

To complete the musical training of the blind child, M. Lelievre said, it was indispensable for him to hear the best type of music and to go to concerts and to the theatre. Talented children, he said, might become teachers, while those less gifted become choristers, organists in small towns, or mechanics. M. Lelievre, however, saw the opportunities for professional musicians becoming limited.

"Even the music of the piano, violin or organ," he said, "is threatened by the success of silent and talking films, which make the position of the blind musician insecure. In some countries the talking films have caused serious unemployment for musicians."

Discussing the psychologist problems of the blind infant, Siegfried Altmann, director of the Lunzedsche Blinden-Institut, Vienna, said eyed made in making use of the senses of touch and hearing.

"It is known that about the middle of the second year," he said, "the child becomes extraordinarily responsive to musical impressions. These sensations should be supplied to the blind child often and in different ways.

"For the first time the acoustic field here can give the blind child an occasion to manipulate materials productively, to is speak, by rhythmic hits to produce order with any kind of toy. Noise-making is a play greatly favored by the young child of 15 months; for the blind child it is, perhaps, absolutely necessary. Any play material which achieves this end is desirable."

M. Tilmann stressed the physical development of the blind child as the greatest asset to his mental growth. Special homes for blind children, he said, should be rejected because "the influence of the home environment yields values which cannot be replaced in any other way."

Persons born blind do not miss sight as much as those who become blind after a childhood in which they could see, according to Haldan Karlerud, head of the Norwegian Association for the Blind.

Effect of Blindness on Other Senses

"Previously, it was generally believed, and is still believed by the public," Herr Karlerud said, "that nature has endowed those born blind with more acute senses of hearing and feeling than other people. It is an incredible error to believe the blind to learn to use the senses they possess better than do other people. In fact they can never attain the absolute sense in so far as possible.

Relatives and guardians of the blind, he thought, were often exces- ... to let them go in ... [illegible] ... they do not realize that the blind is handicapped, and too anxious attempts will exert more than ordinary strain, and it seldom happens that a blind person is injured by being run over."

Miller's Worm Powders not only make the infantile system uncongenial for worms, but by their action on the stomach, liver and bowels, they correct such troubles as lack of appetite biliousness and other internal disorders that the worms create. Children thrive upon them, and no matter what condition their worms interest stomachs may be in, they will show improvement. As soon as the treatment begins.

PIONEER CHURCH IS REMEMBERED

TORONTO, Ont., April 17.— (By the Canadian Press)—One of the pioneer churches in "Muddy York" is commemorated by a bronze tablet at one of the towers of the towering temples of finance in modern Toronto.

The church, a structure of primitive type stood at the west corner of King and Jordan streets on land now forming part of the site of the steel and stone building of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The tablet is on the wall of the new building on Jordan street, just south of King.

Designed by W. W. Baldwin, it states: "The first Methodist Church in Toronto was built upon this site in A.D. 1818." The memorial is emblished with a charming bas-relief showing a small low log building set in a grove of fir trees.

DAILY MEDICAL SERVICE

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Leukemia is a condition which has to do with an increase of the white corpuscles of the blood. In normal blood the red corpuscles are far more numerous than the white, the proportion being about one white cell to four thousand red cells. In leukemia, however, the white corpuscles may have increased to such a degree that the proposition between reds and whites are one to ten, one to five, or even as high as one to one.

Leukemia is a chronic condition and extremely grave. It may, however, run on for three or more years. The diagnosis, in the last analysis, rests upon the microscopic examination of the blood and the proportionate increase of the white cells. In infections of various kinds the white cells always increase in numbers, this being nature's way of combatting poisons in the blood stream. In this disease, however, the increase is greater than in ordinary trouble and it is permanent.

The symptoms of leukemia come on gradually and insidiously as a rule. Usually there is shortness of breath, an enlarged abdomen, perhaps enlarged glands in the neck, and palpitation. Any of these may make the patient seek medical advice. On the first thing that may attract attention to the extreme pallor of the skin. On account of the increase in numbers of the white cells, there is a diminution, relatively speaking, of the red cells, hence a sort of anemia. The enlargement of the abdomen is due to the enlargement of the spleen which is really the seat of the trouble, the spleen, normally, being about five inches long and situated on the left side under the ribs.

Sometimes, on the other hand, the patient does not look anaemic. Often a beginning symptom is bleeding from the nose or stomach and intestinal upsets. Occasionally the onset is sudden and fatal, perhaps from too much hemorrhage.

Seldom is there any cure for leukemia, which they call, respectively, the spleno- medullary

BUST FOUND MAY BE INDIAN RELIC

Stone Figure Unearthed in Montreal Bears Evidence of Indian Work

MONTREAL, April 16.—(By the Canadian Press) — What may well prove to be one of the most remarkable discoveries of buried Indian relics on the North American continent was made recently by Douglas Barnard, grandson of Lieut. R. Barnes of the Montreal police force, who uncovered a stone bust buried underneath four feet of virgin soil in Notre Dame de Grace, a suburb of Montreal.

This discovery has already been hailed as a most remarkable one by McGill museum authorities and the carving has been placed on exhibition at the museum. The carved stone figure is actually somewhat longer than the conventional bust. It weighs some 30 pounds and has an over-all length of 18 inches.

The carving has been made from a single piece of stone. The head is approximately natural size with eyes carved out roughly, nose almost perfect and ears carved without ornament.

The lower part of the figure shows the hands resting above the hips with fingers nearly meeting across the abdomen.

The ground from which the strange object was taken is close to the last remaining forest trees in Notre Dame de Grace on King Edward avenue.

"An extremely interesting discovery and one which bears strong evidence of Indian work," R. Lionel Judah, curator of McGill museum, stated in commenting upon the find.

While not wishing definitely to commit himself on whether the stone figure was actually of Indian origin before further investigation, Mr. Judah made a number of comments which indicated that the find may well throw North American Indian historians and particularly museum officials into a flurry of excitement.

The discovery has made the feet below the surface of the ground would indicate that the carving dates back long before the arrival of Jacques Cartier in Canada, he said.

In fact it is quite readily admitted that many centuries may be about one of whom there is nothing now known, may have lived in the area in which the discovery was made.

Only one piece of stone carving at all similar to this has been in the museum at McGill University. The example of Indian stone carving at the university is made from Utica shale and was obtained from the old Montreal Natural History Society. Little further is known about it.

North American Indians have not been great stone carvers as evidenced by the few stone relics existing in museums of this continent. However, there is one tribe of Indians on the Pacific coast known as the Haida Indians who have left a considerable number of stone utensils and decorative objects.

The fact leads McGill museum officials to believe that the stone figure discovered in Notre Dame de Grace came originally from the Pacific coast.

CENSUS TAKING FROM AEROPLANE

Winnipeg, Man., April 17.—(By the Canadian Press)—Taking a census of animals in the big open spaces by aerial photography is a new thing and, according to an interview with Flight-Lieut. J. C. Uhlman by The Winnipeg Evening Tribune, was successfully demonstrated recently at Woods' national buffalo park by an expedition of which Flight-Lieut. Uhlman was in charge. Two aeroplanes carried the party, one being piloted by Lieut. Uhlman and the other by Sergt. W. F. Tourgis.

The Tribune says: "The party spent a month in the park, which is situated at the junction of the boundaries of Alberta, Saskatchewan and North-West Territories. Slightly less than 1,500 buffalo were photographed. No attempt was made to cover the whole area, as the expedition was simply an experiment to determine if the method was satisfactory. It was quite impossible, he said, to take a census in any other way. Effectively, in determining the number of animals in this and other parks, the numbers were arrived at by estimating the percentage of increase in the herds since they were originally placed in the parks.

"Describing the methods used, Flight-Lieut. Uhlman said that in each plane a park ranger accompanied the pilot and the photographer. In addition to the photographs, the ranger counted as many animals as was possible with the naked eye. In this way, a sort of double check was made and the two results could be compared.

"Before any photography was done at all, a reconnaissance was made by air to determine the areas in which the buffalo were most numerous. Park rangers were greatly impressed with the speed with which those reconnoitres were made, each one trip was done in four hours, which formerly took the rangers many weeks' hard travelling by dog team. Frequently, the animals were seen in clumps of trees, where it was impossible either by photograph or count them accurately. In such cases, the pilot would swoop down over them at such a low altitude as to drive them out into the open where they could be photographed. It is expected that a complete survey may be made of the park next winter."

A Household Medicine.—Tiny that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household medicine and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is an indispensible medicine. So, keep it at hand as the call for it may come most unexpectedly.

ALFONSO POSES FOR CAMERA SHORTLY BEFORE ABDICATION

NATURAL FEEDING

There is, beyond question, one food which is best for the baby, and that is the natural food — breast milk. It would appear that this fact is not generally known if we are to judge by the number of babies who, upon the slightest excuse, or for no excuse at all, are placed on artificial feedings of one kind or another.

The natural food is best. It is suitable for the baby because it is made for him. It is clean because there is no chance for it to become contaminated by handling. It is fresh and it is also sterile, that is, there are no germs, and consequently, no disease germs in it. For all these reasons, it is superior to artificial feeding.

The breast-fed baby is more likely to avoid disease, to have strong bones and teeth, to have firmer muscles. The breast-fed baby is, in general, a healthier and more sturdy baby than is the baby who is artificially-fed.

Many infants have been bought up successfully on artificial feedings, but this does not alter the fact that, comparing the artificially-fed baby with the naturally-fed baby, those who have been deprived of their natural food do not thrive as well.

Another advantage of natural feeding is that it makes for the development of the baby's jaws through the act of nursing.

Natural feeding is much more simple and takes far less time than bottle feeding. The proper preparation of artificial feeding requires considerable attention and takes time.

No mother should ever deprive her child of his natural food just because she thinks she cannot nurse the baby, or because some one has told her how well babies do on some artificial food.

The decision to wean the baby is a very serious one to make, and it should not be made except for some good and sufficient reason. The mother should talk the matter over with her doctor and leave the decision to him, because it is, after all, a medical problem. It is not right to wean the baby and then ask the doctor to prescribe artificial feedings. The doctor should be consulted before weaning, not after.

The quality and quantity of the breast-milk can be improved by attention to health. Regular feeding by the clock are desirable for both the mother and the child.

Every child should be breast-fed, and no mother should give up breast-feeding unless she is instructed to do so by her doctor.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

WHEAT QUOTA IS ENGLISH QUESTION

LONDON, April 16.—(By the Canadian Press).—In a discussion at the Farmers' Club here upon the proposed establishment of a wheat quota, Sir Henry Page Croft, M.P., said he thought all parties were now beginning to realize that either the State must intervene or the greatest of English industries would perish. Recently he had been offered Russian barley at 11s a quarter about 23 cents a bushel) and Russian wheat had been offered at an equally grotesque price.

W. Hasler (Dunmow, Essex), said objection had been raised that the quota would be difficult to manage and that administrative questions would be serious. The quota had been adopted, however, in practically every country on the Continent. France had a compulsory proportion of native wheat of 90 per cent. and an import duty of 38s a quarter. Other figures were: Germany 75 per cent. and 53s. 3d. Sweden 65 per cent. and 8s 10d.; Holland 25 per cent. and no duty; Czecho-Slovakia 75 per cent. and 5s. 6d. Italy was now considering a quota with a duty of 28s 6d.

During further discussion, it was suggested that the milling and baking trade should be rationalized in order to secure from this source the fund necessary to put into the pockets of the British farmer the amount needed to make wheat growing an economic success.

VILLAGE SMITHY NOT FORGOTTEN

LONDON, April 16.—(By The Canadian Press)—For every village smithy—or town smithy for that matter—that is to be found in England at the present day, there are probably a hundred gasoline filling stations. All the more interesting, therefore is the annual horse-shoeing competition which has just taken place in that very much urbanized area of London called Camberwell. It is not surprising that the entries were the lowest for several years. Nevertheless the judging was undertaken by a member of the "Worshipful Company of Farriers." This company ranks 55th amongst the Livery Companies of London. It has a membership of 107, and its corporate income is the very modest one of $1,500.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION GATHER AT REDNERSVILLE

Donald Spencer Named President for Coming Year

The 43rd Annual S.S. Convention met at Rednersville Church, April 6th afternoon and evening. The Devotion service was opened by Rev. Mr. Ross by singing hymns 270 and 294. The address of welcome was given by Mr. A. E. Phillips responded to by Mr. Donald Spencer. The President's address by Mrs. Alfred Hillman was as follows: "There are so many people who go through life and never see the beauty of things as they go along. We should always look on the bright side. There is only one seed time, and it is the same with a child. We must start to sow the seed of God in infancy, the parents must do the sowing the same as a farmer sows his field. If parents would realize their privilege and responsibility. When the harvest is ripe it must be gathered in. The fields may be empty but the barns are full. Parents may have a time to regret the opportunity that is lost."

Mrs. Clifford Barber favoured with a beautiful solo, "The City Foursquare".

An address, "Missions in the Sunday School" was prepared by Mrs. H. Adams and owing to her absence Mrs. Roy Giles gave the paper. "Why not teach missions to our children in their youth and teach it in the Sunday School. What greater honour could God give a Sunday School or home, than to have one of her pupils to go as a missionary?"

The Secretary wished to thank all Sunday School Superintendents who kindly filled in their reports and promptly returned them to her. Of twelve Sunday Schools eleven were returned. This gives the Department Superintendent opportunity to give good reports.

Solo by Rev. Mr. Ross, "His Love Can Never Fail" was much enjoyed.

Christian Influence of the Child in the Home concerning attendance at Sunday School, address by L. R. Brickman—Child—At what age should a child be taught, you can impress a child in the very best by telling them Bible Stories and when their minds are plastic these lessons never leave them. Take for example! Moses, how his mother trained and with lasting impressions it had upon him, when he went to the home of Pharaoh which he could have enjoyed all the luxuries that wealth could provide, he would not stray from his mother's teaching and his mother's God.

"What is the Sunday School? It is the place where we meet Sabbath after Sabbath to study the Word of God. How can we grow spiritually if we do not study? Can our bodies keep strong without food? Just so with our spiritual life, we must be fed by the Word of God, and if we do not exercise our arms and limbs how long would it be before we would become helpless. Just so with our Christianity. If we expect to grow stronger, we must be active in service to God and to our fellowmen.

"How can a child be influenced to attend Sunday School? By mother and father taking them to Sunday School. Home conditions have a wonderful influence over the child. How do we expect our children to be Christians. If we are not leading the way?

"How many mothers take time to sit down with the child and explain the Sunday School Lesson which will mean so much in the moulding of the character? Teach them to feel they have a part to fill in the Sunday School, make the Sunday School attractive. Sing songs that appeal to the child. Don't expect a child to think as deeply as an adult. Let the child a Sunday School teacher that has the welfare of every child at heart. The teacher must be deeply concerned about the character building of the youth. How the child enjoys hearing the story of the world, when he slew the lion and swung the sling that made the giant bite the dust.

"When the boy gets to be a big boy almost a man, if dealt with skillfully, will take a lively interest in the journeys and deeds of the words of Bible men.

If minister and brothers and (why not fathers), were wise with ordinary wisdom the Bible might be made so fascinating. It is a book of history, graphic and brilliant and if rightly taught, has captivating power in it. Why are not parents and pastors wise? When the boy is a man and has a home and children of his own, the cares of life push him, and the home of his childhood a memory, he will find strength in the Bible."

When the fronts are in his hair and dimness in his eyes he will turn to the gracious volume of comfort."

The O.R.E.C. representative Rev. E. O. Seymour conducted the Round Table Conference which was very interesting. The Rednersville ladies served a delicious lunch in the church; at 6:30 the committees met. Evening Session

Reports of committees, music by the Orchestra. Introduction and installation of officers by Rev. E. O. Seymour.

Following the installation a letter of congratulations were read by Rev. Mr. Ross to our new president sent by our Treasurer Mr. J. E. Glenn, who has been treasurer of the association since it started forty-three years ago. A beautiful duet by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brenaugh, was given.

Address, Rev. E. O. Seymour.

The challenge of the church to the youth of our land. In another generation we may become a great nation of the world. Today many are the problems that confront the Sunday schools in dealing with young life. He paid a high tribute to Scotland who honours her view of science and religion with beautiful monuments. He called a nation great where there was a great religious spirit and the greatness of the nation depended upon the religion of Jesus Christ. Preachers and officers have a great responsibility in building that nation. We must practise and live that Christian religion from day to day. We dont need to apologize about our Sunday School churches, hospitals, orphanages and Old People's Homes. We have them because we have Christianity.

The church stands for the best. A Sunday School and a church are mighty institutions in a community. If there is any place in all the world where there should be any social life it is in a church. We must keep all four walls clean for the purpose of God. This closed with an excellent and inspiring address.

A MARKET FOR B. W. I. SUGAR

Yellow Crystallised Sugar Sold to England

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, B.W.I., April 17—Trinidad needs to tell the world about her sugar, declares Lord Invernia, a prominent sugar broker of London, who says there is a good market for sugar in England if Trinidad should advertise if she would be ready to take the lion on the end of a string with it. Trinidad, he says, produces economically a high grade of sugar, which is finding favor on the market, and when prices rise she will be in a favorable position to recoup herself for the present less times.

"West Indian sugar is mostly sold in the Mother Country in the form of yellow crystallized and it is gratifying to know that of all the West Indies it is Trinidad that ships the best kind," said the London broker in an interview with The Trinidad Guardian. "The consuming public are showing an ever-growing appreciation of its merits and although after the war there was a tendency to use white granulated in preference to anything else, there is now a revival of the vogue for yellows and some of the foremost doctors have come forward and definitely stated it contains vitamins and properties which are not to be found in other sugars.

"In future the demand ought to expand further and it is essential meanwhile that the quality should be kept up and that the very efficacious propaganda that has been carried on in the United Kingdom should not only be continued but increased.

"A quantity of 'Grey' sugar is sold every year to Canada and in this respect it is just possible that a little more co-operation among sellers and some kind of agreed selling policy among the various West Indian Islands might result in better prices being secured, but the question is a delicate one because Canadian refiners are on the alert and if they thought prices were being built up against them, they might adopt retaliatory measures."

Joe E. Brown in 'Going Wild' at the Capitol one Long Laugh

I entered the Capitol Theatre last night after waiting my turn at the wicket, the lobby was literally packed and I received the customary smile of welcome. Ushered to a comfortable seat, I settled down to view the programme, which started with the ever popular sound news. This contained a little golf, a surprising talk on what slave trafficing (which I had no idea still existed to the extent the announcer stated), some wonderful diving feats by a family of four small children and shots of York Cathedral built in 1172, A.D.

Next came our friend, Oswald, the Lucky Rabbit, in an extremely clever and comic cartoon "In Africa."

Whilst I was figuring out how many separate drawings made up this cartoon story, Station R.K.O.R. announced "The Voice of Hollywood" and there was Laura La Plante telling us that Pauline Pollard was going to say a few words.

Following Miss Pollard, the ladies in the audience were treated to creations in dress and then a children's revue completed this interesting radiothon.

An episode of the Leatherpushers pleased me very much inasmuch as the exhibits of a boxing lesson were very realistic and contained an element of instruction. Of course here was the usual romantic angle—pretty girls—smart manager and a sprinkling of good comedy—on the whole an excellent addition to any programme.

Then came the art title "Joe E. Brown in 'Going Wild,'" and without any exaggeration whatsoever this film is a screaming farce from commencement to finish.

The picture opens with Brown and his pal Lane intent on a poker game on a train. If Brown is lucky, the pals will ride—if otherwise, they will get off at the next station.

Brown loses the game and the conductor shoots them off at White Beach where the town has turned out to welcome Robert Storey, aviator. Having similar initials Brown is mistaken for the big flying man, is given a great welcome, especially by Leila Lee, owner of the local inn. After many fiendishly funny situations in which Brown finds himself in his endeavours to keep up the deception and make the people still believe him to be an aviator, a scene was reached which deserves special mention. This was the photographic examination of Brown, held on the hotel roof with diminishing use of an oculist and the examination?—it was too funny for words. Brown, in his endeavours to back out of entering a flying race, did everything to prove that he was medically unfit. However it transpires that he does fly, and how he flies is his own business!

"Going Wild" ends tomorrow, being supplanted on Monday by "This Thing Called Love," starring Constance Bennett.

60 YEARS SINCE ALBERT HALL BUILT

London, Apr. 17 (By Thomas T. Thompson, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent) — It is sixty years since the Royal Albert Hall was erected to the glory of the art of music, and in memory of the Prince Consort, husband of Queen Victoria. The anniversary was celebrated by a concert, the contributors to which were The London Symphony, The New Symphony, and the British Broadcasting Orchestras ,the conductors being Sir Henry Wood, Adrian Boult, and Dr. Malcolm Sargent. Someone suggested that it were time to wash the Albert Hall has been put in late years that a more appropriate celebration would have been to have staged an entertainment comprising a costume ball, a prize fight, a political meeting and a revival conducted by an American female preacher. All the same, the Albert Hall maintains a great musical tradition, with its Sunday concerts and its performances of "The Messiah" and "Elijah". The Hall is ill-suited to music except on the massive scale. The cleverest solo singers despair of conquering the echo, which always haunts the enormous space under the great glass roof.

BLACKBIRDS AND GARBAGE THIEVES

Commerce Directors Also Discuss Paint-up Campaign

What is garbage?

What's to be done with the blackbirds?

Shall there be a campaign "Clean-up and Paint-up?"

One of the directors at the Chamber of Commerce directors' luncheon yesterday pointed out that sometimes something was rued out as not garbage when it is placed out with the garbage pail—a piece of cast off pipe and such like. Could not some discretion be done with the bylaw to make it possible for the garbage collector to overlook such rubbish? Better make a lot look unsightly but what's householder to do? Let it go and be be worth one dollar and a half to hire a carter to do a fifteen cent service by removing them. Result—such rubbish gathers to the disgrace of the City.

One members said that it might be advisable to have the chairman of market and city property take up this question with the council to see if some provision could not be made to remove such rubbish.

The lovely singing birds that used to sing about the door of the house of Belleville have an enemy—the blackbird. What is to be done? Solution asked Mr. Frederick Robertson, one of the directors. The law does not permit the shooting of robins or sirlings in the city and so these birds which have not a friend among men are allowed to occupy the choice places in the trees about the homes and to prey upon other birds' young and eggs. Can anything be done to have action taken to permit destruction of these pests? The question as yet remains unanswered.

Whether there will be an endorsation of the paint-up and clean-up week is yet to be dealt with by the directors at the chamber.

President Illsley reported to the directors the result of the application which waited upon the council meeting last Monday evening in regard to daylight saving. There is a feeling among the members that a vote will probably be taken this year on the provincial voters' list.

DOLE, DISTRIBUTION OF GOLD, SUGGESTED CURES OF DEPRESSION

(Following is the first of a series of articles on the world economic situation as seen by officials, diplomats and observers in Washington.)

Washington, D.C., April 17.—By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.—The world's economic depression as it enters upon the second summer since its serious appearance in the United States, preoccupies Washington to the exclusion of every other question including prohibition. This country having failed to emerge from the slump as quickly as was prophesied business men and politicians are turning to experts in the various departments and asking their opinions. Economists here are divided into two and severely jarring sects but in a general way there are two schools.

The first, which may be called the radicals—in the non-political sense of the word—believes the present depression does not arise entirely from the same circumstances attending similar periods in the past, that it contains a new element and will be the fore-runner of a new type of depression. Its primary cause, this school holds, may be discovered in the mal-distribution or "division" of profits.

The second school is made up of conservative specialists who consider the situation simply a part of the business cycle resulting from such conditions as over-production, over-abundance of gold, the fall in the price of silver, and a combination of other circumstances, political as well as economic.

Remedies are proposed by both, and the value of the plans of either is conceded by the other. All are agreed on the obvious facts; there is over-production, under-consumption, unemployment, and therefore, there is something wrong with the machine which produces, distributes, and consumes goods. The problem is under bed conditions.

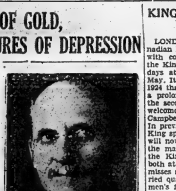
The radicals assert there is some thing fundamentally out of kilter in a system which permits a piling up of stocks in the hands of producers while there is need for these stocks by consumers. Looking about for the deep-lying cause they find the use of machinery and modern methods has greatly increased production over a short period, and at the same time has eliminated the necessity for human labor. Through this phenomenon has been accompanied by an inequitable distribution or division of profit, wealth necessary for human purchasing power. In industry having been disproportionately distributed as between capital and labor. The result has been, it is said, that on the one hand, the market is glutted, prices fall and reduced through unemployment, while profits have been turned back into production further increasing stocks of commodities and which demand was coincidentally growing smaller.

One remedy advocated for a long time by the American Federation of Labor, is shorter hours, and higher wages. Economnists add to these proposals the establishment of unemployment insurance.

While President Hoover reiterated a few days ago his stand for the maintenance of wage standards, and the shorter hours idea has a firm hold in the American mind, unemployment insurance is still frowned upon asknew by the man in the street, shorter hours, and higher wages the aversion of the American to interference by the government in business might be overcome by establishing unemployment insurance itself. This could be accomplished under governmental jurisdiction, one expert points out, inasmuch as the American is accustomed to seeing his government in an arbiter between capital and labor.

Higher economists make several proposals having to do with the causes which have given rise to what is the base of depression. Those also are the concentration of three fifths of the world gold supply in New York and Paris—the rise in the value of gold—is considerably responsible for present conditions, say great economists, but this condition might be made to cover the monetary needs of the world. Those particularly interested in the orient market which has greatly suffered as a result of the decline in the price of silver, demand international action should be taken to valorize silver, perhaps even remonetize silver. Either of these plans would attack the problem by spreading out over the world what represents wealth—"put a jingle in the pocket."

Members of this school suggest reduction by agreement among producers as a means of checking overproduction.



CENSUS MACHINE

London, April 17—A machine has been specially designed and built by a British firm in conjunction with the Registrar General's Department for use in the work of the coming census, April 26. By means of this machine the errors, after the collection of the schedules by the enumerators, will be entirely mechanized. The task of preparing the hundreds of intricate tables required will then be performed merely by running punched cards representing every individual in the country through the machine, which sorts at the rate of 20,000 an hour into 24 different combinations the information given on the census forms counts, and finally prints the results in columns on specially prepared form.

KING AND QUEEN TO VISIT ALDERSHOT

LONDON, April 16.—(By the Canadian Press)—Aldershot has been rife with considerable gratification that the King and Queen will spend four days at the Royal Pavilion during May. It will be the second time since 1924 that their Majesties have made a prolonged visit to Aldershot—and the second time that they will be welcomed by General Sir David Campbell as Commander-in-Chief. In previous visits before the war the King spent long hours in saddle, but will now be content to motor round the military terrain. In these visits the King likes to see the soldiers both at work and at play, and rarely misses a chance of visiting the married quarters, to make sure that the men's families are happy and comfortable.

If their Majesties are there on a Sunday they attend "The Soldier's Church," "All Saints', and half the population of Aldershot will gather in great force as they leave. There will be a Royal Retreat on one evening of their visit, performed by the massed bands of all units, including drum and fife, pipes and bugles.

COL. D. McAMMOND

who will make a special visit to Belleville on Sunday, April 19th. Col. McAmmond is Field Secy. for Canada East Territory. He has spent forty years as an officer of the British Army in Canada. He is a survivor of the Empress of Ireland disaster.

REMEMBERS C.P.R. CONQUERING WEST

Calgary, Alta., April 17—Pioneer resident of western Canada and one of the first white commercial travellers west of the Great Lakes, John Bruce, of this city, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. Still hale and hearty and in reminiscent mood, he mused on the trials and tribulations of his early days.

Born in Fifeshire, Scotland, Mr. Bruce left the Clyde in 1874, arriving in March of the same year at Niagara Falls. From there he moved to Toronto, where he resided for some time. In December, 1880, he trekked to Winnipeg where he became a traveller for a dry goods firm.

About this time the Canadian Pacific railway was laying, with painful progress, a line of steel across the prairies to the Rockies. Mr. Bruce followed the construction as far west as Cochrane, Alta., where he arrived in 1883. From there he went to Battleford, Sask., taking charge of

SUFFRAGE LEADER TAUGHT BY HUBLEY

Montréal, Que., April 17—The well-known leader, Mrs. John Scott, aged 76, was recently interviewed by The Gazette. Asked what was the best think of suffrage and women's rights the aged lady replied:

One day I left the house with my husband and children, and when we got as far as the garden gate he took ed at me and said, 'I have forgotten my cheque-book.' I started to go back to the house for the handkerchief, and it came to me in a flash, why could he not go for it himself, and I said, 'You'll find it in your drawer,' and after looking rather sheepishly at me he went to it himself. Fifty years ago," continued Mrs. Scott, "it would have been unheard-of-thing for a woman to speak in public or to take charge of a public meeting, and the men were very antagonistic about it."

MEMORIAL FIXTURES

Brockville, April 17—New electrical fixtures installed in memory of the late Most Rev. C. P. Anderson at the time of his death Bishop of Chicago and head of the Canadian diocese of the American Episcopal church, are used for the first time recently in the church of St. John the Evangelist, Oxford Mills, to which Bishop Anderson originally belonged.

NATIVES LIKE FINE CLOTHES

Are Non Longer Satisfied With Truck

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 16.—(By the Canadian Press)—Under the head of "Social Service in South Africa" Dr. Reinhold Jones, of Johannesburg, giving an address in Cape Town, spoke of the changing conditions among the natives and stated that the conditions were being made more difficult as a result of the steady flow of rural people to the towns.

One of the marked changes, Dr. Jones said, was that rural people now day demanded payment in cash. Some years ago they did not need cash, but today their children had to be educated and that means that more money was needed for dressing them. They had also grown more ambitious about their homes and wanted more facilities for which they had to pay in cash.—

This factor was also an important cause of the flow of natives to the towns. "During the last five years there has been a complete revolution in the character of the stocks which stores in native areas carry," he said. "Where formerly they stocked what was known as native truck, they now carry stairs and other luxuries. The natives are very particular about the quality of the articles they buy, and crepe-de-chine underwear is often sold in native areas." What happened today was that natives ran in large droves and then went to the towns to earn the money to pay them.

The only way in which the flow of rural people to the towns could be stopped, he said, was to bring about a complete revolution in agrarian life. Even then there would always be some people who would come to the towns. There were many boys in the country who might be quite useless at agriculture but were brilliant at carpentering or similar trades, and they would always seek the towns.

"Social work is not more charity," he said. "Some charity leads nowhere. Social work should mean the building up of a people, and whatever social service you provide it should be definitely aimed in that direction. Our work should be to help these country people to apply themselves to town conditions."

CHARITY WORKER DIES

London, April 17—A wealthy woman who left her West End home 40 years ago to work among the poor in London's Cleveland Row has just died. Miss Harriet Cartwright, a sister of Julia Cartwright, the authoress, joined the Rev. B. Dunny at Wapping in 1891, and for 40 years kept open house to become an honorary priest at St. Peter's Church. Miss Cartwright lived in a flat in a tenement house in Old Gravel-Lane and there after many early difficulties, she eventually won the confidence of the poor. She mixed freely with the dockers and their wives and her flat became an open house for children and necessitous people. Food and clothing formed her gifts, and a generous but an enthusiastic temperance worker, she founded one of the largest Bands of Hope in London.

ALBERTA LIKES STERILIZATION ACT

Edmonton, Alta., Apr. 17 (CP) — While the sterilization act is by no means a cure-all for the province's growing economic and social problem in connection with its mentality afflicted, it has since its proclamation early in 1928, functioned successfully within the narrow confines in which it is operated, Mrs. J. W. Field, only woman member of the Alberta Board of Eugenics, told members of the Local Council of Women. In all 67 cases have come under this legislation. Dealing with procedure, Mrs. Field emphasized that only inmates of the mental institutions of the province are considered by the board, and then only when they are likely to be discharged and liable to have children who would become a charge on the state. If the person in question, any doctor of the institution, parent or guardian, or any member of the board of eugenics submits consent, Mrs. Field stated, no action is taken. Complete case history as far back as is possible to obtain is carefully considered by the board after the doctors from the institution have made recommendations for sterilization.

After each case has been discharged Mrs. Field stated, the social worker of the institution visits the home where the person is to live, and since the act was first invoked each case has been visited every six months. No ill effects, physically, Mrs. Field said, had resulted, and these people had been reinstated happily and with benefit to themselves and the state. Used by many social workers as a result of her experience she cold was very evident and recommended the encouragement of young university women to undertake this work.

Speaking of the economic side of this legislation, Mrs. Field pointed out that eighty cases had been examined of Alberta's three mental hospitals, Oliver, Ponoka and Red Deer, in the past eight years, at a cost of $67,454, and expenditure in addition to buildings alone has reached almost $4,000,000. One of every five children of mentally defective parentage becomes a charge on the state, Mrs. Fields stated, thus the question of sterilization enters largely into this growing state problem. Speaking of this form of legislation in California, Mrs. Field stated that there it is extended to criminals and other offenders against state laws.

Seed Potato Tags

With the near approach of the planting season the Dominion Department of Agriculture again calls attention to this question, and characteristics of OFFICIAL CERTIFIED SEED POTATO TAGS. On the front of each tag is the official Dept. signature of the Federal Plant Inspection Service, the variety, the certificate number and the grower's number, while on the back is printed the official certificate and special instructions. The tags themselves denote the "Irish Cobbler" variety, green-colored tag; the Green Mountain, red and buff manila tags all other varieties. For certified seed potatoes small sized 1 1-2 to ounces only, a special blue-coloured tag is used.

The first counterfeit "greenback" in the United States was one imitating the ten-dollar bill of 1862. It circulated in the same year.

Mr. L. E. Pitcher, Manager, Kuetx Company of Canada, Limited

Mr. Pitcher stated today that the Company's factory at Niagara Falls, Ontario, has been altered to permit the manufacture of kleenex during the times for the Canadian and export trade.

The staff at the factory has been increased 25%. Kleenex sales for 1930 were phenomenal. An advance in 1931 of more than 150% over last year's sales is predicted. If sales volume increases as is anticipated, the Kctex Company probably will build an entirely new Canadian factory.

ONE OPERA NEEDS THREE PRIMA DONNAS

London, Apr. 17 (CP)—"The Carl Rosa season of opera goes from height to height," says a writer in the News-Chronicle who frequently contributes to that paper on local events in music. He refers to the Carl Rosa Opera Company's recent production of "The Twilight of the Gods" as a remarkable success, and says "a quite extraordinary peak of perfection was attained in the performance of 'Don Giovanni,'" which was given subsequently.

With reference to "Don Giovanni" the writer says:

"This opera is awkward to cast, for it requires three prima donnas, but the difficulties were triumphantly overcome, and, frankly, it was difficult to say which of the three — Miss Nellie Pallicer as Donna Elvira, Miss Muriel Baker as Donna Anna, or Miss Audrey Mildmay, the Berlina was the best. Their voices are all delightfully true, they all act well, and Miss Mildmay was deliciously flirtsome. Leyland White made a grand figure of the Don, and sang the serenade with much grace, and Lepori-ello — Ronald Stear — was cleverly and humorously interpreting the part.

"Arthur Hammond conducted, and once again impressed greatly. He sustains his effects without impressing his own personality."

Humor comes only from close contact with actual human life.

MAXIMUM SALARIES IN CITY SCHOOLS SLASHED BY BOARD

Members Endorsed Schedule Planned by Committee

PURCHASE FENCE

Two Trustees John Allin and Victor Graves Opposed Move

In keeping with present times of depression, the maximum salaries that may be reached by public school and collegiate teachers, vice-principals and principal, of primary schools and principal and heads of department of the Collegiate have been lowered. The Board of Education had night endorsed the plan brought in by a special committee of the Board, whereby the present schedule for public school teachers be discontinued and that a new schedule be adopted, with that the maximum for teachers be lowered from $1400 per annum to $1200 per annum; vice-principals from $1800 to $1700 and principals from $2400 to $2300. Furthermore, teachers, not yet having reached the above maximum, be increased $25.00 per year. The increases used to be $50.00 per annum).

In the collegiate, the maximum for P. C. MacLaurin, the principal, has been reduced $300 and instead of a possible maximum of $4000 he now will stop at $3700. Instead of a $3600 at present time is receiving $4100 so he has only to reach $4000 for his maximum. The maximum for all other teachers in the collegiate will be lowered $300. All increases at the collegiate shall be at the rate of $50. per annum instead of $100 per annum as in the past.

Two Oppose Move

The collegiate teachers, according to the new plan, have already reached their maximum. No salaries were cut as all are at the maximum or were unclassified. Any teachers in the collegiate or public schools who have run over the maximum already will not be affected. Their salaries will remain unchanged.

Two trustees went on record as being against the cuts. They were Trustees John Allin and Trustee Victor Graves. The remainder of the Board was in favour and the committee's findings. The special committee had several meetings with deputations from the teachers of both the public schools and the collegiate but little came from them.

Half Day Sessions

In the primary classes at the public schools, it will probably be found necessary to operate on half-day schedules, it was reported to the Board last night. Overcrowding in these junior classes was the reason given.

Nurse Ross reported that last month there were six cases of chickenpox in the public schools and none in cases of whooping cough.

The chair and repair committee recommended the purchase of fence for the public schools. As there is approximately 1170 feet to be bought. The fence, similar to the one at St. Michael's Separate School, will cost $1.05 a foot. The Board endorsed the recommendation and fence will be purchased.

Friday, May 1st will see the annual cadet inspection of the cadets at the collegiate. The Board was asked to attend.

P. C. MacLaurin reported that the largest number that has ever written junior and senior matriculation papers will write this summer.

MAPLE SYRUP PRICE LOWER

DEPUTY VISITS EASTERN STAR

Mrs. Carrie Veal of Madoc Honored by Local Chapter

Belleville Chapter No. 55, O.E.S., was honoured last night by the annual inspection visit of the Deputy Grand Matron, Mrs. Carrie West, of Madoc. She was greeted by a guard completely filled with members from the whole district and the capacity crowd seemed to urge the officers to greater efforts and the result was that district West compilimented the chapter on the quality of the work done and in her remarks to the chapter she had high praise for the manner in which they conclaim whatever. This was certainly very gratifying to the chapter members. The degrees of the order were conferred upon Mrs. Wright Reid and Mrs. Victor Graves, both of Albert street, Belleville.

At the conclusion of the initiation ceremony Sister West was presented with a gift as a memento of her visit to the chapter and it was very suitably acknowledged. She spoke of the done in the matter of drawing the members of the Chapter nearer to anniversary occasions. Bro. Barlow informed them that the date was the twenty-seventh anniversary of the wedding of the Worthy Patron and the Chapter, Bro. Mr. and Mrs. Clement, and congratulated them on the occasion.

After the chapter had been closed the members repaired to the supper room where Sister Billman's refreshment committee and we don't mind saying that they made any kind of a board at the home of any member of this committee. The entertainment was just purchased by the chapter was one for the occasion, everything then was the order of the evening and was indulged in until about two o'clock in the morning, music being furnished by Sister Hibbard. The large crowd present made the task difficult but that only seemed to add to the fun of the evening. Worthy Matron Sister Nayler was very much pleased with the success attending this annual occasion, and we are sure those who attended will have pleasant memories of the evening.

F. CUSHING IS TENNIS PRESY

Reports of Year Are Encouraging to Club Members

At the annual meeting last evening of the Bay of Quinte Tennis Club officers of the club were elected and plans were made for this year's activities. The executive is as follows.

Honorary President—J. Bone.
President—F. Cushing.
Ladies' executive—Mrs. Leona Rigor.
Gentlemen's Captain — Clarence Bryant.
Secretary-Treasurer—Bill Hurst.
Executive—Ken Bryant.

Reports of the year showed the club to be in good financial condition. The grounds are in splendid shape for the season's play. Plans were made for securing new members this year.

A remarkable collection of more than 600 historic music instruments was recently opened in Vienna. Among the instruments was a bass flute of 1501.

FIRST PICTURES OF THE COLLISION BETWEEN H.M.S. GLORIOUS AND FRENCH LINER

The French liner takes in Malagar shortly after the French liner, Florida, had been in collision with the British Aircraft Carrier, Glorious," and caused the deaths of thirty pass engers on the Florida. The top picture gives some idea of the size of the two vessels and the damage done to the Florida, whereas the lower picture shows the collapsing steel and woodwork. The bottom pho tograph shows some of the passengers from the liner being landed at Malagar.

THUROW RESIDENT, JAMES BALCANQUEL MARKS 91ST BIRTHDAY AT HIS HOME

Was President of Cheese Factory and Former Political Candidate

One of Hastings county's oldest residents and one of the most highly respected citizens of Thurlow town ship yesterday passed his 91st milestone. James Balcanquel, who for years was a force in the political and church work in the county, was yesterday and today in receipt of the congratulations of his friends for miles around in the country as well as the city. This morning Mr. Balcanquel with a bright smile, a reporter that went out to see him, "Walmsley, Ian-law's home on the 4th of Thurlow.

Mr. Balcanquel has not been well for the past year, but for the past few days has confined to his bed-room. But one age and infirmity has not conquered his indomitable spirit and although suffering slightly from deafness, is in complete control of his faculties. "I was born in this country," said this morning, "and my people came from Scotland and settled in Thurlow. Always since you know progress has been made with the years it took my parents two weeks to make the journey by boat. The craft ran into a stiff headwind and was blown a hundred miles out of its course. They thought they would never arrive here, but they did me."

Building a home in Tyendinaga township, Mr. and Mrs. James Balcanquel, the parents of the latter moved to Thurlow and bought the home where Mr. Balcanquel now lives with his son-in-law, Byron Walmsley. Mr. Balcanquel has resided in the home for the past sixty years and has never retired sold out to his son-in-law but has kept the 200 acre farm from his father.

Has Had Busy Life

James Balcanquel has had a busy life. President of a cheese factory and other positions in the church and a candidate for Dominion parliament as well as being a farmer, he has not wasted much time during his long life. The home in which he now lives with the Lavens is in wonderful condition and is one of the finest looking houses along the 4th.

For thirteen years Mr. Balcanquel was president of the Bronk Cheese Factory, which is located near his home, and for a great many more years was a member of the board of directors. He is a former resident of the, Belleville Cheese Board. He was a member of the Thurlow Presbyterian Church, now United, and an Elder of that body. He has always taken a great interest in church work and took a devout interest in church affairs. His ancestors on both sides of the family fought three-cornered election bouts by only a few votes. Those were the days of the "Patrons of Industry," a party which some power, and Mr. Balcanquel ran on their platform. He was opposed by the late Jeremiah Hurley, Liberal Candidate, and W. B. Northrup, a Conservative. Mr. Hurley was successful in winning the seat in the Dominion House but was given a close run by Mr. Balcanquel.

He has five children living. These include Mrs. Robert McLaughlin, Mrs. Walter Snider, Mrs. Ernest Leavens, Miss Grace Balcanquel and Fred Balcanquel, a son, who owns a farm immediately adjoining his father's.

Mr. Balcanquel doesn't care much for reading any more but he retains his interest in politics to the last. "My memory isn't quite as good as it used to be either," he said this morning. He has not been in the city for some time past. The last public function he attended here was three years ago when he was one of the guests of honour at John Elliott's annual cheese banquet.

The Ontario Intelligencer joins with Mr. Balcanquel's host of friends in the congratulations and well wishing him many more years of tranquil and happy life.

MACHINE GUNNERS MEET IN HALIFAX

Halifax, April 18—Eight hundred officers of the famous Canadian Machine Gun "Suicide Corps" will gather in Halifax on August 27 for a three-day reunion, and their fifth annual convention.

There are 1,200 members of this unique corps of Canada's youngest wartime fighting outfits—mostly redoubtable veterans, but a few considered to various parts of the world. Highlights of the convention will be a forty-five mile sea cruise; a 200 mile sight seeing trip through the Annapolis Valley, and their fifth annual reunion dinner to be held here. A luncheon will be tendered the officers by the United Services Association.

Lieut.-Col. Cyril Colwell, officer com manding the 6th Battalion, with companies at Halifax, Truro and Kentville is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements.

SUCCESSFUL PLAY AT CHRIST CHURCH

Members of the Junior Branch of the Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church gave a very successful play last evening. A family large crowd attended and greatly enjoyed the presentation, which was given in a splendid manner by the youthful actresses. Slides which were given after the play were arranged by Rev. C. E. Clarke. Between act dances were given by Misses Walmsley, Marion Adams and Dorothy Arnott with Dorothy Cook as accompanist. The play which was entitled "The Morning of the Sale" had the follow as its cast:

"Searchlight"—Florence Tufts.
"Skylark"—Marjorie Chaplin.
"Cake"—Gladys Lummis.
"Handkerchief"—Betty Wilson and Bernice Dominaley.
"Iron Holder"—Verna Walmsley.
"Needles and Pins"—Dorothy Arnott and Clancie Tufts.
"Frocks"—Eva Adams.
"Dish-Cloth"—Dorothy Croft.
"Programme"—Betty Adams.

PREMIER REBUKES LIBERAL MEMBER

OTTAWA, April 18.—Very bitterly in the House today Premier Bennett condemned Charles B. Howard (Liberal, Skeena) for his "unwarranted" onslaught of the world "non-contribution" in opening Premier Bennett's declaration against unemployment insurance. The omission, said Premier Bennett, was made either deliberately or otherwise, and, when Mr. Young of Weyburn interjected "inadvertently," the Premier sarcastically declared: "To my mind the only evidence that it was inadvertently made would be the fact that possibility of inadvertence has been suggested by my honorable friends from Weyburn. It was a matter of nothing being a greater breach of privilege than the misleading statement of the character made with respect to the observations of any member."

WORKMAN BADLY BURNED IN PLANT

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 18.—John Harmer, 45, of this city, in the hospital with possibly fatal burns suffered today at the Norton Plant, Chippewa.

A furnace leader, was covered with flames which shot out of the furnace. He was severely burned about the back, chest and legs. All his clothing was burned from his body. Fellow workmen rushed to his aid and beat out the flames. Further back escaped with minor injuries.

SEVEN THOUSAND SEEK POSITIONS

OTTAWA, Ont., April 18.—About seven thousand men, women and girls will write examinations held by the civil service commission for positions in the outside service of the civil service in connection with the taking of Canada's census next June. It is estimated that seven hundred positions available. Most of the seven thousand candidates are three thousand two hundred are in Ottawa.

SEVEN-YEAR TERM PASTORAL LIMIT

Kitchener, April 18.—Terms longer than seven years in one pastorate were strongly opposed today at the meeting of the Canada Conference of the Evangelical Church held in Elmira. The discussion arose on the recommendation of General Conference that the seven-year limit be abolished. The suggestion was made to do it at the Canada Conference.

Proponents of the measure pointed out that it took some time for a minister to become established in a pastorate, and that it was after that his best work was accomplished. Those opposing said that good men were hard to get and that the denomination as a whole could benefit from their work. Zion Church Kitchener, will be the scene of the 1933 session of the Canada Conference. This will be decided on by the Church Extension Fund of the General Conference which will be brought to the conference by Rev. W. A. Gies of Kitchener. It is added that it is hoped to increase the fund to $1,000,000 within the next three and a half years.

BOY TRAIN VICTIM BORE ELBOW SCAR

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 18.—Identification by means of a scar left by a Canadian National Railways train, which severed both his arms, a parent's stealing a ride, six miles east of Hearst, a man about 18 years of age, whose identity is unknown died at the Hearst hospital, and will be buried here. The coroner decided the man lying on the right of the track, train sped by. The injured man was taken to Hearst hospital. His skull was fractured, his right arm and collar-bone were broken, and he was otherwise injured.

LORD IRWIN BIDS ADIEU TO HINDU PEOPLE

Touching Scenes as Viceroy Said Farewell to Gandhi

POLITICAL ENEMY

All Creeds Participate in Ceremony for The Official

Bombay, India, April 18 (CP)—Viceroy Lord Irwin, just turned 52 years old, today relinquished his high office to Lord Willingdon, former Governor General of Canada and in India to Earl Willingdon, former Governor General of Canada.

The British of Bombay and India, aided by many Indians of all creeds and races, participated in an impressive farewell to Lord Irwin as he stepped down from five years in power and sailed for England.

The Indian princes, high governmental officials and service men of rank and file assembled at Arch, some times called the Gateway to India, to bid the tall, kindly viceroy bon voyage.

One of the men most affected by his departure today was possibly his greatest political enemy, Mahatma Gandhi. The two throughout their association during the civil disobedience campaign remained firm personal friends and as he was to London at the second round table conference, Lord Irwin said to Gandhi, who gaunt-ly replied, "It is in God's hands." He raised clasped hands in front of his face in salute of a high priest as if, blessing the departing viceroy and his entire entity. Obviously affected, Lord Irwin clasped his hand.

BARN TOTALLY DESTROYED IN SERIOUS FIRE

David Thompson of Moira Heavy Loser in Blaze

CAR BURNED

Efforts of Bucket Brigade Successful in Saving House

David Thompson a prominent farmer who resides on Concession Four of Huntingdon Township, one mile west of Moira, suffered a heavy loss this morning at ten o'clock when his barn, together with most of the contents, were totally destroyed by fire, the origin of the blaze is unknown, but it had gained such headway before the alarm was sounded, that it was impossible for the bucket brigade composed of neighbors to do anything to stem the blaze although they fought valiantly.

A large frame structure with a stone basement, it was one of the finest buildings in the district. Implements in the district. A quantity of ensilage, stored in the barn were lost while a car stored in a garage which adjoined the barn, was consumed. Seven pigs and seven calves perished in the blaze. A mile and a half from the outbuildings which were adjacent to the barn were burned the fire was discovered. A large stack of grain and fifteen ton of hay are also lost.

The fire was first discovered by an unnamed boy who was walking about the place. He informed neighbours and Mr. Thompson who had been working in a distant field rushed to the scene.

The loss will be a severe one to Mr. Thompson. The damage is conservatively estimated at $4,000 although this is said to be partly covered by insurance. There was little nothing removed from the barn before the conflagration had gained headway. It was with difficulty that the house was saved, as it was several times and the flames extinguished.

FARMERS GROW MORE BARLEY

Amelianburg Sees Revival of Interest in Grain

Farmers of the Amelianburg district state that the seeding is getting well under way, and considerable has been done on the hills and slopes where the soil is very fine shape for working.

Many farmers are more and more going in for the growing of barley, the reason being that barley was one of the leading products of this section not since the old days it was fed liberally into a minor position among the coarse grains. But once again the becoming one of the crops in which a great deal of attention is given.

Mr. Hunt, secretary of the local branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, reports a keen spirit of greater interest shown in the growing of barley, and states that the exporter that farmers have to have a cheaper feed than the imported corn which has entered largely into the rations for hogs. The department is stressing barley as an excellent feed which is more profitable than oats and which makes a very fine ration for hogs. There is the additional incentive that barley prices are much better than the price of oats

The same, wider interest in barley is being displayed in Prince Edward County but all over the province.

Mr. Pearson told of the spread of interest in barley and stated that he was sown eight years ago to Prince Edward and has spread all over Central Ontario. Last year the co-operative department launched a drive for the growth of barley and Prince Edward was the centre of this movement. Today more barley than ever - is being grown.

Speaking of the early halcyon days of barley growing in this section of Ontario Mr. Pearson said that some years ago he had occasion to get data regarding these great days when barley was the staple of the chief lines of trade at this port.

DIED OF HEART ATTACK ON TRAIN

Toronto, April 18.—Seized with a heart attack while in compartment on the Canadian Pacific Railway train, Dundas from Vancouver to Toronto, Edward Waddell, 63, manufacturer of Birmingham, England, died as the train was pulling into Toronto. From his personal effects the police learned he was booked passage on the Duchess of Atholl, sailing from Montreal, April thirtieth.

CANADA OFFERED TRADE RELATIONS

Ottawa, April 18.—Abundant opportunities exist for increases in reciprocal trade between Canada, Belgium and Luxemburg, declared Hon. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, in the House today on his return to Ottawa after a visit to the south. He was particularly struck, he said, with the trade opportunities open to Canada in Bermuda and Canadian National Steamship service was proving, to be a splendid medium in opening this market.

MEMBER'S WIFE DIED AT LINDSAY

Mrs. T. H. Stinson, wife of T. H. Stinson, K.C., M.P., of Lindsay, died yesterday.

She was a daughter of William Robson, of Lindsay and was married to the present member of the Dominion House of Commons for Victoria-Haliburton, in 1910.

The funeral will take place from the family residence at Lindsay on Sunday afternoon, April 19th, and will be attended by a number of the members of the House of Commons among them the member for South Hastings, as Mr. Tummon and Mr. Stinson are particularly close friends and have resided together at Ottawa for several Sessions.

ACCEPT PLANS OF ARCHITECT J.A. THOMSON

Secretary Authorized to Collect All Master Keys

READY IN FALL

Tenders Will be Asked on Improvements to City Schools

Plans and specifications for the additions to Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra schools, is drawn up by J. Arnold Thomson, architect were accepted by the Board of Education at its regular meeting held in the collegiate institute last night. Mr. Thomson was commissioned by the board to advertise for tenders for the erection of the addition immediately. The usual agreement with the architect regarding fees etc., was drawn up.

It will be remembered that the city council was requisitioned for $140,000 by the board for these two building additions at the last meeting of the Civic Fathers and the requisition was granted. It is not expected that the additions will cost this much money when they are completed. They will be ready by next fall, it is expected.

Too Many Master Keys

The secretary of the Board, J. B. Findlay, has been authorized by the board to collect all master keys to the collegiate building from those not authorized to have them. It was reported last night that there were thirteen of these master keys out. It was reminded to the board that only four or five should be in existence. According to the trustees no authorization was given any body to have his master key. Yesterday Mr. Ferguson, one of the property men of the collegiate reported that his master key had been stolen from his ring. As a local key-maker admitted that he had made an order to manufacture a master key, it was apparent that the caretaker's key had been stolen for that purpose.

REGINA ROBBER IS SENT TO PRISON

(Canadian Press)

Regina, Sask., April 18.—Believed to be a precedent in the Saskatchewan courts, sentences of two years in the penitentiary or one year in jail and ten lashes, was offered by Mr. Justice Donald McLean today to Glenger Sten, convicted of robbing a Regina store last January. Sten's choice a jail term and lashes.

BULLETIN BOARD

BOYS' DEMONSTRATION.

A meeting was held at the County Home for the Aged by the Boys' Swine Club of Hastings County, yesterday afternoon. Dr. L. Stevenson, Provincial Veterinary, gave a talk to the boys present, a talk and demonstration on internal parasites, known as round worms. The doctor demonstrated on the intestines of a pig weanling and pointed out the internal parasites. He then instructed the boys on the question of doing away with that menace.

Mr. D. Matheson from the Provincial Government, spoke to the boys on the feeding and management of swine, so that the best results may be obtained.

After the meeting each boy was given two new weanlings with their ears to raise during the summer and exhibit them at the Belleville Fair. Prizes will be given to the winning pair of sows. This contest is open to boys in Hastings, Lennox-Addington and Prince Edward Counties.

AUXILIARY EUCHRE

A most successful euchre was held by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Canadian Legion in the Memorial Hall last night. The prize winners were, Ladies' first, Mrs. Mosier, second Mrs. Mitts, third, Mrs. Sprague. Gentlemen's first was won by Mr. Eliot, second, Mr. Caler and third Mr. Mosman. Refreshments were served at the close of the games and everybody reported a most enjoyable time.

REMANDED TODAY

Wm. Little, who was arrested in Peterboro and brought to Belleville yesterday by P.C. Sylvester appeared before Magistrate Mikel this morning on a charge of bigamy and for remanded in custody without bail for one week.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A happy event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Goodfellow, Dorset on Tuesday evening when their eight-year-old daughter Merla Goodfellow entertained a number of young friends on her birthday. Fourteen guests were present, two of them being from out of town, Misses Erma Hadley and Margaret Brown of Frankford. A jolly time was spent in games etc., while a lunch was served at the conclusion. Miss Merla was the recipient of numerous gifts together with wishes for many more happy birthdays.

READY FOR CENSUS

In conversation with R. H. Ketchenson census-taker for Hastings county, he stated that arrangements for the Dominion-wide census are complete. Next week the Dominion Government will mail out blank forms to every farmer in the Dominion. Mr. Ketchenson stated that if the farmers would read these forms very carefully and then answer them fully they would lose little or no time when the enumerator called. All questions must be answered fully, with a penalty imposed by the Government to the one or ones refusing to answer any or all questions.

FRIENDS ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Sills of Redmerville were at home to a large number of friends from Foxboro and Hedgerville last evening. Progressive euchre was enjoyed, favours being won by ladies, first Mrs. Wm. W. Hough, second by Miss Molly Longwell, third by Mrs. Ernest Adams. Gentlemen's first by Mr. R. Preston McCann, second Mr. Ernest Adams. After a delicious luncheon, served by the hostess and Miss Ruth, assisted by Mrs. Jno. Longwell, Mrs. R. Wait and Miss Ethel Mcleod dancing was enjoyed until the wee small hours.

SEA CADETS AT CHURCH

The first church parade of the Sea Cadets of Belleville will be held on Sunday morning to Christ Church where the Rev. C. E. Parks will speak.

MINOR BLAZE

The local fire department had a hurried call to the home of Mr. Brant of South John Street late yesterday afternoon when they were called there by a small blaze that started in c wicker chair. No great damage was reported.

GREENS READY.

All of the permanent greens at the Belleville Golf Club will be ready for use the week end according to Jock Mitchell, professional, at that enterprising golf club. The ground has dried quickly this year and the grass is in excellent condition due to the warm in the early part of the month. The course looks spick and span after a careful grooming, and no doubt the pay of the course will be assailed over the week end by the "dubbs and duffers."

FIRE STREET FIRE.

The fire brigade was called to Pine street shortly before the noon hour, a fence on vacant property being belase. The fire was easily extinguished and the brigade were soon back in their respective halls.

REOPENING SERVICES

There has been much activity during the last two weeks at Wesley Church, Bayside circuit. Extensive repairs have been made to the interior of this church, which now presents a bright and pleasing appearance. The Pastor, Rev. J. R. Butler has been, ably assisted by a number of loyal and interested members. On Sunday, April 19th Divine Service will be held at 11 a.m. when Rev. C. B. Brethen, B.A. of Grace Church, Trenton, will preach. In the evening service which is held at 7.30 p.m. the Rev. Gordon Bishop, Principal of Albert College The piano will be in charge of Miss Marjorie Calnan who will be assisted by a splendid choir from Wesley and Bellefville.

BACK FROM FLORIDA.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kerr returned this week from Jacksonville, Florida, where they spent the winter months. Mr. Kerr was taken ill in the south but he is quite recovered now and will soon be back home shortly for the summer trade. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr enjoyed delightful weather at Florida but are glad to be back in Belleville again.

BROUGHT TO HOSPITAL

Over the week-end forming behind his car, little Donald Shankick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shannick, of Bancroft, was brought to Belleville Hospital, for an operation this week.

A Household Medicine—They that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of the many ailments would not be without it in the house. UTOPIA DANCE MONDAY NIGHT

Proceeds Will be Devoted to Moira Boys' Camp

All is ready for the At Home to be given by the Utopia Club on Monday night in the Armouries in aid of the Boys' Camp sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. The energetic committee have had a hard to make this event a success, in the hope that a large sum will be realized for the Boys' Camp in order that more efficient work for the benefit of the youngsters. There are many lads in town who depend upon the Boys' Camp for their annual two weeks' vacation, and the sum realized on Monday night should be sufficient to send at least 20 boys to the camp for two weeks.

Two of the best orchestras in the city have been engaged to dispense the popular music of the —"Benny" Stewart and His Canucks, will play the first part of the programme, while Charlie Goyer and his Bon Tons will play the second set. Nearly every dance on the programme will be a novelty dance and the committee have secured a number of valuable favors from the merchants of the city. There will be a display in Scantlebury's window for the next three days. The object is a worthy one and no doubt a large number will attend the function.

OBITUARY

MRS. BERNARD W. SMITH

A large number attended the funeral on Monday of Mrs. B. W. Smith, which took place from the Belleville Burial Undertaking Parlors to Zion, after which the body was transported to Toronto for interment in Prospect Cemetery. Rev. Dr. R. H. Bell of Bridge Street United Church conducted a short but impressive service in which he spoke of the life of the deceased and the hope that all have in Jesus Christ through the Father. Appropriate hymns were sung and were read and the service was closed by prayer. A wealth of floral tributes testified to the esteem of the deceased. The bearers were, Keith Ponton, Eddie Logan, J. A. McFee, Dr. Blakiler, Dr. S. Messina and G. Elliott. Rev. Dr. Bunting officiated at the close friend of the deceased will conduct the last rites at the graveside.

"Scotty" Kline and George Semark In Kingston Tourney

"Scotty" Kline and George Semark are home today bearing the scars of battle but bringing with them the laurels that go with the winning of fistic encounters. The two boys took part in a boxing and wrestling show arranged by the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery Association and Canadian Locomotive Athletic Association of Kingston the show being held in the Grand Opera House and attended by a large number of followers of the manly art of self defense. Both Semark and Kline won their fights, Semark in the 135 pound class and Kline in the 158 pound class. Each received a valuable prize, which was much appreciated. The boys spoke in the highest terms of the treatment they received and are ready to perform in the Limestone city at any future occasion. The bout between Kline and Bdr. Pothier was the best on the card going the full three rounds with Kline catching the judge's eye first. Semark met the bout from Gnr. Sills who over the required route of three minutes. The judges were Lt. Wales and Major Willetts with Jack Day as referee. The results of the show follow:

FRIENDS HONOUR FOXBORO FAMILY

Home of Mr. Edward Sine Scene of Pleasant Event

Foxboro, April 16 By Mail— The home of Mr. Edward Sine was the scene of a very happy gathering on Wednesday evening, when some eighty guests assembled to bid Miss Gladys Sine and her father farewell. Rev. Mr. Snell gave an interesting address at the conclusion, calling on Miss Evelyn Wickett whose address read as follows.

To Gladys and Mr. Sine and Mr. Hamilton—

We, your friends and neighbours have gathered to bid you farewell as you leave our community and to wish you every joy and happiness in your new home. In a small village such as ours, each one who leaves is greatly missed and as you go from us there will be left a vacancy which we regret. However, we hope that you will take your place in the community to which you are going and realize the importance of building your new home on solid foundations, remembering that every true home has God as its head.

We hope, Mr. Sine, that you may be able to visit your old friends. We realize that it is not easy to sever friendships of long duration, but we know that new friendships will be around you as you make your home with Gladys and her husband.

Will you accept these gifts from us and as you enjoy them through life may you remember that many warm friends are glad to assist in making your new home a pleasant place in which to live.

For you Gladys and Mr. Hamilton we wish many years of joy of life together.

Signed on behalf of Foxboro friends, Foxboro, April 10, 1931, Miss Evelyn Wickett, Mrs. J. Daniels and Mrs. E. Spencer.

Mrs. J. Daniels and Mrs. E. Spencer then presented Miss Sine with a walnut Chesterfield table and occasional chair to match. Many friends and neighbours were called upon for speeches in which they spoke very highly of Gladys and Mr. Sine.

Contests were given and many found themselves at wits end trying to solve the rather puzzling questions.

At midnight a dainty lunch was served, after lunch the merrymakers returned to their several homes.

Mrs. M. Pitman spent Wednesday with Mrs. J. Daniels and Mrs. Geo. Wickett.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Wilson of Harold, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. Wilson.

Mrs. Myres and Helen and Mrs. Pitcke spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Flynn.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Burley and family spent Monday evening with Mr. E. Sine and Gladys.

A play called "Who Cares" was put on in the United Church on Monday evening.

Miss Myrtle Reid and Miss Vera Rose of Hallowy spent Friday with Miss Evelyn Wickett.

NEW BILLIARD ROOM OPENED

Michael Maraskas Moves Into New Quarters

A modern and up-ti-date billiard room was opened to the public last night by Michael Maraskas and from the large crowds which thronged the premises during the night, the venture will no doubt turn out to be a successful one. Mr. Maraskas was required to move from his old stand near Victoria Avenue, a billiard room he purchased from Norman Hall some years ago. He obtained possession of the Regent Theatre and for some weeks extensive renovations have been carried on. While the renovations were proceeding, the proprietor had all of his tables recovered and new cushions were purchased. In all seven snooker tables were placed in the new room as well as four pool tables while the lighting placed above the table is another improvement. The players have plenty of room at the ends and sides of the table to efficiently use the cue, while along the sides are arranged settees and reclining chairs for those passing a half hour. All night the tables were in use while the proprietor greeted the old and prospective customers in his new quarters, ably assisted by his son, Theodore.

The front of the store will be used for a shoe-shining parlor, a tobacco store and a soft drink counter. The different sections are well-arranged to efficiently serve the patrons. Mr. Maraskas has been in business in Belleville for many years and has made a number of friends who will wish him well in his new undertaking.

TWENTY MILLIONS ARE UNEMPLOYED IN THE WORLD

United States Well up with Six Million—France Least Affected

(Following is the third of a series of articles on the world economic situation as seen by officials, diplomats and observers in Washington.)

Washington, D.C., April 17.—By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—Figures published here and abroad indicate there are perhaps 20,000,000 people in the world who are willing to work and have no jobs. Students of economics and politics believe this is by far the worst feature of the present depression. Mr. Magnuson of the International Labor office says: "It is no exaggeration to say that unemployment has been the overshadowing problem."

Canada is looked upon here as suffering lightly from this economic plague. On the whole new countries and countries which depend to considerable degree upon agriculture, are happily situated in times of depression, one expert said. There are always a few potatoes on a farm and there is undoubtedly not the actual want in Canada that exists in Europe, he added.

It came as a shock to the people of the United States when the official figure of 4,500,000 unemployed was recently announced despite the fact previous unofficial estimates had run as high as 7,000,000. These figures place the United States well up in the international unemployment list. The enumeration of unemployed is made on different bases in different nations and as a consequence it is impossible to make accurate comparison. The latest official statistics available for the principal countries are as follows:

Germany	4,383,843
Great Britain	2,041,207
Italy	641,169
Japan	380,394
Austria	331,729
Australia	102,000
Switzerland	103,738
Sweden	80,573
Denmark	76,961
Belgium	61,540
France	34,000

These figures represent registered unemployed, wholly unemployed, and those receiving benefits. There is no doubt they do not reflect the situation in any adequate degree.

It is noted France which is well balanced between agriculture and manufacture, stands at the bottom of the list as the least affected country in Europe.

Reports received here this spring are generally optimistic indicating a turn in the tide, anticipating the seasonal increase in employment. None the less there is an undertone of doubt in some of them.

Radicals and conservative economists in Washington maintain their respective attitudes in considering the problem of unemployment. The radical school argues that present unemployment is not due to stagnation in business but is to a great extent a result of the use of improved methods of production and therefore every over a period of years; that there can be the world will continue it, have with it until readjustment of working hours and provision for income is made.

It is pointed out a considerable number of these who lost their jobs when a new machine is introduced on the industrial scene, find work in the service of luxury industries. Some get jobs as gasoline filling-stations, others become taxi-drivers or chauffeurs, and the ever rising standard of life absorbs them in other ways. However, it is admitted such activities take up only a small proportion of cast-off workers. It is therefore necessary, they suggest, that some part of the profit which accrues to industrialists as the result of the use of machinery and modern methods be used to provide for the security of those who lose their jobs.

Radical economists, of course, admit world unemployment has been increased to a very great proportions by the depression, financial and political troubles, as well as increasing supplies and diminishing markets. The more orthodox school thinks the world has enjoyed an era of extravagance for which it is now paying and that when people begin saving and the investment structure is rehabilitated, markets expand, there is a readjustment of international trade, and prosperity comes return, unemployment will largely be a thing of worry. There will always a certain amount of unemployment, perhaps a million people in the United States are temporarily without work even in boom days, and economists do not think this is a bad thing inasmuch as it offers a supply of labor for new or expanding industry.

POLITICAL REMEDIES FOR WORLD DEPRESSION TAKE OPPOSITE PATHS

Washington, D.C., Apr. 18 (By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—The political attack on the world wide depression as shown here Washington has developed two clear-cut trends, which are likely to be intensified when they come into the present picture an entirely new factor represented by Communist Russia.

The first and most general reaction has been the emergence of economic nationalism in vigorous form. The United States has raised about its borders the highest tariff in its history and other nations have increased tariffs against imports.

The second trend is to be seen in the suggestion put forward by Aristide Briand for an economic union of European nations and finds, outwardly at least, definite expression in the recently announced customs union between Germany and Austria. An-other German and Austrian development Canadian students of international affairs, and by Washington, suggested the agricultural states of middle Europe might be drawn into the Austro-German union. Informed circles here consider there is a possibility France might eventually join a United European union thus bringing to fruition, in a roundabout way, M. Briand's plan.

Schemes for British intra-imperial trade partake of both trends, it is pointed out.

The new element contained in the present situation is the entrance into the market of a national corporation trading in competition with private enterprise. Whatever success or failure may attend the Soviet experiment there is no doubt that in its bearing on the depression it comes to be regarded as a question of primary importance in Washington as elsewhere. President Hoover, it is generally believed, would approve an embargo on Russian trade although there is no indication this is in immediate prospect. Writing in the New Statesman and Nation, Michael Farbman says, "It is obvious that we (the United Kingdom) have got to reckon with the probability of an embargo being placed in the near future upon coal, if not all, Russian exports."

While most of the nations of the world suffered a falling off in trade during 1930, the foreign trade of Russia, according to the Department of Commerce, increased 17 per cent. Russia bought $534,000,000 worth of goods and sold $501,000,000. The Soviets bought machinery of production to assist in bringing to completion the five-year industrial plan and they sold raw materials, placing quantities of oil, lumber, coal, and wheat on the world market. These commodities were produced, distributed, and sold by a single governmental organization, having complete information as to the political, economic and financial needs of the entire Russian structure. It was possible temporarily to sell wheat, coal, or other commodities at any price necessary to support foreign credits. The charge was made that these products were sold below the cost of production, a practice known as dumping, and generally frowned upon as tending to upset the economic balance of the world.

Insofar as the political activities of the United States in combating the depression are concerned, these have been fourfold. This country has offered its manufacturers and agriculturists increased protection by raising its tariff. It has tightened immigration restrictions in order to preserve what jobs there are in the United States for residents of the country. It has artificially supported the price of wheat by the use of government funds. From time to time the Federal Treasury has embargoed certain Russian products and then withdrawn the embargo. At present there is an embargo on Soviet lumber and pulpwood, the strength of which will shortly be tested in the courts.

The political attacks made by the United States remains to be evaluated by time. The Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, it is observed, stirred retaliation on the part of other nations whatever its beneficial results to domestic industry. The check in immigration undoubtedly did not assist in promoting international good feeling. The experiment of the Federal Farm Board in maintaining the price of wheat above world levels has been abandoned after a year's trial. The National Grain Corporation and the organization Corporation on July 1 will have on their hands about 275,-000,000 bushels of wheat and the government will be out about $118,000,-000.

From the foregoing incomplete sketch of the world situation the obvious conclusion is that hard times are serving both to divide the nations and drew them together. Soviet Russia with increasing trade and no unemployment stands as a threat to stabilization of the present world economic structure. Observers here believe the movement of capitalistic nations to protect their markets against Russian dumping is gaining momentum.

YOUNG INDIAN SENT TO PRISON

Leo Green Who Escaped From Reformatory is Sent Down

Leo Green, Deseronto youth, who escaped from the Industrial reformatory and since his escape has been living the life of a hobo, as his lawyer, appeared before Magistrate Bedford of Deseronto, facing four charges of breaking and entering on various dates, also with stealing with intent to injure. He elected summary trial before the magistrate and in each case pleaded guilty. The Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, who prosecuted, made the arrest and is also to penitentiary and His Worship sentenced him to two years in Kingston penitentiary on each count, the sentences to run concurrent. Green was arrested shortly after he broke into the store of Lawrence in Deseronto and secured a quantity of jewellery. The charges on this count charge was one that has been standing against him for some time. Chief Tomlinson of Deseronto made the arrest and in a statement secured by the officer, Green admitted the offences.

HYDRO PARTY GIVEN POLICE PROTECTION IN THE NORTH

Farmers Threaten to Fight Power Workers

PETERBORO, April 17.— CP—Police protection has been provided for a Hydro Electric Power Commission survey party, engaged in laying out plans for the construction of a third power line in the Canadian Pacific Railway township. The protection was given the surveyors as a result of hostility shown by the farmers toward the party planning the route of the line which will run from Ottawa River to Toronto.

Last Saturday, farmers organized a right-of-way association, to move adequate compensation might be secured for their lands over which the line is to run. Farmers claim they were treated unfairly when the other two lines were constructed.

Some farmers declared they would fight rather than let the surveying party on their property and as the surveyors already ha' encountered trouble in Eastern Ontario, they requested the police escort.

BETHANY W. M. S.

The April meeting of the W. M. S. of Bethany United Church was held at the home of Mrs. W. Casey on Wednesday, April 15th.

The meeting opened with hymn "Joy to the World" followed by short prayers by Mrs. W. Badgley, Mrs. W. Yeoman, Mrs. S. Cooley and Mrs. W. Casey.

The Secretary and Treasurer reports were then given followed by the lesson from Matthew 28 1-2 which was read by Mrs. W. Doxtator. Hymn 334 "I Love to Tell the Story" was then sung and the meeting opened for business.

Mrs. W. Badgley wrote to Miss F. Carlisle, Hearst, Ont., who is doing nursing and missionary work there. Mrs. G. Ellis read a nice letter which she received from Miss Edith Clark, the missionary from Dondi Station, Africa, who is on furlough.

The ladies moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. E. W. Brown, leader of group 1 for the program which she supplied for the Easter thank offering service.

The roll call was then taken, each person answering with a verse of Scripture pertaining to Easter, followed by a musical selection by Mrs. Dan Casey. Reading by Mrs. W. Yeoman, The Mother.

Instrumental—Mrs. Percy Badgley.

Reading—The Early Life of David Livingstone by Mrs. S. Cooley.

Temperance Reading—Poisoned Arrows, by Mrs. W. Badgley.

Hymn 133. Rescue the Perishing, was then sung, followed by a reading by Mrs. A. Enston, "Two Easter Offerings".

A beautiful solo "Who is Like Unto Jesus" was given by Mrs. O. Sills.

Mrs. S. Cooley kindly offered her home for the May meeting.

Mrs. W. Casey closed with prayer, after which a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. W. Casey, Mrs. W. Yeoman, Mrs. D. Eber and Mrs. F. Walled and a pleasant half hour enjoyed by all.

Sunday morning, April 12th, the W.M.S. of Bethany United Church held their Easter Thank Offering service.

The service was opened by the Doxology, followed by responsive reading conducted by the President, Mrs. W. Casey.

A beautiful Easter pageant "From the Gates of His Garden," was given by a number of the members of the W.M.S. under the leadership of Mrs. E. W. Brown.

Leader of Group 2 interspersed by the musical numbers by the choir followed by a very interesting missionary address by the Rev. Mr. Merrick. The Thank Offering was $40.25.

ECONOMIC CYCLES

These days of depression have given rise to more prophecy than can ever come true, but there still seems unanimity of opinion that there are such things as economic cycles. The Montreal Star declares that economics is not yet an exact science and that there are as many diagnoses of economic ills as there are economic doctors. The Star goes on to say:

"One possible, even probable solution has been put forward on high economic authority. It may be demonstrated that price levels are found to correspond with an astounding exactness to commercial bank credits. With production more or less constant, whenever there is an increase in commercial bank credits prices tend to rise. Whenever a contraction of credit occurs, on this theory, prices fall.

"Upon this theory, recent economic history becomes intelligible with a startling ease. The record boom period promoted speculation, speculation led to high interest rates, high interest rates meant a contraction of commercial credit, restriction of credit—the crucial element—made for a fall in prices, and the fall in prices brought depression."

VITAL STATISTICS ON MONARCHY

"The number of European monarchs shaken from their thrones since the beginning of the World War is placed at nine," remarks the New York Times. "The case of Ferdinand of Bulgaria is doubtful, since he made way for his son, but the monarchy survived. This list of nine casualties might be made a round dozen by recalling three bona fide rulers of pre-armistice days, the Kings of Bavaria, Saxony and Wuttemberg within the framework of the Germany Empire.

"That empire, it may be remembered, was a federal State composed of twenty-five sovereignties. These included four kingdom—Prussia in addition to those mentioned—six grand duchies, five duchies and seven principalities, with three free cities. In Germany alone there have disappeared more sovereign houses, in the sense of the Almanac de Gotha, than in all the rest of the world.

"The kingship record since the war is not altogether one-sided. Against a dozen sovereignties that have disappeared, there are a half dozen new ones, most of them out side of Europe. Four of the new kings are successors to the holdings of the Turkish Empire—the Kings of Egypt, Iraq, Hedjaz and Nejd, and Transjordania. In Europe the new sovereignties are Albania and the Vatican State."

RECOVERY

It is hoped that Roger Babson, who is famous as an economic expert, is correct in his prediction that before the end of the year there will be a shortage of labor for certain jobs and in his statement that the end of the depression has been reached and that business is already on the upward trend.

So many prophecies have been made about the depression's end which is not felt in Belleville to anything like the extent to which it is experienced in larger cities, that the public does not know what to believe having had prophecy and counter-prophecy to more than their heart's content.

It may be, however, that Mr. Babson is right.

MUSIC IN SCHOOL

The art of music as an educating force is recognized for the Board of Education of Belleville, which is more than pleased with the work being accomplished in the schools of the city. The musical progress at the collegiate last evening by the scholars of two schools was proof of music's value—as an educator in the finer sentiments, and a force leading to the enrichment of life.

PLEA FOR MOTORIST

The Mail and Empire yesterday quoted a letter on the question of level crossings and the unnecessary obstructions there-about, and urged a brief plea in behalf of the motorist:—

"Surely every observant motorist has noticed how many dangerous, needlessly dangerous, one would almost say criminally dangerous, crossings there are all over the country. The view of the grade crossing should be obscured by any obstruction. Most obstructions could be removed at a trifling cost. They remain in the form of old barns, shacks, clumps of trees, banks of earth which could easily be removed—each one a potential death-trap to some motorist who has invested money in his means of transportation, is paying taxes on it, and has a right to use it. A driver's chief means of safety is his eyesight. He is entitled to visibility on the highway. There is a constant agitation for all grade crossings abolished. This would be ideal, but at present the enormous cost is prohibitive. In the meantime the expenditure of a few thousand dollars would provide visibility at most obstructed crossings and thus remove a serious menace to public safety."

Spring is advancing certainly and the increasing number of automobiles parked on the streets show that the parking question is soon to come to life, a spring sign.

WHAT GOD HATH PROMISED

God hath not promised
Skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways
All our lives through
God hath not promised
Sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow,
Peace without pain.
But God hath promised
Strength for the day,
Rest for the labor,
Light for the way,
Grace for the trials,
Help from above,
Unfailing sympathy,
Undying love.
—Annie Johnson Flint.

BETTER LIGHTING for the footbridge canyon would be appreciated by the many women pedestrians who pass over it at night. Complaints have been received by the police of men lurking in the shadows, and the canyon is so dimly lighted now that women often fear to cross and go the long way round at night.

SPOONS USED THREE THOUSAND YEARS AGO in Egypt, Greece and Rome, unearthed by recent excavations, were displayed in the store window of Angus McFee, jeweler, this week. The spoons were of curious pattern, and of wondrous workmanship, in fact in my opinion, present day artificers have not improved much upon the ancient Romans, Egyptians and Greeks, who practised the art of silver and goldsmiths in the days of the mighty Julius Caesar, and the alluring Cleopatra.

Bachelors are having an easier time of it these modern days than they did a few centuries ago. In 1696, a tax was levied on all bachelors in England. A laborer was taxed one shilling while a duke had to pay 12 pounds 10 shillings or about $65 a year, to remain single. In Rome, men of full age were compelled to marry. Unmarried Spartan women were privileged to treat bachelors with indignities.

"Take it from me, young man," he said, "that any person who peroxides the hair hasn't any brain to injure."

IMPORTANT SUBJECT

Some time ago we suggested that the study of economics should be one of more value to the students in our high schools than the study of art and botany. Such subjects as botany and art may never be touched again, once the student has passed for the last time through the doors of the school; but throughout the rest of his life he will be constantly affected by economic conditions. Coming so close to him it is necessary, we think, that he should know something about those laws or policies or theories whose effects he cannot escape so long as he remains a member of a community. The other day the Ottawa Citizen had an editorial which quoted Sir Josiah Stamp upon the need for the study of economics. The observer had asked Sir Josiah: "What do you regard as the chief importance of the study of economics?" and the reply was: "I think that our modern civilization is breaking down. At this particular moment our civilization is, I believe, in danger. The only thing that can save it is right thinking about economics. Economics is the thing now. The crying need at the present time is for a better knowledge of this subject. We want more first-rate minds to work on the science of the subject, and we also want a great number of people who will improve the intelligence of these principles on the public. Unless this great effort of understanding is made, I fear our economic society, which has recently become so much more complex, will be more than we have ideas to control. An effort should be made now to increase abstracting energy from other pursuits. Science, for instance, could without disaster remain where it is for another twenty years. We could do with what we have. There is no real need for fresh discoveries just now. The greater knowledge of economics is an international necessity."—Hamilton Spectator.

DEFLATION

Business continues to create alarm at the astonishing rate at which trade has lasted more than four months. Week to week and even month to month movements are slight spot-ticks of insignificant. . . . Hopes for major international conference action to meet the emergency and check deflation are centered where it is recently reried full of honors from this high office in the jurisdiction of the Church of England in Canada will be heartily acclaimed by all churchmen in the Dominion. Bishop-elect Laird is a rugged kingdom, extending from Labrador to the Yukon, with Winnipeg as its capital city. The diocese began in 1927 with one man and a tent. Under Anderson, Mackray and then Matheson, it has grown into a large and prosperous province with eleven bishops.

That Dr. Laird has all the qualifications and all the ability needed to succeed one who so well served his church and those over whom he ruled nobody can doubt. The Archbishop-designate is a native of Brant County, Ontario. He graduated from Wycliffe College, Toronto, which has given so many notable men to the Anglican Church, and was ordained to the ministry in 1892. He did great missionary work amongst the Eskimo on the Arctic coast, and in the Mackenzie River diocese, and from 1903 to 1908 was secretary of the Church Whitehorse. In 1905 he was consecrated Bishop of Yukon.

In taking over the heritage of Archbishop Matheson, Dr. Laird will take over exacting duties in a country akin to the one where he has rendered long and faithful service and wielded a beneficent influence amongst Indians and Eskimos, amongst men of his own creed, and amongst men of no creed at all. The spirit played by Bishop Stringer of the Yukon in the history of the Far Northwest is a great part. There will be every confidence that the part he will continue to play as Archbishop Stringer of Rupert's Land will be equally great and as worthy and as useful a part as that fulfilled by Archbishop Matheson, the honor of his Master.—Montreal Gazette.

MORE CARS

In the province of Quebec to date 63,000 motor cars have been registered as against 57,000 at the same date last year and the expectation is that when the season is in full swing the number will show the usual six per cent increase for the year. In connection it may be mentioned that in Alberta 65,000 licenses have been issued, an increase of 10,000 in the days which proves that the Albertans are also increasing their motoring. The facts speak for themselves.—Montreal Gazette.

Predicts Business Recovery During 1931

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 18.—A revival in business before the close of the present year was predicted by John J. Pelley president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, at the annual meeting of stock holders of that company here.

He denied that the railroad was losing traffic through diversion to other transportation agencies although he admitted a falling off in freight cargo traffic, his asserted that improvement was in evidence to a degree and that freight and passenger results are showing betterments in results.

Efforts to coordinate the highway and rail service are being scientifically planned and carried out, he said, and he made a plea for sympathetic legislation which will allow the public to profit by the cooperative efforts of the definite agencies to dovetail their services.

The election of directors took place without a ripple of dissatisfaction or opposition.

"The year 1930 was a difficult one for the railroads and industry generally," Mr. Pelley said, "because of the business recession that started in the latter part of 1929. There has been a great deal of talk about traffic being diverted from the railroads to other transportation agencies. Some people seem to think that the loss traffic on the railways in 1930 was caused largely by traffic suddenly leaving the railways for other agencies. This is not correct. . . . Business conditions are not for the competitors as well as the railways.

Ask Hotels to Pay for Radio Music

A radio-entertainment licensing plan for hotels, theatres and other public amusements was put into effect being worked out by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, according to Gene Buck president of the society. The plan will be based on the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, which makes it a "violation of the copyright law for a hotel to intercept a radio program for the benefit of its guests without permission of the copyright owners.

Associate Justice Brandeis handed down the court's decision last week in two cases, both of which were brought about by Mr. Buck and others against the Jewell LaSalle Realty Company of Kansas City, which operates a hotel in that city.

"Radio has caused many musicians formerly engaged as part of a hotel orchestra, or to employ one or more due to the use of radio entertainment in the hotel" said Mr. Buck, "and should not be hotel, any other institution which entertains for profit be required to compensate for the general well being of the musician and the composer whose works are used on the radio?

"The decision of the Supreme Court is merely another step in the direction of stabilizing much more rights granted to a composer or an author when he applies for adequate protection of his work against piracy. This decision however, will protect not only musicians but all creators of material. Now, certainly no one will be permitted to take either intentionally or unintentionally, the rightful material of another.

"We have begun an exhaustive study of the question of radio entertainment in hotels, theatres, and other institutions which entertain guests for profit. We intend to work out a licensing system which will make it necessary for such institutions to pay for their radio reception on the basis of the number of rooms served, or the number of guests receiving the entertainment. No longer will legalized piracy be permissible. Of course, this licensing plan is not designed to affect anyone who receive programs for non-commercial purposes, but only where no charge for admission or entertainment is made."

Society Girl Circus Elephant Mahout

Her toes neatly polished and with the old-time gleam in her eye, Yasso Lacher mounted proudly to the sawdust ring of the circus in New York City. Gone were the discordant days when her friends had made her basket with such trivia as cigar-store Indians. For at last the authorities had found her a mahout — and as befitted a downright fellow who was young and pretty.

For many years Yasso has made her living of hay and peanuts by carrying a trainer around the ring by her mouth. Unfortunately, the colorful practise was abandoned this spring when the individual who held the job suddenly departed westward. The circus went on as usual, but after one misguided effort with a wooden Indian, Yasso was not called upon for her old stunt, and reluctantly volunteered, but none was chosen.

Then, yesterday morning, the everything soloed itself. Miss Stella Lacher of 760 Riverside Drive went to the Garden and asked for at least a trial. Twenty-two years old, a one-time school teacher and art student, she wanted to go with the circus. She admitted she did not know much about elephants, but she liked horses and supposed the others were not much different, aside from being larger. The official gave her his ear and how the trick would go.

Drops New Friend at First

Down in the basement trainers were leading the elephants and herded her down with brooms. They chalked her toes and fed her bread and let her pet them around the ear for practice. Finally, they led her to the end of the arena. Miss Lacher stiffened in white, pour le sport, was waiting.

"What do you do to back her up?" she asked.

One of the assistant, trainers explained the usages of the small hooked stick which Yasso, with a ceremonial bow, handed to her. Then the man put his knee in the elephant's mouth, hanging there blandly while he said there was no danger. After that Miss Lacher tried it, and as the flashlights boomed the event into posterity, swung down professionally. There was considerable applause.

A few moments later the elephant apparently disturbed at the large group watching snorted and dropped to all fours, scattering the girl. Jumping up quickly, Miss Lacher looked down Yasso and disapproval and announced:

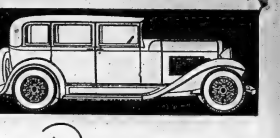
"Listen, hold me up next time."

Yasso's repertoire is in three sets. She holds her trainer by the knee, by the wrist and finally by the head. The elephant sat down in excellent fashion—except for the one failure mentioned—and then George Denham provided a bit of comic relief. He led Yasso around by the trunk.

Yasso would have nothing to do with him. She kneeled his cap off twice but would not pick him up.

"Here, let me try," Miss Lacher volunteered.

Yasso Learns to Like It



Chattering a while here, for a bathing cap, she announced herself as Yasso's friend. Then she greeted Denham and his associates, standing by, attached a bit of chain to Yasso's ivory. They suspected from the gleam in her eye that she might abandon duty in favor of obliterating the photographers. But nothing like that happened. She gently patted the Miss Lacher two or three times, walked a few steps and then let her down again. Yasso began to like it better as the time went on.

The whole thing lasted perhaps an hour, and when it was over the elephant seemed to have formed maternal out together. It was only with considerable difficulty that each could be persuaded that they had, temporarily at least, had enough. She entered the wide runway down to the dressing room. Yasso suddenly stopped, looked around and then shook her head in a gesture of mock horror and surprise, perhaps at the emancipation of women.

Miss Lacher is the daughter of S. Lacher, who—fittingly enough—has a trunk shop at 343 Fifth Avenue.

"It will take more courage to face my parents than the elephant," she said, adding that they did not know of her idea.

MOURNING WARDROBE

"A death occurred in our family and I had to go in mourning. I could hardly afford to buy all black clothes, so decided to dye what I had. I consulted our druggist and he advised using Diamond Dyes. Everything came out beautifully—my coats, wool dresses, stockings and hat. I have since learned to appreciate the excellence of the black Diamond Dyes. I tried another black dye and the results were impossible. I had to get Diamond Dyes and do the work over. Recently I have tinted my curtains a beautiful raspberry shade and dyed a rug a lovely garnet with Diamond Dyes. They are really money savers—the finest, give money can buy—I truly believe."

BRIDGE STREET UNITED CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Dr. C. J. L. Bates of Japan Is Special Preacher Tomorrow

Bridge Street United Church will celebrate the 116th Anniversary by special services tomorrow.

In the early days of this city, men united for religious fellowship and worship and out of this fellowship grew the first Church in Belleville. It has served the community all these years and the building has been filled by many of the illustrious preachers of the former Methodist Church.

The guest preacher at tomorrow's services will be Dr. C. J. L. Bates, of Japan. Dr. Bates is President of the United Church College at Tokio, Japan, with 2,500 students. Dr. Bates is one of the leading economists of Japan. Japan opened her doors to Western civilization in 1871, and since that time, the Christian Church has been the great agency for the moral and spiritual development of Japan. One of the first missionaries from the Canadian Methodist Church was a Belleville man, in the person of Rev. George Meacham, a member of Bridge St. Church. Great changes have taken place, Japan is now one of the five great world powers, and many of her leaders are Christians.

The College of which Dr. Bates is head represents the highest ideals work for young men today. Dr. Bates was formerly head of the Central Tabernacle, Tokyo, a couple of blocks distant from the Imperial University, and there they ministered to thousands of students, many of whom became Christians and are in positions of influence in the Empire. Dr. Bates is also the author of two books in Japan, 725 are self supporting. Canada, Australia, The Christian Church has been planted and taken root, and is fast becoming self supporting.

Some of the noblest sons and daughters of our Canadian homes have given their best in time and toil for education, evangelism and for other philanthropic works. Through the work of these noble men and women Japan has learned to honor, to admire, and to appreciate our land—Canada.

Advice to the Lovelorn

"Everybody's Pal But Nobody's Sweetheart"

Dear Miss Fairfax :

I am a constant reader of your column and now I would like to have your advice on this situation. I'm a fellow 22 years old, and considered good-looking. I am invited to numerous parties and, if I try to refuse, they say the party will be dead. I have met a lot of nice girls and, when I ask them to go "steady" with me, they say they want me as a friend because I seem to understand them so well. If I refuse to go to a party, they come and get me.

I have talked this problem over with my boy friends and the answer I always get is: "You're everybody's pal but nobody's sweetheart." So now I would appreciate your advice.

Speedy.

It's strange how many letters like yours come to me—from both girls and boys who are "the life of the party," and yet who never get any attention but of the friendly kind. The reason is, their group has come to regard them in the capacity of pals, good friends, people who can be depended upon—but not the type one falls in love with. The best thing to do under the circumstances is to work into a new group of friends, and take an entirely different tack. Consider your own interests, don't be so bent on playing professional entertainer to the exclusion of your own good times. I don't mean to cultivate selfishness, or drop your old friends—only I do hope you'll turn over a new leaf.

Too Much Cold Shoulder

Dear Miss Fairfax.

I am 18 years old and am in love with a man of 31. I have been going with him steadily for 7 months. For 2 months we haven't spoken. The last time I saw him was Easter. He is here Christmas. He then asked me to go to a party with him. I took my time about deciding because I didn't want to show how much I cared. A couple of days later, when he best as walking clothes. The coat has a scalloped facing, the collar open wide, the skirt is faced underneath with white, the sleeve trimmed with white and the shallow-crowned hat worn off the face of shiny straw. Her travelling suit is a scene dated 17 years later is surprisingly like it. It is said to be fantastic mode for the present time. It consists of a gig wrap coat of yellowish-brown tweed worn over a neat tunic suit of a soft and lighter peach, made with a belt of itself and two pockets. The dinner gown, supposed to be of a later period, flows to the ground, and is of pale cyclamen georgette; the curious scarf, a cape at one side in front, reappears at the back at the other side in a long scarf end.

asked me again, I decided to go. Then a week later he told me the date was off and I believed him. Later I met a girl who went to the party and told me there indeed was. The next time we both happened to be at the same place, he tried talking to me but I cold-shouldered him as though I didn't care for him. I wish you could give me some advice. You can't imagine the load it is off my mind if I knew what to do to get him back.

Sorrowful.

I'm afraid, my dear Audrey, that you are the victim of your own perverse coquetry. The tactics you employed are all right with a young man who constantly breaks dates, imitates you and at the last minute retracts, and generally conducts himself in the "coy, uncertain, hard-to-please" manner which is supposed to belong to us exclusively. But they're poor tactics if the young man is not a stalker. Next time you see him, speak to him as if nothing had happened or write him a nice, friendly little note.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

Fat isn't a quality of beauty, neither are sharp bones anything to yodel about. The fashionable figure is the normal one and that's why the sizing mean shape has to be filled out where paddings are supposed to be, when the bell line was lifted upward from the hips, placed where it rightly belongs, the bottom figure would not qualify. Therefore all the little slimps are going in for chest development. It is achieved by exercises that pull hard on muscles of chest and arms, by cold applications every morning and massage with cocoabutter every night.

Heredity has a good deal to do with premature greying of the hair, and also with the coming of wrinkles. Complexions inherit family traits. Blondes, with delicate skins, are more likely to gather turkey tracks earlier than their brunette sisters. Women who hang onto their youthful complexions are those who begin early to use nourishing creams, to keep the tissues firm and resilient with cold water and who are naturally endowed with sunny dispositions that don't permit lines to be pulled down mouth-corners.

Self-consciousness is social fear. It overcome by the cultivation of a little healthy conceit, handing one's self a bit of good-natured praise and then one that is going strong. Nice for pretty hands, but too dominating for hands that lack grace and perfect texture. They call attention to defects.

Hands that stay persistently rough and chapped despite devotion to the application of asparagacnth lotions, three times daily, should disappear soon after they are put on.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers :

A good commentary on past and present fashions is to be found in various current plays in which the action covers a number of years. I wrote a London correspondent recently. The ugliness of some recently styles proves to be greater than anything Victorian. They are warnings against the return of such monstrosities, comfortable or uncomfortable, which were worn solely for utility. But they happened to be fashionable.

In "The Man Who Pays the Piper" a hobble-skirted evening dress in georgette and taffeta is worn by Miss Diana Wynyard in a 1913 scene. It is a good example of a very uncomfortable fashion. In which it was difficult to walk with grace or even ease. The long-waisted dresses of 1920 represent, on the other hand, most comfortable styles, but both by day and evening clothes in this play they make one feel glad that they are out of the pale. Elaine and Her Ideas From Paris

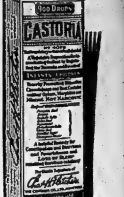
A marriage to India" is the story of a Swiss woman educated in America and married to a Hindu, who took up her life in India with high ideals of science and friendship, in this book Frieda Hauswirth or Mrs. Das tells what belief her plans for educational and social work and her much experience with racial prejudice, caste lines, Indian women and housekeeping in India. A very interesting part of the volume is that which recounts her experiences with Tagore and with Gandhi and the friendship with Sir Jagadish and Lady Bose, famous guests, as at their home in Calcutta.

Two new science books have been included in the week's list. Mary Evans' "Costume throughout the Ages" is a text book in dress, showing its development from the ancient Egyptians and Assyrians to the early 20th century. The close association of dress with art, literature and religion is shown and the effect of social, political, economic and geographic conditions.



"A book of dramatic costume" by Edith Dabbey and C. M. Wise is a very useful handbook for play producers. It presents in line drawings a selection of the costumes of most of the peoples and periods touched by dramatic literature. The selection is limited to costumes known to be worn by characters in plays, pageants, operas and other forms of drama.

ST. ANDREW'S W. M. S.

The ladies of St. Andrew's W. M. S. held their April meeting on Wednesday evening. In the absence of Mrs. Seymour who was unavoidably detained, the chair was occupied by Mrs. G. A. Reid, president of the Kingston Presbyterial. Mrs. J. Farqey read the Scripture lesson. Miss Pellin, field secretary of the society was the principal speaker. Her address was very interesting, giving an account of the work being carried on in Western Canada particularly. She paid high tribute to the work in Bolnar, Man., showing how under Mrs. McKenzie's management the children of foreign-ers are trained physically, mentally, spiritually. The work of Mrs. Scott in the Saskatoon school, is of a somewhat different nature but equally helpful, moulding the character of the young Canadians whose all round development is sought. The work among the Chinese of the Pacific Coast was referred to as most promising. Miss Pellin made it very clear that money invested in the mission fields is a very profitable satisfactory returns. On motion of Mrs. A. Moore a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Pellin for her informing and stimulating address. The offering was very liberal. Miss Mycrest gave a delightful musical selection and Mrs. Bell sang a piece appropriate for the occasion. Both were much enjoyed.

Better methods of culture last year gave Hawaii a pineapple crop which was 37 percent greater than that of 1929.

Castoria...for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing —immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine

Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

LIBRARY CORNER

The most outstanding book added to the popular Public Library this week is "The Memoirs of Marshal Foch." The Commander-in-chief of the allied armies has here written his story of two periods of the war, the first from its outbreak until April, 1915, and the second from the Armistice. The interval between these two periods is briefly outlined by some of Foch's military associates. These were to be collected and publish during his life-time, and upon his death his family in first intended to withhold the manuscript for ten or fifteen years but the pressure of friends of Foch prevailed, and we now have his own account of the very important periods of the war. Included in the volume are special maps prepared by the French war office, unpublished photographs and facsimiles of the Armistice.

DE MAR EXPECTS TO LEAD RACE

Boston School Teacher has hopes of Winning Marathon

Boston, Mass., April 15— Clarence DeMar, the 43-year-old amateur teacher who has won the Boston marathon seven times and is the popular favorite for next's Monday's race, left his Keene, N.H., class room yesterday and came to Boston to "rest". Several addresses, including speeches before various church assemblies, legislature and Boy Scout listeners on his health and running rules, with perhaps eight hours' sleep on Sunday night, constitute De Mar's idea of relaxing for the classic grind.

The entry list totals 302 marathoners, Boston Athletic Association officials reported today, including Johnny Miles of Hamilton, Ont., winner in 1926 and 1929 and considered a serious contender; Percy Wyer, Toronto; Harold Webster, Hamilton, Ont.; Roland O'Toole, of St. John's, Nfld.; Gabriel Reviadiere, De Montreal, and Johnny McLeod, former Nova Scotian, who moved here recently and was a sensational 15-mile victory last week, are among those entered. Among "others" are five or six good pace setters and two or three veterans who have any kind of a chance for victory.

CUBS DEFEATED PITTSBURGH 5-4

Chicago, April 18—To the shrill shrieks of 20,000 women the Chicago Cubs stayed off a ninth-inning rally by the Pittsburg Pirates yesterday and won their third game of the season 5 to 4.

Guy Bush weakened in the eighth and ninth innings and was relieved by Lester Sweetland after Pinch-Hitter Maurice Comorsky had played Wanner had singled to start the ninth. Grantham sacrificed and Paul Waner walked to fill the bases. Bob Smith, who was the Cubs' Wednesday came in to replace Sweetland and Traynor filed to Stephenson. Mcsoll scored after the catch. All shy three out Comorsy for the final out.

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

The local Victorias of the Intermediate B League, had a club meeting last night and got under way.

The Baltimore Orioles will not only wear numbers on their shirts this year but other changes have also been made in the uniforms. Heretofore, the home suits have been a pure cream, this season they will have thin black stripes added and the insignia of an oriole will appear on the left sleeve instead of the letter B. The travelling uniforms are changed to carry the words Baltimore Orioles instead of simply the letter B.

Mr. McLean, who came here from Uxbridge, was asked to manage the local Victorias. Mr. McLean is an old ball player and knows the game. The boys will be fortunate to get his services.

Grover Cleveland Alexander is reported as having equipped himself with a full growth of whiskers, befitting his new role of manager of the House of David team. Advices from Mineral Wells, Texas, indicate the long haired cult's representatives of the game have been in training, stating that Alex has been conditioning on no stronger fluid than the mineral water and has taken on the appearance of a well-conditioned athlete. All of which has resulted in more or less speculation as to whether the former major league pitching star will show enough stuff to stage a successful comeback in Organized Ball. It would be worth the price of admission to see Alex endeavor to stage a comeback in the majors, wearing the "spinach."

All baseball teams should be thrown open to the public as competition is the making of any team. Any kind of clicks on ball clubs will break up a winning machine, especially in a new club.

Fewer bases were stolen in the majors last summer than for any other season in history of the two big leagues, only 1,079 thefts being recorded. Maybe this is one of the reasons John McGraw has spent more time drilling his Giants in the art of base running this spring than at any other training session in the past decade.

There is talk around town of having a boxing bout at the Armouries soon. It would be a real drawing card as this time of the season, as the evenings are ideal for such sport.

They've never too old to try a comeback, the most recent veteran to attempt a return to the game being Fingi Bodie, former slugging outfielder who has been working out with Oakland of the Coast league in the hopes of catching on as a pinch-hitter.

If "Hank" Cohen up in Oshawa looked around town he would find plenty of senior material; such pitchers as Ogden, Mathews, Frink and our old friend Duke Dalnly, who still has a few good games in that old "south paw."

Here is a tip for the fans—if Sparky Adams holds up on the job the Cardinals will not attempt to reopen negotiations for a third baseman. If he shines in hitting, things look the same as last year. Frisch and Phillies for Art Whitney before the middle of June, in spite of Gerry Nugent.

As there is no intermediate A class league in Eastern Ontario, it is almost assured that Kingston will be in the Central League again.

The World's Champion Philadelphia Athletics may not only move their park to Camden, N.J., across the Delaware River, but also their baseball quarters. President Tom Shibe and Manager Connie Mack, have been studying details pertaining to the possible move and advantages, if proper arrangements can be made for the construction of a park capable of seating 50,000, they would favor moving the Athletics to Camden, N.J., lock, stock and barrel.

On the Sport Trail

At the meeting of the Fair Board on Thursday night it was decided to hold the race meet scheduled for the 3rd of June, one week later. Owing to the time lapse with those in charge it seems like bad business to change a date that has been utilized in Belleville since the Armistice. The King's birthday has been recognized as a city holiday and horsemen throughout the country have always laid plans to be present at the Belleville meet. Many of the horsemen in Ontario contemplate racing in Quebec this summer on account of the stake races and larger purses and when the meet was held on June 3rd, it was made this a stopping off place on the way up. The argument that horses will be in better shape at the later date is not a strong one to advance as some exceptionally good time has been made when the meet was held on the holiday. The air meet at Kingston would only be a small measure effect the attendance in this city.

Another question, which brought forth a heated argument, was the holding of Athletic Day for the Fair on Wednesday instead of the first day of the Fair. The Athletic Committee maintained that Wednesday was the proper date while the horsemen argued that it was splitting the show and that it probably would cause some of the horsemen not to enter. Athletic and field day is strictly an urban attraction, while a race meet usually attracts the rural dweller. As Wednesday will be a half holiday it would be expected that the city residents would turn out en-masse but with holiday on the athletic day on Tuesday, probably many of them could be induced to be present also. Both arguments are fair but the Board decided on Wednesday and every director and citizen will be pulling for the day to be as successful as last year. Harry Pearson, Chairman of the Committee is arranging for a number of real stars in their respective line to appear in this city. Special announcements will be made later.

The baseball situation in the C. O. R. L. becomes more complicated with every day and it is problematical if the league will functlon this year. In years gone by it was the strongest loop in the province outside of the International and it should continue. All the cities, Peterboro, Oshawa, Kingston and Belleville have enough sporting fraternity to maintain a team and it is good publicity for all concerned. The O. B. A. A. should bring pressure to bear on these cities not allowing them to play baseball unless it unless a senior team was maintained. It looks as if Oshawa will be frozen out of the intermediate Kingston will be the only barrel from participating in intermediate ball in that section. Peterboro and Belleville are ready to enter and the league should be formed one week from Monday when the delegates meet to select their officers and draw a schedule.

Referees of the caliber of Mike Rodden and Lou Marsh were conspicuous by their absence.

National Hockey League referees are also well paid for their services and they should conduct themselves properly off the ice as well as when appearing before a crowd. Mr. Calder, president of Hockey referees should hold the respect of all the players. It's a fact that some of them did not conduct themselves at all times in a manner to gain that respect. Surely with so many veterans of the game passing out of active competition each year there should not be a shortage in the recruit market.

Looking back over the National Hockey League season recently finished and which is now a thing of sports was the best ever experienced, one is impressed with the clean of referees being secured. There is no getting away from the fact that some of the officials on the 1929-31 payroll were incompetent and others, worse.

The class of hockey was of the highest and with a few exceptions all of the players performing in the ranks of the professional clubs conducted themselves as highly-paid athletes should. Supporters of the game did their part by increasing the attendances in general but, it cannot in truth be said that the officiating was as good as in former seasons.

Here is one for the old-timers to talk over:

Do you remember this?

A crowd of many hundred people has assembled, standing around the base lines and in the out field. Two ball teams on the field.

Umpire Cochrane—

Well, anyway, this is what happened away back on that July afternoon. Park Nine and G. T. R. were battling for the League leadership.

Park Nine were trailing by five runs until the hectic ninth, when they knotted the count and won out in the eleventh.

Now you know why Jimmie McGuire, the Junior Hockey player and Charlie LaFleur who played Junior Hardiand in KI-I-Leagues are in sport.

Don't be surprised if any evening while ambling down Pinnacle St., near the Arena you hear the ring of Steel.

It will be the Horse Shoe pitchers dropping them around the peg.

Last Years membership of the Horseshoe Club was around the two hundred mark and the players enjoyed a successful season.

There is no reason that we know of that this should not be a big season for the lovers of this game. With courts at the Fair Grounds and on Pinnacle St., and competitions from time to time, I should say they are set.

This is an interesting game and if you every try—well you are for it.

LEAFS CAPTURE 3RD STRAIGHT

Newark Bears Score First Victory Defeating Wings

Jersey City, April 18—Toronto's Leafs captured their third straight from Jersey City, but the six they acquired were sufficient to return Newark Bears to the first division. Skeeters, who only were able to score twice.

Warren Ogden went the route for the Leafs, giving seven hits and hanging up his 16th consecutive International League success.

Before being sold to the Giants in 1928, Ogden copped 13 in succession on the Coast.

His team made enough runs for him in one inning yesterday and keep his winning streak intact.

The Jersey Skeeters in the ninth round were carried by the vigilant visitors, but the last marker was a gift from Pittinger and Morrow.

Myles Thompson hit a home run into the right field seats for Toronto's fourth tally and Ogden began a drive and Eddie Perkins, left hander bought from the Athletics, by the third time he had to the fifth tilly.

Leafs Always in Front

The game was a very drab affair, with Toronto getting out in front and staying there and Jersey City making feel threatening gestures. Steve O'Neill and Ogden made their 1931 debuts in the eighth as pinch hitters, Manager Harris taking into a double play and the private drawing a pass that was handed to him with malice aforethought.

These two crowded Robb and Shevlin out of the proceedings and made it possible for Harry Davis and Cuyler Sheedy to do their first official fielding of the 1931 campaign, but no batting. Long before O'Neill called on the reserves, himself included, the team had lost to the ball game.

Newark, April 18—The Newark Bears scored their first victory of the International League season here yesterday, winning 3 to 2 over the Rochester Red Wings in a game which was called after seven innings because of darkness.

Carmen Hill, who had relieved Jra Smith on the mound for the Red Wings at the start of the eighth, walked Stevens and Layne, the last-named going in for Hargraves, to fill the bases.

April, in for Haugum, fanned, and Loepp lifted to the outfield, but Cohen drove in the deciding run by slashing a single to centre field.

Baltimore, April 18—The Orioles captured the third game of the series from the Montreal Royals here yesterday by a score of 2 to 1.

Luther Roy allowed the visitors only five hits, while Cissel and Lofton held the Royals to four.

Boyle's home run in the third inning accounted for the visitors' runs. Urbanski hit a four-bagger for Montreal with no one on base.

Reading, April 18—1930 rookie from Selma, of the Southern Eastern League, defeated the veteran George Kirsch in a pitchers' battle here yesterday when Buffalo won a third straight decision from Reading 4 to 1. Reading outhit its rivals 11 to 10, but was unable to connect safely in the pinches.

Ron Weighhouse hit a home run for Buffalo in the third with one man on base.

LIQUOR INSPECTOR DECLARED GUILTY

Fined for Wrecking Lock of Gas Tank—Had Beer in Car

CORNWALL, April 18—A mild sensation was caused here today by the announcement that Inspector Sidney Birkett of Ottawa an Inspector of the Liquor Control Board, was fined $100 on a charge of unlawful damage to property. He was fined $10 and costs.

George A. Stiles, K.C., counsel for Birkett and his brother, Wren Birkett of Ottawa and William A. McGannon of Montreal, told the court that he had been authorized to tell frankly the circumstances of the case.

The three accused, he said, went from Morrisburg last night to Wales, village east of the Quebec border, where refreshments were had at the hotel. A portion of this was consumed in Quebec, and a portion was consumed in the automobile when they returned to Ottawa.

At Glen Walter, they found that their supply of gasoline had run low, and stopped at a service station operated by Sandy Rouselle to replenish their tank. Rouselle, whose home adjourned the station, refused to answer their repeated knocking at the door and finally Geoffrey Birkett and McGannon broke the lock from the gasoline pump and took a quantity of gasoline.

The decision was unanimous this morning when the reception last night was terrible. Noisy as it could be. I'd keep the wind up somehow and it certainly was inclined to fade so cunning it all up but a night's reception wasn't so hot.

During the Canadian Pacific hour tonight the story of Belleville's early settlement will be told by Sir Edward Kigar in his "Cockalorum" over the line" the star of the featured selections. The time is from 3.30 until 4.30 through Toronto station.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, famous veteran Shakespearian actor will be heard over the Columbia International broadcast tomorrow noon, 12.30. The English singers will also be featured in this presentation. Madrigals of Elizabethan days, when England led the world in music will be played by the English singers, the Elizabethan madrigal group of London.

The Jesters after Amos 'n' Andy from WJZ and at 8 the Dixie Circus. Ben Bernie's band, classical, Hotcha Monath and at 8.30 a pianist and baritone and an organist from the Roxy and Gang and Don Voorhees. Sisters of the Skillet at 11.30 and Phil Spitalny's all-girl band.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

"I think it is wonderful, Peter; you ought to be proud and happy."

"I am proud, Kitty, but not happy—I can't be happy until you promise to marry me."

"Peter!" I protested.

"Won't you wear this?" he pleaded, holding out a pretty little solitaire.

I choked up; I wanted to cry.

"Oh, Peter, I'm sorry, dear boy, but I can't—I can't wear your engagement ring—I can't marry you." I managed to say.

It did hurt me to turn Peter down —so man was ever more sincere in a proposal.

And yet I couldn't see myself the wife of a plumber, living on my weekly wages, depending on his jobs, and at best making my home in a shanty little apartment.

There would be no trips, no parties and say times, no opening nights at the theatre, no high dishes—just getting meals and waiting for Peter to come home, over and over.

I had reasoned that Peter would make a scene when I refused him, but he did nothing of the sort.

"Well, Kitty," he said slowly, as he put the ring back in the little plush box and dropped it into his pocket, "there's a time when a man's dead sure we would be married, but after you began to go with that rich chap, the Parsons man, I was not so sure about it."

I couldn't think of anything to say to this.

"You always craved parties and a gay time and I suppose you will always have them when you marry him. If I didn't know he was a pretty square fellow I feel sorry for you—if I could feel any worse than I do——"

"Oh, Peter—don't talk like that—and the world is so full of nice girls —girls who would make you a much better wife than ever I could."

Peter's mouth twisted into a rather wry smile as he shook his head. "I'LL JUST WAIT."

"There's something queer about that, Kitty—the world don't full of girls at all—there's only one and I'm not lucky enough to get her."

"Nonsense Peter——"

"All right, I'll just wait around and if ever you need a friend call on me for anything——"

I clasped his hand and in an impulsive moment I kissed him.

He held me a moment and managed to force a little laugh as he broke away.

"I guess I'm kissing another man's girl—so long, and all the luck in the world."

I watched him as he walked out.

I wanted to call him back but why I felt like that I couldn't quite understand.

Why should I feel like crying over having to say good-bye to Peter Parsons that I wouldn't marry him? What girl would think of marrying a plumber when a handsome and wealthy society man was so madly in love with her?

That would be home before long. I had saved enough by this time to get some new dresses and I got them from Mrs. Miers at cost. Better yet, Mrs. Miers knew exactly what dresses suited me, and I felt that Thad would be delighted with me when he saw me in my new outfits.

I also received a telephone call while at work.

"Hello, beautiful," were his first words.

Thad's voice.

How it thrilled me!

"Welcome to our city." I answered trying to keep my voice steady.

A CELEBRATION

"Shall we have a celebration with our re-union, dearest?" he asked.

"Try to escape from me," I told him, with a laugh, as if I were joking. But I wasn't joking. I meant every word of it. Thad Parsons would never escape me if I could help it.

It was an evening wrap when he called that night and when I came from the ladies' room in the swank hotel without the wrap and one of the waiters brought it to me, I was popped. As soon as he got a chance Thad whispered, "You perfect doll!"

"But dolls are stuffed with sawdust, Thad," I protested.

"You are stuffed with sunshine and vitality and love and beauty."

"Adjectives!" I said to that.

"Truths!"

He pressed my hand for a moment and turned to order for us.

I caught sight of Molly Parsons just then. It surprised me for I had no idea that she even went to such fine hotels as this one.

I nodded and smiled at her and the man with her, who had met with his back to me, turned to see who it was that Molly was recognizing.

The man was Major Boyden!

He bowed and Thad saw and recognized him.

"Do you know him very well, Kathie?" Thad asked.

"I know he is an unusual man Thad," I said and told him honestly my experience with the major. I told how Dolly Hawkins had dug him up for me to be my "sugar daddy" and how when he learned that I was no longer a minor and he proposed he rejected me and that ended everything.

A WONDERFUL TIME

"I know, dear, you'd be like that. And who could blame Stephen or any other man for falling in love with you? Was Thad's comment.

I couldn't guess how much Molly Parsons or Major Boyden and I decided to tell her about him—that I'm not to be married, so that she wouldn't make a fool of herself.

I had a wonder time with Thad that evening. At the revival of a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, which Thad admired and which I had never heard before, we met Curt and Dixie Lawlor. To my surprise, Arline Sargent was with them.

We all went to a supper club after the performance. I found out that Arline and Thad were well acquainted. Thad had been inclined to be snooty to me at the Lawlor dinner—the only one there who acted that way to Viola and myself—but this evening she seemed to put herself out to be gracious to me. She danced quite a bit with Curt Lawlor and also a couple of times with Thad.

I also danced with Mr. Lawlor. He and Thad were quite chummy over all three of us. I noticed that Curt and Arline were careful not to show the deep interest in each other that they did down at the week end party at the Lawlor's Long Island place.

Thad left me at my home as usual —and, as usual, I was supremely happy. Thad had kissed me and murmured sweet words about how good it was to be back with me.

"I'm not going to leave you, sweetheart, be sure of that—see you Wednesday," were his last words.

I thought to myself that he could be good and sure I wouldn't let him lose me.

A USELESS WARNING

When I got to the shop the next day I didn't have to bring up the subject of Major Boyden to Molly, for the first chance she had, she asked, "How come you know Mr. Boyden?"

I told her that I had met him with Dolly Hawkins and Mr. Malvern.

"Don't waste your time on him, dearie," I advised, "he's married."

"Don't worry about me—I know all of my vegetables," was Molly's reply.

I said no more about it.

There was to be a fashion show. Mrs. Miers concern was to have a big part in it and the models would be wearing the Miers creations. We were decidedly excited over it because it would be held in Grand Central Palace and all sorts of people would be there.

Of course a great many buyers asked me to go out with them. Some were nice about it when I thanked them and told them that I never did that. A few would get cross and some would complain to Mr. Miers who would laugh them out of it. I have often heard him say, "My models are good models, if you get what I mean."

There was a Mr. Anson from Cleveland who was one of our best customers. He owned a chain of big stores in many cities. Twice he had asked me to go out and was never sore when I refused.

At this time he made such a big purchase that even the Miers were excited. Then he called me over. I expected the same old request. It wasn't quite the same.

A SURPRISE OFFER

"Would you go out with me if we had Mr. and Mrs. Miers along?" he asked. Mrs. Miers was standing near us and she secretly nodded to me. As I had no appointment that night I agreed.

This Mr. Anson was no more than forty and rather distinguished appearing. We had all that we could do to keep from laughing when fat Mr. and Mrs. Miers danced together. While they were dancing he leaned over to me and grabbed my hand.

I groaned, inwardly. The same old mush, the same old line, I thought.

"Katie," he said, "you know that I want you. To convince you of it I will first settle half a million dollars on you. What do you say to that?"

I stared at Mr. Anson.

Evidently he thought I had not heard or understood him, for he leaned nearer and pressed my hand again.

"I said, Kitty, that I wanted you," he repeated, "and I said that to prove my sincerity I would first settle half a million dollars on you. Now what do you say to that?"

"I say two things, Mr. Anson——" "Tut-tut—one little type will be sufficient," he interrupted.

"Two things," I insisted, "first, many thanks, and second, 'No.'"

"Why Katie!" he exclaimed, as if he couldn't believe any girl on earth would refuse such an offer.

"Why Mr. Anson!" I mocked him. "I mean it, my dear."

"And I mean what I said. More than that, Mr. Anson, you have an awful nerve! I'm feeling my temper now that the surprise was over. "A nerve to offer to make you rich!" he demanded in surprise.

"Yes—a nerve to go to any girl and say 'I want you,' as if she were a mere something on a counter for sale."

Mr. Anson coughed and turned red.

"I'm afraid I am dumb—you didn't think I was trying to buy you, did you?"

A MARRIAGE OFFER

"I didn't think anything else."

The music stopped and Mr. and Mrs. Miers were waddling back to our table.

"My dear girl, I want to marry you," Mr. Anson said, hurriedly.

That makes all the difference in the world, Mr. Anson."

"Then your answer will be 'Yes?'"

The Miers sat down. The applause had started the music again. To get away to finish the talk Mr. Anson asked me to go on dance with him.

"Since that makes all the difference in the world, my dear, you'll say 'Yes,' I am sure that I was so clumsy about it."

"Mr. Anson, I love you, I would n't marry you, Mr. Anson, although any girl likes to be asked, I'm sorry but I am already——"

"Engaged?" he asked.

"Yes," I said, knowing that it was not the time but feeling that almost any time now, Thad Parsons would make a formal proposal.

Mr. Anson's disappointment was great. I wouldn't have made such a fool of myself for the rubber crowd.

"You didn't make a fool of yourself, Katie," Anson replied. "Anything is being fixed, that's all," I stammered.

I had to tell this fib. There seemed to be no other way out of it for me.

Mr. Anson put me in a taxi but didn't ride home with me.

I went to Molly's desk in front of several of the girls. "Look at the world's biggest fool!" she pointed at me.

"Here's the girl who turned down a rich husband and half a million in her own name!"

"How did you know?" I blurted out.

Sleepless NERVES

The nerves themselves never sleep. The involuntary nerves must work all the time that vital organs would cease to function. It is only when sapped nerve force that the heart beats, the lungs breathe, and every other vital organs perform their natural functions.

The unfortunate condition is when you lack nerve force. The weak, irritated nerves will not let you rest, sleep. They give you only enough energy until sooner or later must result in Nervous Breakdown.

Sleeplessness and headache are the warning signs when the nerves go wrong. You may also have indigestion and feelings of fatigue. All the vital organs sooner or later show up, when nerve force is lacking.

The most certain restorative for the nerves is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It has proven effective in so many thousands of cases that there is no question of its merits.

GOES OUT OF FIXTURE SALE

City Gas Department Will Allow Dealers to Install and Sell

The gas department will go out of the sale of gas appliances as the result of a conference held today between the special gas committee appointed to deal with the question and the plumbers of the city. The city gas department has made a specialty of the sale of appliances in order to press the sale of gas in the past two and a half or three years. Following upon the decision of today the department will immediately go out of the business of selling stoves heaters and so forth.

Reason for the decision was given as the competition with the business men of the city.

It was pointed out to the dealers that the city's main interest in the sale of fixtures had not been to make money, the profits being not very large, but to develop a market for gas. Hence in going out of business, the department will allow the plumbers and dealers handling these fixtures to handle the sale in order to build up a market for the product of the local plant. It was also pointed out that without the competition the city gas department the dealers should keep their stocks of plumbing and of the ranges, heaters, and so forth at reasonable figures.

Dealers assured the special committee that they would watch their condition incident upon the department giving up this branch of business.

I wonder if we could get him on the radio, she sed.

Well Im sure Ive herd much worse coming from every quarter of the air, ma sed. It does my hart good to hear such an intelligent volume of sound coming from such a little feller, she sed. And the cutest part is, he seems to be getting more and more pleasures out of a good lusty crying fit. He indulged in it yesterday, and then never see a cross good aprtite, which I was around here this afternoon minding him for Gladdie, she sed.

It must be a real treat for the natives, pop sed. Its a shame that reminds me theres a woman next door to Gladdies who uses to anxiety defect children, not that I blame her in a way because she's got a of her own who are reely detestable. Her name is Mrs. Hemple and she never see on the telefone this afternoon after the baby had been crying almost 5 minutes, or 10 at the most.

Anyway she called up and inquired if something was wrong with the baby with such hellsby lungs as that? She seemed to be worried for such a reddy anser, and I went rite on and I red in her face that their sudden fancies just like the rest of us and we should respect their little whims and we expect ours to be respected, and naturerly little Willie Hemple is human and his lungs is scope is very limited, and all he can do is yell. Like anyone is to indulge in a good frank cry, I sed to her, and she usually had the sarcasm to reply, Well Id like to get a little sleep, thats my sudden fancy and I wish you'd respect it. And she slam on the fone without so much as by your leave and I promptly incorporated with my own receiver and calmly let the child have his cry out on me.

CANADA CEMENT CONCRETE FOR PERMANENCE

To the motorist, there it a no more welcome sight than a stretch of concrete paving. Tires grip and hold its even tractive surface in all weathers. Uphill or down, on the level, on straight roads or curves, wheels track true. Its light grey color gives better visibility at night. All of which means comfort as well as safety.

In addition, tests have proved that concrete paving means measurably reduced fuel consumption and less wear and tear on tires and vehicle.

While, to the taxpayer and municipal authority, it offers permanence and freedom from costly upkeep.

Advocate concrete paving and wider highways.

They Do Us More Good Than any other Medicine

Says Toronto Man Of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mr. McMullin Always Keeps a Box of Them in the House

Toronto, Ont., April 13 (Special)—What most people want these days is a medicine that they can turn to with perfect confidence in time of need. Mr. McMullen, 341 McRoberts Avenue, Toronto, has found such a remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills. He writes:

"We are never without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever we feel out of sorts we take them and find they do us more good than any other medicine. We have used them for years.

Your health, strength and vitality depend upon the condition of your blood, for it is through the blood that every part of the body is nourished and built up. To enjoy good health the blood must be kept pure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are an excellent blood purifier. They do not affect you like Liver or Stomach, they are just an effective Kidney medicine.

Saves $15,000 By Return-Card Proxies

Use of a business-reply return post card, bearing the form of a stockholder's proxy instead of the form with a stamped return envelope, has been adopted by the General Motors Corporation after a test of several months. On the call for the annual meeting on May 5, the corporation estimated yesterday that the saving on postage would be between $2,500 and $3,000, and on labor about four times those estimates or a total of $15,000 or more.

Payment of postage is required on only the cards returned. The company has about 370,000 stockholders and only about half of the proxies are returned.

RUTH CHATTERTON INSPIRES AUTHOR TO DRAMATIC HIT

Screen's Emotional Star Displays Versatility in Lead of John van Druten Play

"UNFAITHFUL" COMES HERE

The many admirers of Miss Ruth Chatterton will be interested to learn that she has just completed work on her new starring picture for Paramount. The picture is "Unfaithful", a gripping story especially written for Miss Chatterton by John Van Druten, the celebrated English dramatist and author of the stage play, "Young Woodley" and will be exhibited at the Belle, Monday and Tuesday, matinee daily. In this Paramount drama Miss Chatterton is given wide opportunity for the expression of her dramatic and emotional personality creating a role which she imbues with deep understanding and sympathy.

The story's plot, intelligently and imaginatively handled, is set against a background of modernly reckless society whose escapades and entanglements are woven into a drama of absorbing interest. It reveals Miss Chatterton as the wife of a debonair and popular English aristocrat who although unfaithful to his bride of several months, prevents her from demanding a divorce when he confesses that the "other" woman is her (Miss Chatterton's) own brother's wife. Miss Chatterton's vain efforts to find excitement and gayety in the mad social world of London, for which she is condemned and slandered by her husband's friends, and her unusual meeting with an earnest and sincere artist (Paul Lukas), who at first despises her and then falls in love with her build this story with tremendous effectiveness to an impressive climax that is well off the beaten track.

Miss Chatterton, with her usual skill, takes advantage of an excellent vehicle to further enhance her reputation as an actress of the first rank. As the central and dominant character in an astounding situation she is charmingly effective.

Miss Chatterton is ably supported by a well chosen cast. No better leading man could have been found for her than Paul Lukas who, as in "Anybody's Woman" and "The Right to Love", acquits himself with skill. Paul Cavanaugh, Juliette Compton and Donald Cook, all of them recruits from the legitimate stage add a distinctive quality to the acting in "Unfaithful".

John Cromwell, maker of "Street of Chance", "Tom Sawyer", "Scandal Sheet", and other Paramount successes directed "Unfaithful".

A funny Lloyd Hamilton Talkcomedy entitled "Ex Plumber", Belle Topical News, and "New Rhythm" a delicious delight will be exhibited on the same program, Monday night, is "Ladies Only Dresserware Night", at the Belle, all ladies attending Monday evening will receive one piece of the beautiful genuine Pyroloid Dresserware, absolutely free. There are no chances or lucky numbers every lady receives a gift. The complete set of Dresserware is now on exhibition in the window of Dolan the Druggist.

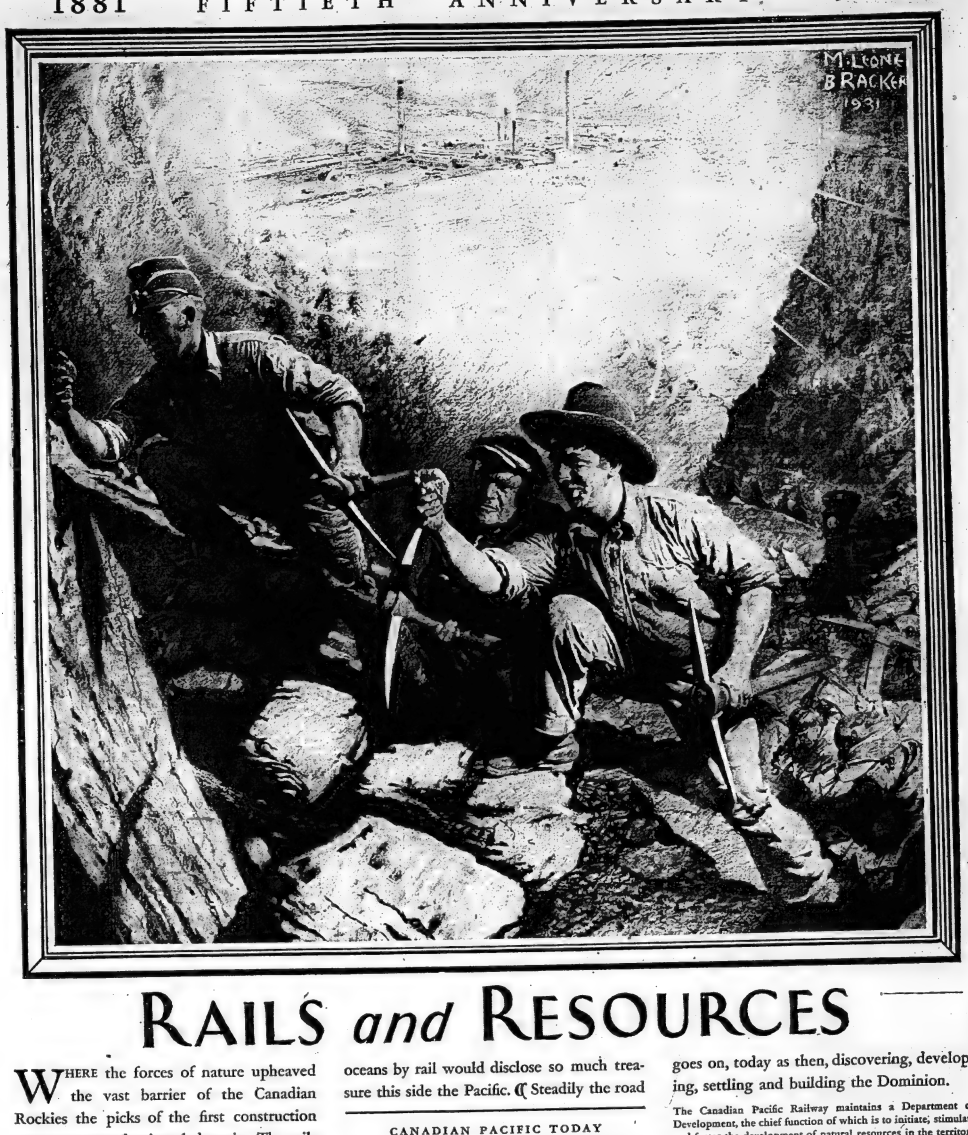
WOMEN'S SOCIETY JOHN STREET MET

On Thursday evening, April 16th the Thank Offering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of John St. Church was held in the church hall with a good attendance. The President, Mrs. Cook occupied the chair and with the Vice President, Mrs. H. Hill conducted a responsive Easter Service of Worship, followed by a number of the members of the C.G.I.T. group singing very sweetly the Negro Spiritual "We are Climbing Jacob's Ladder," after which Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop in a few well chosen words introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. (Dr.) Carscallen who in a most pleasing manner gave a very interesting and inspiring address telling something of the progress Christianity and education has made in recent years among the women of the Orient. A vote of thanks to Mrs. Carscallen for her splendid address was passed on motion of Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Buchanan. The offering was then received, Mrs. Gerrie playing Handel's "Largo." The meeting closed with the hymn "Breathe on me Breath of God" and prayer by Rev. Robt. Hall.

Delicious refreshments were provided by the social committee and served by the members of the C.G.I.T. group in uniform.

TODAY'S VERSE

THE ROBIN



A cheering song from the hill-top
Where the maple buds show red,
The lovely gleam of a red-breast
In the branches overhead—
And as I look and listen
To the robin's old-time strain,
New hope and faith and courage
Thrill the weary heart again.

That song, so sweet and tender,
Has bridged the span of years,
And with it comes the memory
Of all that life endears,
Of one who first in springtime,
And bird and bloom and bee,
Who taught me the joy of living
With heartfelt ecstacy.

Oh! bright and beautiful robin,
What dreams your warblings brings
Of Summer's rippling meadows
Where bob-o-link gayly swings;
The flash of your wing brings visions
Of life that's a joy to live,
And the songs that you lavish so freely
Teach us of our cheer to give.

RAILS and RESOURCES

WHERE the forces of nature upheaved the vast barrier of the Canadian Rockies the picks of the first construction crews uncovered mineral deposits. The rails that led to the mines subsequently furnished a means of developing and marketing their ores. ¶ No one ever dreamed that linking the oceans by rail would disclose so much treasure this side the Pacific. ¶ Steadily the road goes on, today as then, discovering, developing, settling and building the Dominion.

CANADIAN PACIFIC TODAY

The Canadian Pacific Railway runs from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. Its liners sail from Vancouver and Victoria to Japan and China, and from Montreal, Quebec and Saint John to Great Britain and the Continent. It operates winter cruises to the Mediterranean, the West Indies and Round the World, and a winter service to Bermuda. Its chateaux and hotels represent the latest word in comfort and luxury. Its telegraph service employs 225,000 miles of wire. Its express travellers' cheques are current all over the world. Canadian Pacific offices and agents are to be found everywhere.

The Canadian Pacific Railway maintains a Department of Development, the chief function of which is to initiate, stimulate and foster the development of natural resources in the territory served by its lines. The Department is continually engaged in obtaining and distributing reliable information regarding a wide variety of these resources, developed, partially developed, or wholly undeveloped, included under five main groups—minerals, forests, agriculture, fisheries and water power.

NAPANEE BOARD HEALTH LIFTS BAN

No New Smallpox Cases—Only Twelve Cases in All Reported

Napanee, April 18.—The ban which was placed on the amusement places owing to the outbreak of smallpox has been raised and the theatre and billiard rooms are again open to the public.

At the outbreak of the disease, the Board of Health decided that all pupils attending the public schools and collegiate institute must show certificates that they had been vaccinated or that they were immune before they could return to school after the Easter holidays. The Board of Education met the members of the Board of Health on the same day. The pupils in the schools there were not more than twelve cases and some of these were of a mild type. It is several days since the last case developed, with the result that the ban was lifted.

HELP SCHOOLS' HEALTH PROGRAM

Perhaps no country in the world is as concerned as ours about the health of its children. And to this end not all large communities, and in many smaller ones as well, the school authorities insist upon regular physical, sometimes even mental, examinations of all pupils.

Strange as it may seem, however, there are parents who resent this. Somehow they feel that such repeated examinations constitute a reflection upon their care of their own children. Often, too, when children are sent home because of a cold or for what is considered the beginning of the mumps, chickenpox or of some other contagious disease, mothers feel nettled.

Yet no parent should feel offended in the least if others are helping to keep their children in the best of health possible, no matter who those others may be. If the child is suffering from decayed teeth, for instance, it may happen that the mother has overlooked that fact even though she is careful about such matters and holds the best interests of her family at heart.

Eye strain, as another example, can be detected much more readily in school than at home. Various twitchings and general restlessness reveal themselves more markedly in the class room when the child is subject to strain and restraint. And certainly if the mind is not functioning as alertly as it should the teacher will be the first to notice that fact.

There can be no question but what the general advancements of a child is often hindered by the lack of cooperation of parents in regulating the child at home. Little ones often are inclined to go without their afternoon nap. In order to save fussing, children may not be induced to sufficient green vegetables, especially spinach. Often parents do not realize that a child cannot do its best work properly if the radio is going at the same time. Candy and several of all kinds are sometimes given to appease a child's nervousness or lack of poise. That the average child does not always get the early enough and sufficient rest is almost too well known to mention.

If you happen to be a parent who does not take the health work of the schools seriously enough, you should stop to consider how short-sighted such a policy is. The school only wants to help your child and you, by some have any other desirable motive.

Should you get a report that adenoids are present or enlarged, and that diseased tonsils should be removed, do not put it off but have the child operated on either at a clinic or by a private surgeon. If you do not believe the report to be true, check up on it by seeking expert medical advice elsewhere.

But do not adopt a do-nothing policy. If the school doctor or nurse says that defective hearing, sight, or whatever it may be, is hindering the child, have a talk with the teacher or principal. If need be, also be sure to do something about it.

It's time the little health disturbances in children that count for so much, be made discovered them and correct them early. These are the things that underlie future physical as well as mind development and lay the foundation for weaknesses and diseases that later in life.

The school wants to help you with your child's health. And so, work with the school all you can.

ability.

The big motor is powerful and economical, fast in pick-up and acceleration, with satisfying speed and remarkable smoothness. The body is large and roomy, with ample leg room, body room and head room. The seats and back are well upholstered and very comfortable.

The 6-11 presents an attractive appearance which is accentuated by the full sweep of the fenders, distinctive Durant radiator, fender lamps, and a harmonized beauty in colours, appointments and fittings.

Other features of the Durant 6-11 include light pressure steeldraulic brakes, two-way shock absorbers, velvet smooth clutch, and scientific spiral suspension.

In referring to this latest addition to the Durant line, Mr. Phil. J. Dugan, Sales Manager, Durant Motors of Canada Limited, states: "We are indeed proud to be able to present the Durant 6-11 with so many quality features at such a low price.

"In this type of vehicle, when automobile buyers are scrutinizing their investments more closely, the Durant 6-11 stands out as a supreme achievement in value giving. Not only does it offer a motor car now able to enjoy the advantages of more powerful and satisfactory performance and to step up the quality of appearance without leaving the low price six-cylinder field."

PROPERTY NEAR MARMORA YIELDS SAMPLES OF VALUABLE MARBLE

Marmora, April 18 (By Mail)—Beneath the unpromising surface of a swamp, what person anticipates the finding of much of monetary value and yet beneath one of the most swampy in Marmora Township which has the forbidding appearance of all other swamps lies buried what has proven to be one of the finest marble finds in the history of Ontario quarrying.

It is eighteen years now since the property was drilled at seven different sections in the front of Iron. Little of the sought mineral was found but marble was yielded in attractive quantities with varying hues, such as black, green and even purple, besides the clear white. The property is that of Mr. Denis McGrath and it adjoins the C.N.R. track about three miles north of the Marmora freight shed.

All these eighteen years, the cores some two and a half inches in diameter obtained through the use of a diamond drill have been kept by Mr. McGrath's drive house.

These were shown to an army of the curious taking a Sunday afternoon hike to the place now becoming famous. All to be seen at the scene of operations is the large drill which has been operating under the direction of R. Blomfield, one of the present engineers, for the past three weeks.

Difficulties inevitably had to be met with in operating this at first but from the third hole, which has been drilled an-eighteen feet core was removed on Saturday evening, the marble being reached 12 feet below the surface. This was of a beautiful greenish hue and the place from which it was taken is but two hundred feet from the railway track.

In the drilling which took place in 1913, marble was obtained as deep as 125 feet between the surface and the natural marble formation but Mr. McGrath's residence were also sampled.

Interesting developments of Marmora's new project are being eagerly awaited. Two miles to the south is Deseronto, the rock quarry which has been operating little over a year and this venture has been met with a good measure of success.

THRILLS, LAUGHS DOUBLE DELIGHTS IN OAKIE LATEST

"Rango" Primitive Tale Bristles With Action-Thrills

The country pumpkin invades Chicago and bombards the racketeers.

Jack Oakie's back-and-forth, dominier than ever! He smacks the underworld with wisecracks in "The Gang Buster," which opened to a large audience at the Belle Theatre last night.

If you've been reading the papers, you've some idea of the kind of comedy the grin and chin boy keeps in his new starring picture, but you have no idea of the fun he gets out of it until you see "The Gang Buster". It's bursting with laughs.

You've heard of gangdom taking its victim for "ride"? Oakie takes gangdom for a 'ride'. It's a "Joy-ride" for you. Yes there are thrills too and suspense, but everything begins and ends in a great big guffaw.

That much heralded epic of the film world, "Rango", is being exhibited on the same program for good measure and captivated all with its magnificent scenes of grand entertainment.

"Rango" is a picture without parallel. There has never been anything quite like it either silent or talkie. It deals with the lives and habits of man and wild beasts in a part of the world-Sumatra, in the Dutch East Indies that has never been feature filmed before, as far as we know.

There is comedy, pathos, tragedy every ingredient of the truly success ful picture and that same picture was set forth in such a manner as to reach the mind and heart of the young as well as the old the theme of "Rango" is ageless and lends itself to the picture's greatness.

The close chapter of the popular 'Spell of the Yukon' serial, a Buck Jennett brevity in color, and an up-to-minute Pathe news reel are being exhibited on the same program.

The entire program is repeated tonight for the last time, and is well worth seeing.

ALBERNA THREAT IN BASKETBALL

CALGARY, Alta., April 18.—(By the Canadian Press)—In a little Mormon foothills town in Alberta are hopes for the Canadian basketball title—with Raymond Jack, Jack Fay down in the southwest corner of the province, Raymond has taken the Alberta title right under the lee hold down, and this year the chances of progressing farther appear brighter.

Old Cliff Nalder, somewhere in his 30's is the only member of the Jacks who is older than 22 years. He has played with Jacks for eight seasons and has been in the senior game longer than anyone but their pilot, Dave Powelson, who took charge of the junior team in 1920.

This season the Jacks have largely a new personnel. For Dick O'Brien and Reed Kirkman, 21-year-old driving forwards, and for Dean Rolfson, 20-yearold guard, it is the first year in senior company. Bernie Hague who is 23 and a guard, is playing his first season with the Jacks but has had senior experience at Cardston, Alta.

Donny Nilsson and Sam Fairbanks, who both alternate as forward and guard, have been with Jacks two years or better. Each is 22 years old. "Wit" Hague a year older, has played the senior game for five years as guard, but is comparatively a newcomer to the Union Jacks. Hague is two inches under six feet, but makes up for the rest of the squad touches the even 72 inches except Nilsson, who goes five inches higher.

Vith the Jacks, who ousted University of Alberta in the provincial play-off a month have scored an average of 51 points per game this season against 37 for opponents. In ten years they have lost but 27 of 178 games, many against high-class north west senior opposition. In the Canadian playdowns, the Jacks meet the winners of the Manitoba-Saskatchewan-Thunder Bay area on April 10 and 11.

SHOW INCREASE GRAIN LOADS

C.N.R. Reports Big Increase in Bushels Carried

Winnipeg, Man., April 18—A large increase in the amount of grain marketed along the lines of the C.N.R. since August 1st 1930, as compared to the figures for the same period of the previous year is indicated in a grain report issued today by T. F. White, superintendent of car service for the Canadian National Railways. A total of 151,399,008 bushels of grain were marketed this year while 1930 figures were only 106,150,000 bushels. Loadings for 1931 show an even greater increase, with 120,961,000 bushels loaded in 88,788 cars as against the 79,059,000 bushels loaded in 56,384 cars last year. Storage figures for the present season are practically the same as last year with 30,437,000 bushels in store compared to the 30,300,000 bushels in store at this time last year.

Vancouver has been more important as a shipping point during the 1930-31 season and 17,641 cars have been loaded there as against a total of the 9,218 cars unloaded in the British Columbia port last year.

A total of 14,053,000 bushels are in store at Vancouver at present with seven boats loading. The first shipments of grain from Prince Rupert are expected this week, and the first boat of the season the "Welsh City" is expected there for a cargo of grain tomorrow. Prince Rupert storage figures are given as 1,166,000 bushels.

With the official opening of navigation at the head of the lakes yesterday five boats cleared with approximate cargoes of 2,000,000 bushels. Ten boats are loading and seven more are located waiting to be loaded with a total of 79,087,000 bushels is stored in elevators at the Lake Head.

TO CONNECT NORTH AND SOUTH DEPOTS

BOSTON, Mass., April 18.—Travellers destined to points on either side of Boston will soon be enabled to make a quick dash across the city from North to South Stations or the other way around, may find relief under a bill now being considered by the Transportation Committee of the state legislature. The measure provides for the building of a tunnel under Boston from North to South, connecting the Boston & Maine road with the New York, New Haven and Hartford and Boston and Albany railroads.

The idea of a connecting tunnel underneath Boston has been gathering impetus as unofficial studies have been made of the problem. The committee are convinced that Justification exists for moving some of the electrification of the railroads serving the city, connecting the roads by means of an electrified tunnel.

Another matter on which the committee has been working is that of trackless trolley lines. The trackless trolley can be made to use former street railway lines where the overhead wires have been removed, though the rails are gone, and has a promising element of economy.

IN APPRECIATION OF A GREAT VICTORY

A thoughtful presentation took place Wednesday night at the banquet tendered in Montreal to the Canadiens Hockey Team, winners of the Stanley Cup for the second time in succession and which is emblematic of the Professional Hockey championship of the World.

Each player retaining the trophy in Canada and for the splendid showing made by the individual players of the team, the Gillette Safety Razor Company of Canada, Limited, presented each member of the team with a beautiful Razor and complete shaving outfit. Each set was imprinted with the individual's name in gold leaf lettering.

The presentation was made by Mr. J. S. Lavene, Managing Director of the Company who said "I do not know of a better way to show our appreciation of the very fine performance of the Canadiens team than this token—as it is indeed a privilege and a pleasure to do our bit by presenting to each player a Gillette Safety Razor."

Congratulations for Mr. Lavene presenting gift to Howie Morenz, the great scintillating star, while Cecil Hart, manager of the successful team, looks on.

PANIC IN TROLLEY CAUSED BY BLAZE

Two Hamilton Passengers Hurt—Stampeded Blocks Doors

Hamilton, April 18—Two passengers were injured and others severely shaken up today when a short-circuit in the car at the corner of Aberdeen Avenue street car caused a flare of fire which resulted in a wild scramble to escape.

The car was travelling east on Hrabert Street when the trouble occurred. There was a loud report and a blinding flash of fire. For a moment it appeared as though the interior of the car was ablaze, and the occupants made a dash for the doors only to find both exits closed.

Joseph Spain, the motorman and conductor were of no avail and the occupants stampeded at front and rear doors, making it impossible for the car crew to open the door controls.

Warren Nelson, of 22 South Street, was attempting to open the back door when other passengers crushed him against a window, and he sustained lacerations to his hands and arms when he went through the glass.

A woman whose name was not learned fell in an attempt to reach the front door and was in danger of trampled on by other passengers.

There was a mad dash for the street when the doors were finally thrown open, the firemen were called to extinguish the small blaze in the control box.

George H. Smith, general manager stated that the car was not equipped with modern safety devices being of the old type. New cars are equipped with improvements and experimentally opens exits in such emergencies.

BUFFALO CANCELS CANADIANS' VISAS

Commuters Must Show Two-Year Employment Across Border

Fort Erie, April 18—United States immigration officers at Buffalo plan to deport all Canadians employed to work on the American side who have not been continuously employed for the past two years, it was learned today. Commuters crossing the river daily report that there has been a general check-up during the past few weeks by federal men who have stated that all those who cannot show their records do not allow continuous employment over the river for that period.

Only two cases of rejection have been reported to date, one of which is the case of an Italian youth who claimed he had been employed over the river for the past ten years, but who was refused admission when he sought to cross today.

Another case is that of a man born in Scotland who, with his wife and three children, who relaxed on Monday when he sought to re-enter United States after a visit to Bridgeburg. In this case, however, it was learned that the man had previously been refused by United States immigration men to be deported to Scotland, and his visa had been lifted when he made the application.

Hamilton Audience Cheered Col. Bishop When He Appeared

HAMILTON, April 18.—The threat of the most disastrous loss to Canadian aviation since the war, hung over an awed audience in the Royal Connaught Hotel for half an hour to-night.

Lieut.-Col. W. A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., and the Dominion's greatest ace who was to address the Hamilton Aero Club failed to arrive. Within a few minutes came a word that he had been seriously injured in a motor accident at St. Catharines.

A thrill of horror swept the gathering for in the party in addition to Col. Bishop were three of Canadian aviation's greatest personages —J. A. Wilson, controller of civil aviation; Col. D. J. Joy, inspector of civil aviation and Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, newly-appointed administrator of the Security Frauds Prevention Act, and noted author and speaker.

Hero though he has been of countless functions and ceremonies since his triumphant return from a glorious record overseas, Col. Bishop has never entered a hall amid more genuinely joyous applause than greeted him when—the hour late—he strolled coolly in upon the agitated gathering—unhurt.

The car in which the four had been riding had been virtually demolished in a collision it was explained, but all four escaped injury. They were forced to continue the trip in another machine.

IMMEDIATE SALES IMPRESSIONS ARE CREATED BY DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Buying Follows Close Upon Reading

Present day business conditions demand keen discrimination in the selection of advertising media. All other considerations are subordinated to that of---RESULTS.

Immediate sales are the goal. Every dollar must do a real selling job.

To-day, more than ever, manufacturers and retailers insist on direct cash returns from their advertising investment.

The daily newspaper stands out as the medium which best meets cash-register requirements.

Daily newspaper advertising spurs to immediate action.

It influences men and women to buy now the products advertised.

Response from daily newspaper advertising is assured. Business executives know that daily newspaper advertising moves to action vast groups of people quickly.

Manufacturers and retailers are analyzing their advertising investment more thoroughly to-day than ever before. They are insistent that their advertising must sell—and they know that the daily newspaper is the one sure medium for that purpose.

MAYOR GREETED MANY FAMOUS CHURCH HEADS

His Latest Official Duty Was to Welcome Moderator

FREEDOM OF CITY

During the term of office of the mayor there are many occasions on which he has to represent the city before visitors and in his little over a year in office Mayor Reid has had many functions of this kind to attend, a good share of these being events of a religious character. He has last year and this year welcomed the Bishop from China, officiated at the Hebrew synagogue, greeted delegates to a Baptist convention, welcomed his Excellency Most Rev. Andrea Casulo, D.D., official delegate of the Church of Rome and presided at Salvation Army functions. This week he was called upon to greet on behalf of the city no less a personage in the religious world than the moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Rt. Rev. Frank Baird, D.D.

This last occasion was at St. Andrew' Presbyterian Church of which Mr. Reid is a prominent member and official. His welcome however was on behalf of Belleville.

His greeting to Dr. Baird was couched in the following terms:

"The Right Reverend Frank Baird, D.D.,
Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

"I wish to express my pleasure in having a visit from you, who hold the high position as the presiding representative of the great Presbyterian Church in Canada.

"This position you are eminently fitted to fill. On looking up your history, I find that you were born on a farm of Scotch and Irish descent, educated in the different schools and colleges in the Maritime Provinces, graduated from Pine Hill College, Halifax, and from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

"You are thus one of that great band of intellectuals, who in church and state, in our colleges and in our courts, have emblazoned the name of New Scotia like that of her elder namesake on the arcoils of fame of the world at large.

"The different charges you have had and the positions in the church have eminently fitted you for the most honoured position the church can bestow upon you.

"In this fair country you are the representative of the Presbyterian Church and occupying this position your time must be fully taken with the numerous demands requiring your personal attention so that the fact of your presence here in Belleville is regarded as a compliment, not only to the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, but to the city at large.

"In the reception tendered you, many not of your own church have co-operated and we are proud to say that in this city we dwell in peace and harmony with one another.

"Let me express the hope that your visit to this city may be both pleasant and profitable and that you will carry away with you many happy memories of this evening spent with us in Belleville.

"In conclusion, as chief magistrate of this enterprising municipality, I again welcome you and confer on you the freedom of this city.

(Sgd.) Geo. A. Reid,
"Mayor."

YOUNGSTER IS STRUCK BY CAR ACCIDENTALLY

Betty Beacock of Stirling is Brought to Hospital

INVESTIGATED

Ran Directly in Path of Auto Driven by Mrs. Thomson

Betty Beacock, three and one half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Beacock, Stirling, is lying in the Belleville General Hospital in a serious condition, sustaining severe lacerations on the limbs, bruises on the back and possibly internal injuries, when she was struck by a motor car driven by Mrs. Thomson, 248 Foster avenue of this city. Mrs. Thomson was in no way to blame for the accident as the little tot ran into the rear of her car while passing around the rear of another car on her way home across the road. The accident occurred shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon and Traffic Officer Frink hurriedly went to the scene. He investigated the circumstances allowing Mrs. Thomson to proceed without any delay being laid. Dr. Carleton of Stirling, was called and after his aid had been given, the child was removed to the hospital, where she is resting as comfortably as can be expected today.

The little child with Ursula Coulter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rose Coulter, was playing near the mill pond in Stirling, when Mrs. Coulter, who was driving eastward in her car stopped to speak to the child up to her home for supper. Little Betty started for home and dashed around behind the car and in front of the time Mrs. Thomson was proceeding in a westerly direction. The child ran directly into the path of the Thomson car and Mrs. Thomson, entirely by surprise made every human effort to avoid striking the child, but in vain as the car was under way before the manoeuvering. The child was thrown heavily to the road, but Mrs. Thomson picked the child up and carried Betty to her home across the road. Dr. Carleton was soon in attendance.

TEN DAYS FOR THEFT

Edward Bradley was sentenced to ten days in the county jail today by Magistrate Ponton. Jack was being charged with the theft of a suitcase and articles from Wilson Kelso, Bridge street, and found guilty of the offence, Levi Burrett at whose place the articles were found that he saw the man taking the suitcase from the house, which Mr. Kidd gave evidence to the effect that the man had been given permission. The accused stated that he took the case because a man called Craig or Craig's brother wanted a suitcase to use on a boat and it was suggested to him that he could go by turning the same, after Craig had left town. Kelso state that such was not the case as he told Bradley to bring the case back or he would inform the police. The affair took place on Friday, the trial being held on Saturday afternoon.

PREACHED TO ARMY

Colonel D. McAmmond, Field Secretary for the Salvation Army for Canada East conducted the service this morning, afternoon and evening at the local citadel under the auspices. Regular evangelistic services were held in the Bridge Songster Brigade and the Army band took no small part. Colonel McAmmond, who is a forceful speaker, is one of a long line of the terrible "Empress of Ireland" disaster when the vessel was sunk in the St. Lawrence in 1914, just at the outbreak of the war. Colonel McAmmond was only a boy at the time but a hundred members of the Army were drowned in the catastrophe.

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH MARKS 116TH ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDATION IN THIS CITY

Dr. J. C. L. Bates of Japan Was the Special Speaker

There are few churches in the Province of Ontario which can boast a celebrated one hundred years of service but yesterday Bridge Street United Church marked the 116th year of its foundation, with large congregations at both services. A distinguished guest and speaker Rev. Dr. J. C. L. Bates, D.D., who has spent more than 30 years as a missionary in Japan was the special speaker and his message was enlightening of that far off country, the speaker having caught the spirit that today is sweeping over that country. He said the people of Japan are looking to the western hemisphere for guidance. Dr. Bates was assisted by the resident minister of the church, Dr. R. H. Bell and Dr. Charles Read, of Albert College. A delightful service of song was given at both services by the choir under the direction of Professor Anwith Professor Hines at the organ rendering two anthems at the morning service, which the choir contributed a solo. The pulpit table was suitably decorated with spring blooms and the messages that Dr. Bates delivered will be remembered a long time.

Eyes Upon Japan

Speaking at the morning Dr. Bates described the "Kingdom of God Movement in Japan," while the evening message was devoted to the communism and other evils that exist that great country of Japan. Dr. Bates declared it was an honor to preach the services for the 116th anniversary, remarking that it was a wonderful thing to have such a venerable and honored history from which much inspiration can be derived. He prayed for the continuance of that inspiration and that in the next century the church might go on to greater things and more to do the work that is hers in this hemisphere. Dr. Bates stated that he brought a message from the other side of the sea, which by the support of all peoples on this side, has made possible the enlightening influence that is rapidly spreading. "The eyes of the Christian world are upon Japan today," declared Dr. Bates, "not in anxiety or apprehension but with expectation and hope for the future. At the present time we are living in a most confused period and there is no doubt that when the wise men of affairs have been gathered together with confidence as they exist today. The system under which we have been living is in most disappearing as it is breaking down. There are evils some of rest out of work who should be employed and the big men of affairs are looking for advice to find a way out of the difficulties that are making free trade and protection in the same boat. The condition is not all economic but social and religious and we are in the midst of a revolution that is turning the world upside down."

Challenge to Faith

"The text Repent ye for the Kingdom of God is at hand' was never more applicable than today, and it has been incorporated in the Kingdom of God Movement in Japan, which was launched in January of last year. It is challenging the faith of America and Great Britain and other Christian countries. Today in Japan," said Dr. Bates, "these Christians are young and it was not until 50 years after the founding of the Bridge Street Methodist Church, that Christianity began to influence Japan. It was then a great hope, for a better understanding of the Kingdom of God and there is a challenge to the great force that is developing Russia and China and now beating on the doors of Japan. There has arisen a man in Japan who is not afraid of these things and has given absolutely of himself to the Christ whom he has seen."

"The movement is significant because of the message which is one of emancipation and one that is coming from the Kingdom. The poor are turned to St. Luke 4 where it is recorded Jesus read and told his listeners to preach to the poor.

FAMOUS BOXER ARRESTED IN PINECROFT INN

"Frenchy Belanger is Implicated on Shooting Affair

MYSTERY MOTIVE

(Canadian Press)

Brantford, Ont., April 20. William Cooke, co-owner of Chicory Inn, Hamilton highway road house, held on a charge of shooting with intent as a result of shooting affray at the roadhouse early Sunday morning, was remanded for a week on bail of ten thousand dollars, when he appeared in police court here today. Five other Toronto men, held as material witnesses, were released on bail of one thousand dollars each. They are, Albert "Frenchy" Belanger, Melville Campvile, Richard Ashcroft, Harry Fries and Charles Brown.

The police were told by Cooke that Campbell, owner of the Pinecroft Inn, a neighboring roadhouse, and "Irish Crowd", five men and a woman, had attempted to gain admittance to the Inn with the intention of wrecking the place. Cooke said he fired shots in the air when he had fired through a window over a door where Cooke stood.

Toronto, April 20 —Pistol shots fired in the air to frighten guests at the Chicory Inn, near Port Credit, at Sunday night, resulted in provincial police running from another 300 feet away. They found Oscar Campbell, owner of the Pinecroft Inn, another highway roadhouse, standing on the travel drive with a bullet in the groin.

Two men and one woman in Campbell's party were immediately arrested and taken to Brampton charged with vagrancy charges by Provincial Constable Jones. Also With them went William Cook part owner of the Chicory, charged with shooting Campbell. The latter was hurried to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, where he was operated upon for removal of the .32-calibre slug in his groin.

"Frenchy" Belanger former Canadian and world lightweight champion pugilist was a companion of Campbell. The others were: Melville Campbell, Richard Ashcroft, Parliament Harry Fries, Mona Brand and his wife, and Gerald Brown, Hamilton. All but Cook, who appeared last night in custody and are to appear before Magistrate J. W. Bull in Brampton at 10 o'clock this morning.

Motive is Mystery

Provincial police last night professed themselves at a loss for a reason behind the shooting and mauling in view of the following contradictory evidence.

Harry Shean, employe at the inn, declared that Campbell's gang was pursuing the host with a baseball bat when he was wounded and members of his party assaulted the owner of the inn from inside. Cook, however, asserted that he had fired through a window to frighten the crowd outside and that Campbell was accidentally shot.

Cook, which is alleged to belong to Cook, is now in the possession of the police, but last night no revolver had been found. Cook's wife, Campbell party had been found, spots of blood were also found on the roadway floor at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon suggested investigators that either someone in the place had been grazed by a bullet or had been struck and kept his injury to himself.

Then the police arrived at the roadhouse door as his "pillbox." Cook fired through the panes at the Camp party, police declared. There was a small bullet hole through the glass at the level of the door, police yesterday morning. Constable Allen said, but when he entered after lunch that pane had been knocked out although there was no glass on the door on the east side of the vestibuls had also apparently been shot out.

DENY REPORT FROM CAPITAL

Chatham, Ont., April 20—Denial was given today by Sydney A. Moore, Chatham manager of Canadian Pacific Railway Co. MINISTER PLANS TO CALL UNEMPLOYMENT CONFERENCE

Prairie Mayors Press for Immediate Relief

DURING SESSION

Conclave Likely to Take Place Within Few Weeks

(Canadian Press)

Calgary, Alta., April 20. — Hon. Gideon Robertson, minister of labor in the Dominion government, anticipates calling a Dominion-wide conference on unemployment before the close of the present session of parliament, according to Premier J. E. Brownlee.

Returning from Ottawa, Premier Brownlee met Mayor Davidson, of Calgary, and Mayor Simmons, of Lethbridge, in conference over the week-end. Both mayors pressed upon the provincial premier the need of more assistance in meeting the unemployment situation. They decided a proposal for a conference between mayors and premiers in abeyance until Mr. Robertson announced his decision. Premier Brownlee said it was virtually certain the conference would be called within a few weeks.

No decision to call a Dominion-wide conference on unemployment has been made, Hon. Gideon Robertson, minister of labor, stated today when informed of a despatch from Calgary suggesting such a conference.

"It is the first I have heard of it," said the Minister. "I have no knowledge of a statement that it is was made it was done so without authority. No such decision, Premier Brownlee said it was virtually certain the conference would be called within a few weeks.

FIRE RAGES IN NORTHERN TOWN HEAVY DAMAGE

Hotel and Railway Depot At Callander Consumed

NORTH BAY HELP

Wind Shifts Flames and Homes are in Direct Path

NORTH BAY, Ont., April 20.—(CP)—Fire, breaking out at ten o'clock this morning, destroyed the hotel and large section of the town of Callander, eleven miles from North Bay. Already the Pacific Hotel has been destroyed and the Canadian National Railway Station, and the flames are now sweeping over the buildings to the south. The blaze was fanned by a strong wind of the lake, and buildings are generally of frame construction in this town, and burn like tinder, easily. Damage so far is estimated at $100,000. Fire Department officials Help has been despatched from North Bay.

Fire was still spreading at 1.45 this afternoon and the toll so far includes Callander Hotel, the old Pacific Hotel and G.M.R. station. Wind shifts have been extremely shifting and had carried the flames away from the business section, which previously had been in the direct line of the fire. The Presbyterian Church, Methodist Church and the parsonage along with a number of other homes are in direct path of the blaze and the loss is expected to run into many thousands of dollars. The North Bay fire brigade responded with pump, to call for aid, but the water is locked too far back from the lake for the pumper to be effective.

BLONDE BATTERS BEAUTY PARLOR

Claims She was Made Like Clown—Justice Relents

Claims She was Made Like Clown—Justice Relents

New York, April 20—A 23-year-old blonde, who says she was unceremoniously of "Mary Smith" stood embattled before Magistrate Augus Dreyer today and told why she wrecked a Broadway beauty parlor Saturday.

"Look at me," she cried, "I'm a blonde. I asked to have my hair dyed brown. They put me down arched and for a face treatment. They black my eyebrows. My face burned. My brows didn't arch. Why should I look like a clown? Am I going to be a clown? They promised to do it over again. I waited. They promised but paid no attention."

The court suggested mildly that the proper course would have been to sue the beauty parlor, took into consideration the blonde's youth, the woman's night in jail and suspended sentence.

DISTRESSING FIRE

The Dominion Fish Hatcheries on the Kingston Highway, are busy these days distributing trout by air. The bakes of millions of these fry are placed in the waters but a great percentage of them never get a chance to reach maturity as they have so many enemies. However, there were 18 not for the hatcheries the trout would become extremely scarce. Whitefish fry distribution is also finished, officials at the hatchery said today. These fry are placed in the Bay of Quinte. At the present time hatchery men are taking in pickerel spawn.

RENDERED SOLO.

Mr. Alfred Evans, popular young soloist, rendered a beautiful number at the evening service at St. Thomas Anglican Church, last night. Mr. Evans took for his selection, "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth."

DRIVER ESCAPES.

Two cars driving too close to the centre of the highway was the cause of an accident near Marysville on Saturday night, but the driver alleged to have caused the accident was not apprehended. Miss Margaret Galbraith, Newburg, was driving east on the King's Highway while an unknown car was travelling west. The unknown car crowded over the centre line and sideswiped the Galbraith car tearing off a rear fender. Traffic Officer Frink was notified and went to the easterly limits of the city, stopping all the cars. Eventually a car was stopped, the driver of which had helped Miss Galbraith out of the ditch, stating the driver of the unknown car a chance to slip out of the police net. No one was injured in the accident as the Galbraith car was not thrown into the ditch.

GAS STATION ENTERED

A gas service station owned by D. & L. LaRue, Dundas Street, was broken into last night and seven and one half gallons of gas were taken. The pumps were locked and when Mr. LaRue opened them early today, one of the locks had been broken. The theft was reported to the police but those responsible for the break were not apprehended.

SUFFERED STROKE

John Howard, caretaker of Carnegie Public Library suffered a paralytic stroke early today in the Rifle' cafe on Front Street. He was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in the ambulance and his condition is reported as critical. Mr. Howard, after completing his work at the Library, went over to the restaurant for his breakfast, the time being shortly after seven o'clock. He partook of some food but before completing his meal fell from his chair with a stroke. Dr. Connor attended to him.

BRIDGE ST. CHURCH

"When a church surrounds itself with luxury and ecclesiastical indulgence, and fails to preach to the poor that church has lost its mission. The gospel has ceased to be a message of consolation when poverty is stalking at the door and Dr. Kawago, the leader in this movement has stripped himself of everything and gone down to the poor's level.

"Religion is foolish to the masses," reads an inscription over a temple in Russia and there is the great charge that communism is making against christianity. In 1917, it was administered that way, since the people of Japan will not take it. The socialist tells us that poverty is the world's great social sin and it is time that we got rid of it. Christianity is coming today with a new and significant force and unless we find a way out and quickly, we will be deeper in the mire."

Poverty Prevalent

"Poverty is wide-spread in Japan," declared Dr. Bates, "and the people of that country get away from it by suicide. Child suicide is also very prevalent in Japan, but it has not the same disgrace that it has in this country. The movement is also a social emancipation for it is setting the slaves free. We thought that all the slaves were free but such is not the case, and it is the gospel of Jesus Christ that is setting them free. The movement is also a political emancipation for Christianity in that country is giving it a real democracy based on mutual co-operation and not on competition. The success of the movement is the head is Dr. Kawago and in all his speeches he rejects socialism's physical force to gain the mastery."

Challenge to World

"Communism is challenging the religious, social and moral foundations of the universe", said Dr. Bates continuing his address in Bridge Street United Church last night. The Christian missionary to Japan, he is working to break down the communistic influence and is gradually succeeding. Communism repudiates the idea of God, it says all complex must be annihilated, and it holds no opposition in order to obtain its own ends. In the Christian world, under the leadership of Dr. Kawago, a central personality, Christianity is coming to Japan".

"Communism is not a superficial or a trifling movement, it is based on a great philosophy, it rejects religion and God, and the whole system of ethics and morality, and places in their stead the doctrine of hate, the great idea of "sharing-together" and the total obliteration of poverty."

Continuing Dr. Bates said that leaders in Russia have great power, living on a maximum salary of three hundred rubles a month. "The communists have set up an order of society in which it is a shameful thing to own property. What is ahead for Communism can only be told by history but living twenty-five hence but obviously it is being more firmly established in Russia now. Whatever aims may be made for the proletariat, is a price that cannot be overlooked. Communism does not embrace those things which are of greater value."

Apostle of Slums"

"The great hope lies in the fact that in the midst a man has arisen who has so fully consecrated himself, that he is ready to stand up against the Communists, devoting his whole life to Christ. He has sought out the vision at fifteen years of age and has realized the remarkable significance of Christianity. He explored the slums in his youth and became known as "The Apostle of the Slums". He wrote a book which realized in three months seventy-opposition raising ten million dollars for the removal of the slums. At the time of the great earthquake in Tokio in 1923, he saw something of the results of the terrible disaster when one hundred and sixty thousand were killed and one million, two hundred thousand rendered homeless within twenty-four hours. He made an appeal and shortly afterwards a boat load of supplies was a on the way. The Buddhist image of the Goddess of Mercy was formed by the ashes of thirty-five thousand who perished from one building when their escape was cut off."

Dr. Bates stated that while Dr. Kawago is in Japan assisting in the earthquake, he preached in the Christian Churches and succeeded in converting five thousand during this hideous appalling' period. "He is seeking to win a million souls for Christ to form the basis on a new Christian order in Japan," said Dr. Bates in conclusion.

Dr. R. H. Bell, pastor of Bridge Street, paid his special tributes to Dr. Bates and also to Dr. Baker, pastor of Bridge Street forty years ago.

The history of Methodism and the growth of Belleville are closely entwined in the history of Bridge St. Street United Church, which yesterday celebrated its 110th anniversary. The church dates back to 1820, was not standing one hundred and sixty years ago. There was no erected until 1857, although on the 15th of May, 1820, Bridge Street Methodist church was opened for worship on the lot upon which the church stands. This former church was burned to the ground on the 8th of January, 1856.

Formed Nucleus

Five years before the nineteenth century dawned, the Rev. Darius Dunham, a hard working, hard riding and hard praying Methodist circuit preacher held in Meyer's Creek, now Belleville, the first religious service of which there is any record in the locality. Till twenty years later, or in 1815, was there a regularly appointed minister for Belleville, but the dozen or so of men and women who listened to the first exhortation of Rev. Mr. Dunham formed the nucleus from which afterwards sprang the old Pinnacle Street Methodist Church. The Pinnacle street congregation later afterwards moved up to the location on Bridge street, on the Bridge St. Church may justly claim to be the church mother of Belleville.

In 1818 the first church was built. It was a one story red side of Bridge street, midway between Dundas St. and the Market square. It was a frame building, no piers or even cedar blocks and planks nailed on them. The bench used by the carpenters while building the church served as the pulpit and hallow chairs were used for illuminating purposes. In 1821 the church was ready for use, too small and a large one was built on the same site and was a frame building.

The Honourable Bulla Flint donated the lot on which the present Bridge Street United Church now stands. Senator Flint also laid the corner-stone of the first building.

On the 8th of January, in 1856, when the church was burned down, and during the rebuilding, services were held in the assembly rooms of Belleville Lodge No. 81, Independent Order of Oddfellows, Coleman Block on Front street.

Lists of Divines

Many famous and well-known preachers have occupied the pulpit of Bridge Street United Church. Looking back over the history of the organization it is interesting to note that in 1892-93 the pastor of the church was the Reverend E. H. Baker, M.A., B.D., who is still vitally interested in the work of the church, although he is retired. The assistant superintendent of the Sunday School was the late H. F. Ketchenson, who only passed away a short time ago. The Chorister was Mr. Stephen Burrows, who still resides in Belleville.

Closely connected with the growth of the church has been the separation of the Sunday School, upon which department a separate story is always prided itself.

In 1892 the Reverend F. E. Mylott, M.A., B.D., came here and ministered to the wants of his congregation until 1896 when the Reverend Dr. Bell, the present pastor, came here from Winnipeg.

Following is a list of the pastors at Bridge Street United Church since 1815:

1815-18, I. B. Smith; 1817, Israel Chamberlain; 1818, J. G. Peaker; 1819, Franklin Wood; 1820, Thomas Madden; 1821, C. N. Flint; 1822, Isaac Fidler; 1823, Jacob Poole; 1824, Samuel Belton; 1825, James Wilkinson; 1826, William Ryerson; 1827, John S. Atwood; 1828, John S. Ash; 1829-31, Samuel Rose; 1832, John Beatty and Gilbert Miller; 1830, Anson Green; 1834-35, Joseph Stinson; Richard Jones and James Musgrave; 1854, Thomas Beattie and Edmund Fitzgerald; 1841-42, Davidson, 1834-35-36, Henry Wilkinson; 1837, Matthew Lang; 1838-39, Thomas Ryerson; 1841, Wellington Jeffers; 1842-43, Wm. Scollinger; 1844, Wm. Haw; 1845, I. B. Howard and G. P. Disbrow; 1846, I. B. Howard; 1847-48-49, John Gundy; 1850-51, Richard Jones; 1852, John Ryerson; Jas. Preston; 1853, D. Pearson; 1853-54, George Young; 1855, John Carroll; 1856, John Ferrell and Richard Sanders; 1857, John Carroll and T. S. Keough; 1858, S. B. Harper and W. G. Henderson; 1859-60, R. S. F. E. Mallott, M.A., D.D.

JAMES CLARKE

The death of James Clarke, father of Mr. Howard J. Clarke, Belleville, took place on Sunday evening at his home, 44 Bonnington Avenue, Toronto. He had been unwell recently. He was 78 years of age.

The deceased gentleman was born in England and came to Canada as a young man. He resided in Belleville for a number of years before moving to Toronto. The funeral will take place to Park Lawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Clarke was active in the work of the former Methodist Church, had been closely identified with the Sunday School and an official of a number of the boards of various churches.

AUXILIARY THANK OFFERING SERVICE

On Wednesday evening, April the fifteenth, the Thank Offering Service of the Bridge Street Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church was held in the Sunday School hall. Mrs. Bishop presided and opened the meeting with the hymn "We have heard the joyful sound", followed with prayer, a responsive "Easter Service of Praise" embodying the Easter message of joy and adoration and a delightful solo. "On Calvary's Cross", by Mrs. McKinnon formed the first part of the program.

After the taking of the thank-offering, Mrs. Bishop asked Miss Beaulah Ketcheson to introduce Mrs. Carscallen of the Ontario Ladies' College, who was the speaker for the evening.

Mrs. Carscallen, who had spent twenty-one years in China, being closely associated for much of that time with the University life of our own province, took as the basis of her theme, "The Women of the Orient", She said that Easter and missions were closely related, that Easter has been called the "Feast Festival" of the world. One has only to attend a Chinese funeral to understand what a rich heritage we have received, who have been nurtured in Christianity. However, great changes have been wrought in China —more in the last twenty years than in any previous twenty centuries. Three revolutions have been taking place in China, all at the same time —political, intellectual and industrial. In other countries such revolutions had taken place but they had been gradual and had run their course. currently as was the case in China. She said that the Christian civilization might be compared to the European Renaissance, the industrial revolution to the English upheaval following the introduction of machinery in eighteenth century and the political revolution to the French Revolution, but in China these were all gradual and only one at a time. China today was undergoing three great changes all bound up one with the other. Women have reached the second stage—the dangerous stage the cutting loose from old standards and conventions after centuries of repression. It is the task of Christian missions to guide the young women of China to the new and richer life of self-denial for the good of others. Mrs. Ackerman and Mrs. F. S. Deacon expressed the thanks of the audience to Mrs. Carscallen for her address.

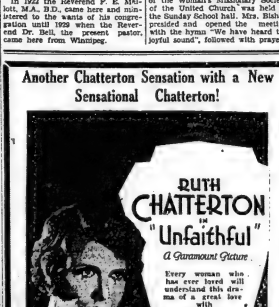
$100 a Month Insurance will be paid to you regularly free of any chance of loss for the rest of your life

Do you want a definite, sure income that will come to you even though all other sources of income fail? You can have it.

Picture what a hundred dollars a month would mean to some people you know—the totally disabled, the old unemployed man or woman, the widow struggling along on very small means. Realize that you will now be able to take the first simple step required in order to provide against you or yours ever being in such a position.

For most people it is a very difficult task to build up a fund of thousands of dollars in order to provide an income for themselves. It is takes years of self-sacrifice. It isn't necessary now.

Why not adopt the modern way and by depositing moderate annual instalments let the Canada Life take over your problem?



Let us demonstrate you one hundred dollars a month income when you decide to retire at age, say, 50, 55 or 60, or pay you an income personal. Remember that you will be totally disabled at any time between now and then, or we would start paying it at once to your family if you should die.

Why not find out how it is done? It will mean no obligation on your part.

THIS COUPON WILL BRING YOU VALUABLE INFORMATION

Rawdon History Reviewed

In a recent issue of the Stirling News-Argus, Mount Pleasant and Madoc Junction correspondents submitted a special edition which contains many interesting historical facts. Herewith we reproduce a few excerpts from the budget which will no doubt be interesting:

Dear Readers:—As last we have got the special edition ready for your perusal and I can tell ye it was a night of work, both for the correspondents and the editor. However, we hope you will like some of it as least. You see, this 'ere idea started as a joke, but 'fo it ends in a joke, you will not need to be disappointed. When the Tilsonburg being checked full of ideas wanted to air them so they dared Madoc Junction and Mount Pleasant, etc., to co-operate and flood the News Argus. Well, we said we were game, and then the fun began. But before going any farther, we ask ye to remember that we are the baby of the three, so please do not expect us to have a page like theirs, as we are so very inexperienced. When your correspondent was a very little girl, she used to stand by and watch grandma write up the news and we were really thrilled and hoped to do the same some day. But in our dreams we certainly never expected to be editing this much spoken of in one issue of the paper — but anyway, here we are.

Now before we rambles on any farther, we want to thank each and every one who has contributed towards this edition, for without your hearty co-operation, we could never have completed this task in two weeks. We also thank those who weekly pass along local items. You know we couldn't write the news if you people were not interested enough to tell us of your visits and visitors, and if your name is not in print, do not blame the correspondent, just blame yourself. It would be impossible for us to personally thank each one, but just here, we want to tell you that we are deeply appreciate your assistance, do heartily appreciate your assistance.

Now readers, you will not require some of our people, with their odd names, but they belong here just the same, only please don't ask your correspondent who they be, as we solemnly promised not to tell — or you will have to puzzle the mystery out for yourself.

Throughout our pages we have tried to prepare items of fun, history, etc., mixed with the more serious side of life, and we hope that all will enjoy parts of it, the old as well as the young. Then too we do not want you to feel that we have reported it all. We have only done our best with what available items we could dig up, and perhaps may be able to find a few more. We may have omitted something which we should have inserted but we wrote it to the very best of our ability, knowing not, however, what we have done it better. As we said before, we are the baby of the three and are not unable to remember back more than twenty-five years ago and for that reason, we had to depend on the help of the older people for a number of an exciting date. For a few minutes now we purpose to tell you of what we remember during those last twenty-five years.

Features of Progress Worth Reading

1. For years five cents bought one cent candies, a few 5 candies in each — a bottle plug of liquorice, etc., and then along came the chocolate bars. The first one we ate seemed a luxury.

2. When we journeyed to Stirling via old Tilsonburg the luxury a very few times each year, it was always a treat to go from Eagleton's for dinner to Parker and get a big heaping dish of luscious ice cream, all for five cents — oh, boy!

Then the fairs and sliders, of Hoards, sensing the splendid attraction ice cream had for young folks, started to make the ice cream serve 1 in five cents per dish on Mr. John Carter's verandah. Mr. Hoard's Station, ice cream attracted the boys and girls, yes the married folk too, for that matter, to crowd around. The jolly crowd came on Shanks' ponies, or with buggies and cars. Each Saturday evening, and practically everyone joined in games of "Drop the Handkerchief," "Farmer in the Dell", "Blind Man's Buff" etc., till the cream was ready to serve. Then you filled up according to the number of five-cent pieces you had. If recollection serves me right, I believe the ladies served cake free with the cream, but that point isn't so clear. Then a few more games, and we pocketed home, thinking we had been well repaid for our trip. A few years later, one of our fair fads, the ice cream cone made its debut, and some ate the cream and discarded the cone, as the cones were tough to chew. Then, of course, ice cream was ten cents a dish. Now, a few years hence, the children casually buy cones and chocolate bars and during the novelty it was to those of years gone by.

3. Speaking of the fairs — the first school fair was held in a tent the same day as Stirling fair, about the year 1914. As a child we never had the privilege of growing vegetables or flowers for exhibiting purposes.

4. Then too, I remember the smallpox epidemic, when of course, I was among the afflicted and Mr. and Mrs. David McAdam delivered the mail to each home and brought our provisions from Stirling.

5. I remember when our telephone was installed, and about two months afterwards, I was advised to say hello to another party. Previous to that, if a doctor was needed, someone drove to Roseneath and phoned to him from there.

6. I remember when in May, 1913, our first rural mail was delivered to our door by Mr. Thomas Andrews.

7. I remember my first auto ride with Dr. Zwick, of Stirling when he, her and I rode from our home to the top of Nubble Hill, and the Doctor drove slow, so we wouldn't upset, and we walked back. Of course, that was as much of an event in our life as a ride in an airplane would be to a child of today.

8. When the first motor-cycle passed over our road, the lassiez quietly dismissed school as pupils and teacher could view the contraption.

9. Then, too, I remember many thrilling tales of human history, as witnessed by three old men, "Uncle Ira Rubble", "Uncle John Brooks" and my grandfather.

In those days we were taught to honor the older generation and every one prefaced the older folks' names with uncle or aunt.

But now, we have remembered enough for now, and we will let you ponder on through these columns and become acquainted with your correspondents.

The following men have held office in municipal affairs during the past twenty years: Councillor George Eggleton, now residing in Stirling; Richard McAdam, residing in Petersboro; Fred Jeffs and John Johnson, both of this village.

The first automobile was owned by Mr. Jas. Mackenzie, Mount Pleasant, he purchased it in 1913. Needless to say, he was the centre of attraction, as the "Little old Ford rattled right along." In 1914, Mr. Mark Tucker and Mr. Marshall Tucker, of Belleville, Mr. Thomas Wootten of Wellmans, Mr. Elijah MacMullen of Mount Pleasant, each purchased a car, they all being Fords. Now, seventeen years later, we would need all our space to give you a list of those who have cars — those days we called them cars.

While we were busy digging up news for this special edition, one party remarked: "It won't be long now — I'll soon be seventy, and then, hurrah for the Old Age Pension."

VETERAN HAS SCALED PEAKS FOR 30 YEARS

Lure of Unknown Still Attracts Veteran Meteorologist

BANFF, Alta., April 20.—(By the Canadian Press) — The lure of the mountains "in the slogan" still grips N. B. Sanson, 70-year old government meteorologist officer. Thirty years of service in the shadow of the Rockies, during which time he has climbed practically ascents to the peak of Sulphur mountain 7,648 feet above the sea level at Banff, has been "discovery obession" to inherent in this student of atmospheric phenomena.

For 35 years Mr. Sanson, or "N.B." as he is known to friends, has been meteorological officer and curator of Banff Museum. The latter office has necessitated his being conversant with geology, botany, ornithology, mineralogy and several other degree qualifications for which are necessary in supplying information to the many students and specialists who visit Banff each year.

Native of Toronto, "N.B." was appointed to the Banff post in 1896. His duties in the early years were confined mostly to valley level observations. Now, however, an observatory was completed atop Sulphur mountain and automatic recording machines were installed by the meteorological department.

Since the machines require removing every two weeks periodical ascents since that time have remained imperative.

Slow moving snowfields, the last movements and lower parts of snow slides, constitute the chief dangers he has faced. Snowshoeing up a mountain slope requires a certain amount of technique. The steepness of the trail requires high stepping. When this is attained to the depth of sinking snow and the weight that falls back on each snowshoe, cramps frequently are induced and before the climber realizes it his feet are gripped by a slowly moving snow area. Compressed snow, pushed by hundreds of tons farther up the mountain, grips his legs like a vise. Escape is painful and expert knowledge is require to meet such emergencies. Several times has "N.B." been caught thus.

During a cold snap last winter, prairie air mail pilots reported find ing warm air currents at moderately high altitudes These, reports, at the time, occasioned considerable comment and speculation. Inverse temperatures, however, are quite common in "N.B.'s" records. Many times each winter the observatory machines record higher temperatures than do the valley ones. During the prolonged cold spell of January, 1919 the minimum temperature registered at the observatory was 50 degrees above those registered in the valley and on the prairies. On many occasions during winter ascents he has chilled from sub-zero valley temperatures to spring-like chinook breezes on his mountain top.

For some years now "N.B." has made the same spring vow "No more winter ascents." Each succeeding winter, however, finds him with his pack, snowshoes, ice pick and other equipment, making his periodical ascents regardless of weather conditions. There is always a reason for revoking his spring decision—something new to be observed and studied—some new phenomena to be recorded, and a new man may not be trusted to do it.

To the inquisitive friends such explanations are taken with the proverbial grain of salt. They know it is the "discovery obsession", that unquenchable desire to solve nature's riddles, that lures this 70-year old marvel to his aerie on the windswept peak of "Ole Sulphur".

The Clown's Son

BY ETHEL WILLIS HEWITT

There was a strange, disquieting dignity, about the sturdy young figure of Richard Aurus, as he faced his visitor.

"To what do I owe the honor of this visit, Mr. Cranston?" he asked in a cold, even tone.

Mr. Cranston's florid face paled, and the muscles of the broad hand, still holding his hat, tensed.

"I want to talk to you—about Margaret—," he began thickly.

Burton interrupted, impatiently.

"And just what could the son of a circus clown have to say about the daughter of the aristocratic house of Cranston, that could be important enough to bring you here? Just what could they possibly have in common—" Burton's blue eyes blazed with sudden anger.

The old man sank weakly into the nearest chair.

"Larrue, for God's sake, listen to me. Margaret is ill—desperately ill. Sh nails for you incessantly." No doctor says he can do nothing—give us no hope, unless we can get you to come. He thinks, perhaps, you may be able to—" his voice broke, and he rose unsteadily to his feet.

Burton stood perfectly still. He recalled the stormy scene that had torn Margaret from him almost on the eve of their wedding, and the part Oscar Cranston had played in that scene.

"You can't understand what it has cost me to come to you like this—but my daughter's life is at stake. You can't refuse to come. I'll make it well worth your trouble." The haughty voice was deeply agitated.

Burton's young face set in hard, tense lines.

"Certainly I'll come, but nothing you can offer, Mr. Cranston, would influence me in the matter one way or other," he answered coldly.

As the Cranston's chauffeur thread ed the car through traffic, the two men sat silent, a world apart, save for their common interest in one woman.

"You understand, this—this will in no way alter the situation. Her calling for you is only the whim of a disordered mind." Oscar Cranston offered with decision.

Burton stiffened.

"I am quite aware of that. I am simply rendering you a service, such as I would extend to any human being under the circumstances," he was the proud reply.

They completed the ride in silence.

Burton was only vaguely aware of the hushed confusion in the upper hall through which they passed. Relief showed plainly on the broad, kindly face of the doctor, as he held the door open for him.

"You'll succeed where we have failed," he heard him say.

Inside, Burton paused. his heart hammering furiously against his ribs. A nurse stood by the window. The frail, wan figure on the bed was motionless. Oh, but they had all but killed her, and Adin, with their stubborn pride. Her wide, dark eyes stared at a pool of light on the sun splashed carpet. Suddenly, with a rush of emotion, Burton was on his knees beside her. Nothing mattered but that she was ill—that she wanted him.

"Margaret," he cried in a broken whisper.

The wide eyes turned and met his gaze. He sat down on the side of the bed and caught her hands in his. He was seized with a sudden panic. She couldn't die like this. If she lived, there was the whole wide world between them. He recalled the sawdust circus clown, and she had stood by in silence, while her father had drawn a fine line of distinction between them, with cruel precision. Yet the Cranston pride, their money, and their noble ancestors, were unable to save her precious life. It was love the same love the proud old man scoffed at that day, that was more powerful than all he possessed.

"Burton," Margaret whispered. It was scarcely a breath, but it swept through Burton with a torrent of energy and life. He caught her up in his arms. He wouldn't let her die. He'd show them what a power love was.

He held her to him, limp, scarcely breathing.

"Margaret, you can't go on like this, darling. You must get well my—why we," he broke of suddenly and buried his face in her hair.

"You won't leave me—ever. It's been horrible, all these months. No rest—always that," she paused, with a little shudder.

"I know," he breathed against her cheek. "I know, but you can rest now, darling."

"There's nothing that can coms between us now?" Her dark imploring eyes met his gaze, the thick, childish lashes sopping wet.

Suddenly Burton's arms loosed their hold of her, and he kissed the flushed upturned mouth, tenderly.

"Nothing can come between us ever," he said softly.

"Now won't you try to sleep, dear?" He laid her back on the pillow and held her hands in his.

"You won't leave me?"

"Not ever again," he managed thickly.

In the hall the doctor and Oscar Cranston waited. Burton went forward them heavily.

"She's asleep," he said, in a hard, blunt voice.

"Then she's safe, thank God. It's the first natural sleep she's had for three weeks." The doctor grasped his hand in a hard grip.

Oscar Cranston, flushed, and visibly relieved, reached for his hat, later.

"I'm not unmindful of my indebtedness to you," he began.

The tired lines in Burton's young face gave place to a look of utter contempt.

"It seems to me, entirely unnecessary, at a moment like this, to add insult to injury," he said, coldly.

"If I can be of further use, you will kindly let me know," he added, addressing the doctor.

A month passed without a word concerning Margaret. It might all have been a dream — as they had whispered in each other's arms that day. Then came a note from Oscar Cranston.

"My daughter is entirely recovered, but owing to the nature of her illness, she seems to have forgotten the incident of your presence—I indeed she was ever aware of it. She has never mentioned your name since that day," the letter read in part.

Burton accepted it with a surprising lack of emotion. In fact, he seemed, during these last months to have gone the limit, to the extent that he was emotionally exhausted. There was peculiarly wrong back. He rose from one evening to find a slim shadowy figure in his arm chair. Quite naturally, he drew her up into his arms. Then she was sobbing against his breast.

"Oh, I've been such a fool—to let them influence me. If you've got the marriage license, can't—can't we be married tonight?" she gulped with a little flash of embarrassment.

Burton, a bit dizzy with the sudden, new happiness, wooed down at her. This time he must be sure.

"I'm still the son of a circus clown," he said seriously.

Margaret smiled up at him.

"And the daughter of a very snobbish old man, but does it matter, so very much, dear? Can't live without you? Oh, my dear—we're the main parties concerned—does anything else matter, does it?" she ended in a little rush.

But Burton didn't answer. She was in his arms and there were other things to consider. Among them thoughts became too confused for words.

TREE PLANTING

Proclamation of Arbor Day has been made by Dr. Creasa, the State Commissioner of Education. It varies for different parts of the State, but for this region, it falls on the twenty-fourth of April. It is thus a week away, but it is to be celebrated with full benefit to children and the entire school. Fields and forests, there must be preparations. Appropriate exercises at the school rooms, of course, will be held in the schools. In some communities the children will plant memorial trees—tracts of trees for the special ben efit of the region. In others, single trees, as symbols of gratitude for the many benefits brought to men.

In the scriptural story it was man alone who was driven out of Paradise; but the tree remained a beautiful ex memories of the Garden from which we were driven. We build cities or to dwell on treeless plains that he has never created. James Lane Allen wrote, to be reached by the influence of the world behind him— "by the shadows of those tall morning trees falling across the mortal clearings". Add it may be said that wherever there is a tree there is still a paradise per se, and that whoever plants a tree for God to grow enlarges paradise a rod or so. Not for practical reasons alone, though these would suffice, do we set apart a day for tribute to the trees and for their multiplying in the earth. The true significance of the day, as is urged in the proclamation, is in "the planting into the hearts and minds of children, and of adults, too, the love of trees and flowers and every living thing."—New York Times.

SCOTT

In this day of psychoanalysis and lurid stories and scenes in fiction, there is a sign of health or at least there is a trace of leaven in the fact that Sir Walter Scott, the writer of the noble Waverley novels, is still read. Next year marks the one hundredth anniversary of his death and the occasion is not to be passed over lightly. The great creator of characters in the brilliant series of stories called "Waverley" is to be memorialized by the unveiling of statues in various parts of the world, one a bronze figure to be dedicated in Halifax. It is well to keep alive the work of such a man who speaks health to all ages of man; from boyhood and girlhood to old age. The great age Scott pictures the noble active life, without the riches of the pools of psychoanalysis or the criminality of lurid pictures painted by sensationalists of today. There is crime today, but crime is not the exact picture of any life on a great canvass. life is more than a clinic. It is largely the free and the open air. Men of gigantic human mould walk the novels of Scott; he is the painter of the heroic and whatever the psychoanalyst says, Scott has read human nature with a truer instinct for life motives that these men who are digging into the socalled subterranean motives of men know.

Life was chivalry for Scott. his canvasses are huge, his attitude is healthy as the tonic air of his Scotland. The Scots done well to have this great seer of men memorialized in bronze in the New World. Scott still plays his part, and his influence though he is dead one hundred years, and his ideals cannot die. The more they are stressed, the more they will influence the life of today and the future.

The Hamilton Spectator says of him: "Scott is generally described as a historical novelist, yet his historical backgrounds, vivid though they be, are of minor interest compared with his descriptions of character. It is said that, next to Shakespeare, Scott is the best writer of dialogue in the English language, and it would be hard to assail this reputation. His sane, shrewd insight into characters is unmatched. He was less sure of his ground when it came to the deeper spiritual aspects of his mind, and compared with Dostoyewsky he is clumpy when attempting to describe the mysterious movements in the depths of the soul. But, we must remember, his literary 'admirers' accommodate, and hold unsurpassed his style. The modern psychoanalysts could have taught Scott nothing about human motives and 'rationalization.' He could, in fact, have taught them that they are blind in their understanding of man's nature. Lord Birkenhead said he read the Waverley Novels through every year. M. Hugh Walpole says he reads Scott every Sunday."

FARMERS' OUTLOOK

From all parts of the country come reports of a general spring awakening and generally satisfactory conditions even with regard to moisture in spite of the fact that the rainfall and the hangover of water from last fall and winter have been very light.

Contrary to what one might believe from the fact that average grain prices which have been prevailing farmers are generally well pleased with the outlook for this year.

What the coming season has in store is problematical, indeed. Prospects for orchards are good. Farmers for instance who "made good" out of the growing of produce, such as peas, corn, tomatoes for the canning factories hope to duplicate the very successful year they enjoyed in 1930 when much of the success of farming was due to ideal conditions for marketing their agricultural products. This year the canning factories, it is hoped, will continue to play no small part in the prosperity of the farming community.

THE BARLEY CYCLE

Things move in cycles, it seems. There are business cycles of some seven or ten years, as the case may be; there are longer cycles in which nations rise and fall. There is a grain cycle, that of barley. Oldtimers tell of the great old days when a queue of wagons loaded "sky-high" with rich barley wended their way slowly to the docks whence the grain was exported to the United States for the making of beer. Those days passed and barley fell into a decline or at least a state of rest. Corn, much of it imported, was used here instead of barley, and no change occurred until it was felt that Canadian farmers required cheaper grain for the production of pork and the choice fell on barley. Then the drive launched for Central Ontario in the county of Prince Edward the interest in barley is spreading, farmer after farmer is devoting more acreage to the grain and barley is on its way to a greater future.

He—"You were no spring chicken when I married you."

She—"No, I was a little goose."

Keeping up with the neighbors is not nearly so satisfying as getting ahead of them.

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU—?

DESERONTO POST in a page broadcast, draws the attention of Deseronto boosters to the fact that industries already established should be encouraged at the same time new ones are being looked for. Then the Post tells them a fact which they may have overlooked that the Post is an industry which employs citizens, pays wages, taxes, and contributes to everything that helps to make a community a going concern, in fact acts as the voice of the community, has never asked for a bonus or fixed assessment or any of those things which new industries employing from six to sixty always ask.

The Post has stated a fact which is so obvious to be easily and generally overlooked, the newspaper is taken for granted and rarely listed under the head of local industries there in the midst. The newspaper is a great public service institution and at the same time perhaps the most valuable industry in the community, employing a number of skilled mechanics and writers at good wages, pays a whole lot of taxes and merits the wholehearted patronage of all citizens in all departments. The Ontario Intelligencer has met talk of depression with expansion. new machinery has been installed and many jobs kept busy all winter installing new machinery and enlarging the business premises. Big Business Boostgrs for Belleville should remember that this paper, Belleville's oldest, is on the receiving salesmen for orders of printing, just tell the strangers that Belleville now has a printing plant with the best in Toronto or elsewhere and all the work can be done at home now, giving work to local citizens, helping pay the taxes, and providing good sidewalks cement payments, and by the way, civic pride, pure filtrated water and all the comforts of a real home for Belleville people. Come and look over, the work isn't finished yet, but it is nearing completion and gives an idea of what the new plant will be like when completed.

WOMEN IN AVIATION

Miss Isbbel MacDonald is learning to fly, and probably in time will pilot her distinguished father from London to Lossiemouth. If she shows aptitude, the Prime Minister will be in hands over his less expert because they belong to a woman. In civilization, women have shown ability of a high type. There is nothing birdmen have done which birdwomen have not at least tried to do, says the New York Times which points out that while Colonel Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, Miss Elinor Smith and Captain Hawks flies very swiftly; at Detroit this week Miss Nichols was proceeding for a time at the rate of 226.88 miles an hour. Women have crossed the continent, Lieutenant Soucek has been up over 43,000 feet. Miss Nichols and Miss Elinor Smith have risen much higher than Mount Everest. In England, France and Germany women have broken records and won trophies for which men were also competing.

The fact that women aviators who have won distinction would be too long to give here. The nerve, coolness, judgment and mechanical skill which are only part of a pilot's equipment are found in the average feminine sex in ample degree. If Miss Ishbel learns the craft, there will be no one to say that the Prime Minister should not entrust his life to a woman.

When aviation was beginning to be recognized as man's twentieth century mode of transportation, women fliers were treated somewhat as freaks. They appeared at State fairs and were definitely segregated from men. All this has passed with their mastery of flying. An air circus now without women aviators would be decidedly unrepresentative.

THE CHURCH AND PUBLICITY

...Statistics of church membership in 1930, collected and published by the Christian Herald, show a small gain in the year—something above 56,000 in a grand total of more than 20,000,000 communicants. Some denominations reported an actual loss for 1930. As has often been noted the figures in this field from year to year are subject to certain adjustments and explanations. For example, when the Catholics report more than 17,000,000 communicants of their Church, it is to be understood that the number includes entire families, including young children, and not merely communicants, as in the Protestant churches. Also, it often happens that an apparent decline in membership is caused by dropping going over the rolls and dropping those disappeared from view or joined other churches. Yet after every abatement is made, this statistical summary is full of significance and calls for study. Dr. G. L. Kieffer, that the churches may be "losing vigor of growth."—New York Times.

SAGA OF EVANGELINE

Ex-Rubber Man Snaps at Circus Successor

Tragedy stalked through the basement of Madison Square Garden. It rubbed noses with the elephants and troubled the deep and dismal sleep of Gollah the Great. It looked sadly up the stripes of the zebras, and mournfully at the spots on the leopard. It was, to hear them tell about it, a most spectacular thing. Startling, quietly, flung to a thrill crescendo, it was—according to Mr. Dexter Fellows—all brought about by a couple of India rubber men.

It seems that last year there was one such individual and this year there is a different one. Why the first did not return is a matter of public property; sufficient that he did not. But yesterday, just when everything had been stilled after the matinee, he came to the cage to pay a call. And he was insulting. He cast certain reflections on the professional works of the present officeholder, and the latter replied. Retorts Mr. Fellows, "they were" snapping at one another.

"I've never seen anything at all like it," said Mr. Fellows over the telephone, still quivering somewhat. "Both of them were bounding all about the basement. They were bounders, normally, either of them. Stretcho said that Twisto lacked the finer graces. He could not, for example, take a harmonica and make beautiful music. Twisto could do that, he said, and only Twisto. He could not. Mr. Fellows began to be troubled with rheumatism.

"Things went from very bad to much worse. The sword swallower—he always had a warm spot in her heart for Twisto — got into it. But she got excited and swallowed one of the wrong swords. That frightened the blue man, who promptly went white and hasn't been the same since. But worst of all was the dervish. He began to whirl. Faster and faster he spun around, until the buttons on his coat, whistling past them, sounded like a steamboat pulling into New Orleans.

"This went on for hours. Were I such a reliable man I should have put the elephants threatened to pack. But I won't go into that. Goliath, outside, seeing the fun, put his face to a window, tried to whirl and became very ill. The rest which ordinarily plays the national anthem on the piano suddenly began that Gershwin piece. It did the blue man good, but had no effect otherwise. And then in the confusion a giraffe began sucking a sprinkler system's nozzle and soon the whole place was drenched.

"How did we stop it? A bouner just came up and threw Twisto out."

Two-Gun Stowaway Fired When Bored

New York, Apr. 20.—Louis Chianese is a ferocious little Frenchman, who had heard of Coste and Bellonte, of Lotti and Lefevre and others of his countrymen, will sail for France in the third-class accommodations of a French liner, and then fly back to the Times.

Chianese arrived yesterday on the French liner Lafayette as a cargo passenger of some distinction, but he had not decided on how he could no longer see the bright American sunshine through the window of his cell, and determined to risk illusions as to "publicity money" had not changed.

More than a week ago, when the liner sailed away from Le Havre wharf, there was Chianese with his bag of tools and his sartorial insamuch as he was hidden safely in a packing case, 7 by 3 by 3. These dimensions were those which he deemed to be layman, proved comfortably adequate to Chianese, according to undergo hardship when fame was the objective.

Bored, He Starts Shooting

On the third day out, however, Chianese had wearied of chocolate bars, tepid water, the darkness of his packing case and the monotony of his own company, he said, and he had never considered himself a coward before.

The possibility of this apothecia Second Captain Pierre Lescarret found the bundle-rope of his routine inspection tour broken by the extraordinary sound of a man shooting in a sealed box.

The second captain gazed wonderingly at the box, and then proceeded to a New York department store, and purchased a hammer, returned to the ness of the hold. Smoke poured through the wood openings in the case, and seamen were called to put out the fire. M. Chianese does not yet know how near he came to having the bath he had been needing since he left Paris.

When the case was opened, out came Chianese, just like two dozen blackbirds, only he carried in each hand a smoking revolver, his own novel method of attracting attention. Ordinarily a man emerging from a packing box with two smoking revolvers would be a rather startling sight, but Captain Lescarret and several reporters yesterday that there was nothing desperate about M. Chianese's appearance.

After that it was simply a routine passenger matter, with such explanations as M. Stowaway's ambition to sell his packing case, sell his story to a film concern, and finally to collect a handsome number of francs from publishers for the story of his publicity I get you." He also mentioned something about a lease on the Eiffel Tower which he might let go at an astounding reduction.

Revels in Spring Sunshine

For a while early yesterday morning as the Lafayette moved up the bay to her pier, M. Chianese could found his heaven. There were photographs of M. Chianese emerging from his packing case, which, by now, had been lid was to the boat deck, an object of rare beauty. Further there was a picture of M. Chianese happily crawling into his box, pictures of M. Chianese dangling carelessly from the side of his crate, pictures of M. Chianese holding his revolvers tightly, with his eyes peering dangerously through the large rims of tortoise shell.

Later, as he rubbed his hands together thoughtfully, Chianese inquired as to what would be the penalty for transatlantic flyers and if he offered to sell his packing case to Captain Lescarret.

Asks Public Study of Industrial Ills

Washington, April 20—A plea that public interest be kept centred on readjustment of the industrial world, so that it may recover from its present disorder and be better prepared to avert such conditions in the future, was made before the American Society of Newspaper Editors today by its president, Fred Fuller Shedd, president of The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. He opened the three days' convention of the society at the auditorium of the National Press Club.

"The economic depression through which we are passing will end," he said, "and we will have good times again. But it will rain some more, and we must be prepared to take such a stand as will prevent anything like the English dole gaining a foothold in this country.

"The experience through which we have been passing ought to have convinced us that something more than relief is involved in the problem, and that our minds ought to be directed diligently upon the discovery and application of remedy and of means of forestalling and preventing a recurrence of this misfortune.

No Issue More Pertinent

"If we do not want to incur the peril which government doles have brought upon Great Britain, if we want properly and scientifically to diagnose the ailment and to determine a remedy adequate for our ills, the newspapers of the United States must be prepared and active. There is no pending or prospective issue of politics which can be a peril of a power trust or a matter of international relations more pertinent and more imperatively demanding newspaper exposition and editorial columns than this readjustment of the industrial world for recovery from its present disorder.

"There is no agency or means other than the newspaper press by which the discussion of such a national problem, its adequate exposition, the consideration of its various phases and angles, the differentiation between true and false remedies, can preserve the public and aid in formation of desirable sentiment and competent opinion."

Plunderers Reach Relics Before Explorers

(By Joseph M. Levy in New York Times)

Cairo, April 20—The Brunton expedition, working under the auspices of the British School of Archaeology, completed the season's excavations in the Badari District of Egypt.

The work of exploring the desert north and south of El Matmar was continued from the high ground on the far side of Ghorkilo also was examined. Several hundred graves and sherds were discovered, but the cemetery from which they came had been almost completely denuded by water action. Only a few poor graves remaining and containing nothing but a little pottery.

At El Matmar a most important dynasty pit was found, but it had been almost entirely plundered in ancient times. The pit is close to the Temple of "Set," discovered last year, and is similar to two deposits found several years ago at Gau, near the Temple of "Set" at Antaeopolis. It also contained a number of ivory bones and fragments of ivory toilet articles.

South of El Matmar were a few graves of the typical Middle Kingdom style, with painted pottery. Interesting, since so few of that period have been found in the district. The principal discoveries were a few fine alabaster jars of the eighth and ninth dynasties, with "button seal" impressions, and a gold seal amulet of button form.

Rich Limestone Statuette

A group of graves of the fifth and sixth dynasties, which had been deeply buried under modern rubble, yielded a seated limestone statuette of the Queen Khentkawes, wife of King Tria, beloved of Ba-st (an Egyptian goddess), with perfectly carved hands and arms. Particularly valuable as giving a more or less definite date to a large and great series of pottery objects found in this district.

This season's work under the auspices of the Archaeological Survey of Egypt, under the general direction of the Middle Kingdom Portress Miss Murray, situated on the north side of the Nile opposite the village of Kom Ahmar. The excavations covered an early fort with outer walls two feet thick, protected by a deep ditch, now moat lined with mud brick and with rounded bastions at intervals.

Within the fort were found, in one of a series of forts built by Seostris I, the head of a standing of a bright of eight meters. Work on the outer walls of the fort resulted in the discovery of numerous heraric ostraca.

Traces of Six Periods

In the interior fortress was a series of two-storied buildings of the Middle Kingdom. Vaulted rooms on the ground floor, with store chambers and the second floor was for living quarters. Some interesting finds were made in these buildings and traces of six distinct periods of occupation. The first four ranged from the early fifth Juies Chabot, master of the Lafayette, but Captain Cabit said no mishaps. He never had a packing case.

Chianese told immigration officials that no one had aided him in his escapade, that he had planned it alone. He said he spent a miserable thirty minutes on the dock at Havre with a six-shooter pressed to his head, and just as he was ready to attract attention with his revolvers, the case was moved and he was made more comfortable.

Late yesterday afternoon as he waited on Ellis Island, Chianese received a friendly telegram from officials of the steamship company offering him not to worry because of his ill-luck and cheering him up considerably when they said they were saving his packing case for his return journey to Havre.

Middle Kingdom down until into the time of the Twelfth dynasty. It is probable that the fortress was erected after the reign of Rameses II, but subsequently it was not occupied during the Coptic period.

The removal of the buildings revealed the existence of the foundations of a large stone building within the enclosure of the first fort. Near the south gate of the second fort numerous fragments inscribed with cartouches of the Ramesse period were recovered, but no trace was found of the building to which they belonged.

Although Kubban fortress suffered considerably from the ravages of modern plundering, the importance of its site as a fort is great, as it probably is the most complete example of a building of this character in existance.

The expedition also dug south of Kubban at Ibrim, where it continued the work of the previous year. It has been found that the cemetery on the west bank of the river between Ibrim and Aibu Hamed has been discovered the site of a series of rock tombs in which probably the nobles of the Ramesse period of the "New Empire." These tombs have not yet been examined.

Today's Verse

HAPPY THE MAN

Happy the man who has the town escaped,
To him the whistling trees, the murmuring brooks,
The sunbeam, preach
Virtue's and wisdom's lore.

The whispering grove a holy temple is
To him, where God draws nigher to converse with Each verdant sod a shrine.
And every stream a font.

The singing birds awake him, flitting sweet,
When shines the lovely red
Of morning through the trees.

His straw-decked thatch ,where doves bask in the sun,
And play and bask, invites to sweeter rest
Than golden hills of state
Or beds of down afford.

MOTORCYCLES LEAD TRUCKS

Winnipeg, Man., April 20—Fleet red motorcycles which would constitute the first line of attack on the demon fire, will shortly augment Winnipeg's fire fighting equipment.

Equipped with a siren and fire extinguishers, these miniature fire chariots would dart ahead of the regular fire trucks in the scene of the fire. Getting to fires quickly, it is believed the men on the motorcycles could check up on the situation and in many cases extinguish fire before they make headway.

SOME HINTS ON PERFECTING YOUR GELATINE DESSERTS

By Hannah Wing

Good meals depend so much on the care taken in making simple dishes well. But knowing them well requires art in using the right proportion of ingredients, as well as in mixing these ingredients together. No good cook can afford not to know in detail the proportion of ingredients and the methods that will insure perfection in the simple dish.

Gelatine dishes are often the stiff in consistency and carelessly flavored with gluey bits of undissolved gelatine in the bottom of the mould, though it is easy to have them smarting, tender, and full-flavored. When adding beaten egg-whites in making snow puddings or whipped cream for Spanish Cream or Bavarian Cream, these ingredients are not always evenly mixed in thus causing a mixture of coarse, uneven texture. Flavor from its nutritional value, which should not be overlooked, gla tine is invaluable in the cooking art in cooking. It not only yields a variety of sweets but provides many other uses an interesting base for salads of fruit and vegetables and little care, attractively garnished gelatine dishes may be evolved by molding fruit, vegetables, nuts, etc., with the jelly. Few well-made gelatine dishes are the chief points to bear in mind are: using the proportion of gelatine and liquid that will insure a tender texture; soaking the unflavored gelatine until soft; dissolving well both the soaked unflavored and flavored gelatine in the liquid used for the jelly; and beating in the evenly beaten egg-whites and whipped cream to snows and creams.

If you are using a manufacturer's recipe, follow directions exactly. If you wish to use your own recipe, closely adhere to the total amount of liquid you have and use the amount of gelatine needed to jelly that amount of liquid or to the right consistency. If canned fruits are used, for example, drain the fruit and measure the juice separately.

In using the unflavored gelatine put it in a bowl, add cold water, and soak until soft, as I said the minimum. When gelatine is manufactured, it is dried in ovens before it is granulated and like any dried food, it must be soaked before using. Add the specified amount of boiling water or other hot liquid and the sugar to the softened gelatine. Stir until the gelatine is dissolved. Add remaining liquids and fruit pulp if it is used, and mix thoroughly. If sliced or chop fruits are used, these are to be added, set gelatine in a cool place and allow mixture to thicken slightly, then stir them through the congealing jelly. Pour into a mold and chill.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

Time to start thrilling with old Mister Sun. Every day now his rays become more direct, laden with peptizing elements that are good for everything that ails you. Protect hands and complexion with cold cream, when taking a sun bath. Getting the skin burned doesn't do it any good, but a light tanning makes for loveliness now that health and vitality are fashionable. Looking well is a step toward feeling well. Spring sunlight takes winter smoke out of dull spirits. Get all you can of it. Also give your hair the air; it will dance and sing.

The complexion has its own oiling system, which is necessary for its preservation and well being. The purpose of the sebaceous glands is to lubricate the outer surface, to keep it from flaking and going into dry decline. Sometimes more oil is supplied, they are supplementing the work of nature, so there is no reason why anyone should have any feeling against their use. Certain thin, cleansing oils are excellent and effective means of removing dirt, and they conserve the supple supply of fat exuded by the pores.

Deep seated pimples which do not come to a head soon should not be tampered with. If there is a yellow point, wipe the skin surface with alcohol, sterilize a needle, prick it in a flame, puncture the pustule and press gently with the fingers covered with gauze. Heavy pressure may cause abrasions in the skin and produce scars. Hot applications are helpful in drawing out pus, and a soap and water should be used freely.

Small, felt hats that press upon the forehead should be avoided. The health of scalp and hair, interference with circulation not only starves the hair of groceries necessary for its growth, but is the cause of many headaches. The ideal hat allows a free circulation of air. But where is that hat?

Black creases in the knuckles, appearing after heavy work in soap can be dug out with a mixture of cooking oil cornmeal and salt. It gives forth a starchy substance that is helpful in the dirt, but, because of gritty, is preferred for cleaning the face.

In a Very Short Time He Got Great Relief

Saskatchewan Man Used Doddy's Kidney Pills

Mr. S. Sorwanosky Suffered With Backache and Rheumatism

Parkerview, Sask., April 20 (Special)—"About three years ago I suffered with Backache and Rheumatism and could hardly move," writes Mr. S. Sorwanosky, who lives at this place.

A friend advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and after taking the first box I felt better. So I got a few more boxes which gave me great relief in a short time."

The natural way to treat Backache and Rheumatism is to treat the Kidneys and the natural way to treat the Kidneys is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Rheumatism is caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood. If the Kidneys are doing their duty they will strain all the uric acid out of the blood and there can be no Rheumatism.

Therefore, put the Kidneys in shape by a daily duty by using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Just give them a trial and be convinced. Obtainable from all Druggists, or The Dodds Medicine Co. Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers.

The sweater has gone feminine, something that we might have thought impracticable, if not impossible, has been achieved and the pride of the tailor-made and the sports-woman has been transformed into an overblouse that is dainty and different. The last whisper in a knitted or jersey pull-on is made short as lace, with the finest sequins, and is modelled after one of crepe de chine or mousseline, with pin tucks, frills and pleatings. The designs which are many, may be worn with different skirts and coats, playing a practical and important part in the ensemble for various occasions through early spring, and are ideal for active sports and travel into the summer.

Some of the dressiest of these sweaters come from prominent Paris houses. One, a pull-on from Jean Regny, is a striking example of color contrasts in yellow, black and white, accompanied by a handful of plain yellow. The sweater has a deep yoke of diagonal lines in the three shades to a deeper tone downward with a stripe of white and a wide band of black, rib-knitted to draw the bottom tightly over the hips. A strip of plain yellow wool crepe shown with this two-piece creates a smart ensemble.

Another sweater inspired by Lanvin is also a study in yellow, knitted in self-tone horizontal lines. A cluster effect forms a long point in front and the sides, which are short and drawn into the figure with fine shirring. Lanvin uses a white cowl collar on another sweater that shades from pale yellow to dark brown. The sleeves are long, with white wristlets. A copy of a Martial et Armand is done also in brown and white in diagonal lines and a deep notch cuff.

Lelong is showing a beautiful sweater blouse in black and white, made in line with fancy crocheted yoke and cuffs. In a varied collection two models in particular stand out sharply. One is a yellow kid Angora overblouse with short sleeves and revers finished with knife pleating. The other is a delightfully picturesque affair, of sheer mesh knitted in a small diagonal plaid in green and black on white. A scarf is cleverly arranged to form a yoke on one shoulder and crave across to the one on the opposite side. Pretty overblouses of rayon and "spun" sequins are shown knitted in fancy patterns and in soft shades of beige, champagne and the pastels.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

SHIP BABY BEEF

Lethbridge, Alta., April 20—Prairie cattle producers are watching with keen interest a shipment of grain-fed Alberta cattle to the English market. The first shipment, consisting of the head of Angus and Hereford two year olds, left Saint John, N. B. aboard the Canadian Miner for Manchester, England, on April 11.

This is believed to be the first consignment of lightweight grain finished cattle ever sent to the British market.

Twenty new airports are to be opened in England this year.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman
Canadian Woman Who Are so Vitally Concerned

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a young couple to announce their engagement formally as an evening bridge party at the young lady's home without inviting the parents or relatives of either?

Mrs. M.

1. This plan would seem to me to take great pains to be socially unattractive. This event is such an important one to those whom such a plan would omit, that I should think that the parents and close relatives would feel deeply hurt—justifiably so. Why not plan this occasion with special care for those whom it most closely concerns.

An Engagement Ring is Not a "Public Ceremony"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am glad to be engaged very soon, on my Birthday. We are going to have a large affair. My fiance is rather timid and does not know what is proper to say at the occasion of giving me the ring at the table, and he is making me think it is something that would be incorrect. Can you furnish me with something that he may be sure will be correct?

I am sure that your fiance would be relieved if I should suggest that I think that it would be far better form for him to give you your ring when you first see him, rather than when there is a gathering of this kind. Why not do this? In fact, perform, really, to give the ring in this "public" way. Usually the ring is given when the two people most concerned are alone together, and then, on the occasion of the announcement party, the girl slips the ring on her finger just before the announcement is to be made.

Introduce, Introduce, and Introduce

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct to ask a former boy friend, whom you have not seen for quite a while, to buy a ticket to your club dance? I mean to call on the telephone?

2. Is it correct, when you are at the dance and see people you know, to leave this young man you are with and go over to speak with them, or should you take him along and introduce him, or wait for the friends to come to you?

3. How should you go about getting dance for the young man you are with if he knows no one at the dance?

Miss L.

1. I can't feel that this would be a very appropriate thing to do, and I certainly would be sorry if you were to telephone him to ask him to buy a ticket. In my judgment, we have no right to ask people who aren't close friends to buy tickets—this is a matter on which we should think, develop deep sensitiveness. It is unattractive for us to place our friends, especially if they aren't close friends, in the awkward position of having to refuse to buy tickets. And, after all, why should this boy buy a ticket to your dance, this boy whom you have not even seen for such a long time?

2. If you go to speak with other friends, ask your companion to come with you.

3. Introduce—and introduce —and introduce. This is the recipe for a dance!

How to Get Relief From Catarrh.

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness, or hard colds, go to your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home, add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to make, tastes pleasant, and costs little. Every one who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial. You will probably find it is just what you need.

BRIDGE ST. UNDEFEATED CHAMPIONS

St. George's in Second Place in Church League

30 Games Played

Saturday evening at the Y.M.C.A. Gymnasium saw the conclusion of the most successful Church League Basketball season that has taken place in a good many years. In all twenty games were played between March 18th and April 18th and every game was keenly contested by the respective teams. Bridge Street, the winning team, completed the schedule without suffering a defeat although they had several very close calls. One of their hardest games was against the Judeans and after the thirty minutes of basketball they were lucky to emerge victors by the narrow margin of one point, the score being 26-25. All which goes to prove there was not so much difference between the leading and the cellar position teams.

Final Standing Church League Basketball

Team	Played	Won	Lost	P.C.
Bridge St.	10	10	0	1000
St. George's	10	7	3	700
Christ Church	10	5	5	500

Holloway	10	3	7	300
Judeans	10	2	8	200

SATURDAY'S GAMES

St. Andrew's 31, Judeans 21.

Through the first half of the opening fixture between St. Andrew's and Holloway that found the latter representation, had much the better of the play and looked as if they might take the Presbyterians into camp at the close of the period, the Scotchmen were trailing 9-12. Halftime found the Red Jerseys session the winners were all over their opposition outscoring them 19-9. Campbell was responsible for six of the nine field goals scored by his team in the first term. Leaghner for the losers was the chief point getter with four goals to his credit.

St. Andrews—Campbell 12; Hutchison 3; Twiddy; McMurray 3; Langsbeer 8; Phillips.—Total 31.

Holloway—Mould 6; Harris 2; Carlson 3; Twiddy; McMurray 3; Langsbeer 8; Phillips.—Total 31.

Christ Church—Barrage 2; Adams 3; Edwards; Scott; Sharpe; Royle 2; Folwell 4; Angell.—Total 11.

Judeans—Pope 5; Leicover; J. Goodman 6; Samuels; Victor; A. Total 10.

Bridge St. 26—St. Andrews 13.

For a considerable part of the first half the Scots gave their team-mates the play and held a small lead over the Bridge St. men until just before the close of the period which ended at 9 points each team. The final half saw the Bridge Street Quint open up with some real scoring impact which netted them every member of the team contributed. Thus the defense the Scouts were given such a busy time they neglected to make much headway in their own offensive and consequently were considerably out scored in the final session.

Bridge St.—Bairrow 8; Cowan; Henry 4; Cole 8; Sargent 2; Richmond 2; Bell 4.—Total 26.

St. Andrews—Burley 7; Flagler 6; Morris; Pepper; Churchill. —Total 13.

Pill Pounding Pals

By HARDIN BURNLEY

Memories of Babe Ruth in his youthful home run days were revived last season at Boston and elsewhere when "Wally" Berger, Brave recruit, began to lash 'em into the bleachers with a frequency that finally brought his 1930 circuit clout total to 38. Berger is a smart outfielder with a Ruthian knack of knocking 'em "high, wide and handsome." Indeed, his slugging was the Hub's chief baseball feature all last year and fans there expect him to be even better this season. During the recent Winter the Boston Nationals secured Berger's old pal and Pacific Coast home run rival—Wes Schulmerich—and, in training this Spring, he out-walloped Wally. Both played for Los Angeles once and there Berger outsocked his friend by a substantial but not disgraceful margin. On that same Angel team, they were like the Bam and Lou Gehrig on the Yanks. Schulmerich was a corking pacemaker for Berger. Now that they are both with the same major league club, there's to be the keenest sort of rivalry between these up-an'-comin' sluggers. Berger hit for .310 in 154 games in 1930 and fielded for .966. With the Coast "Angels," Schulmerich batted .380 in 186 games, accumulating 28 homers. The latter was urged by some to take up professional wrestling (he's a compact Camera and can grunt, if necessary!), but the lure of a big league trial has taken Wes from tose-and-tumble mats for a time at least. Of course, Schulmerich's old side-kick—the lustin' Berger—is delighted to rejoin his congenial bunkie. What a pair of football guards Wally and Wes would make—the former's 6-foot-2 and weighs 198; the latter's 5-11 and points the scales at 210! The Braves' chances for the pennant seems as dim as they were in 1914, the miracle year, but such high-powered into-the-stands hitters as Berger and Schulmerich ought to give the fans many a real thrill throughout the season all over the game's senior circuit.

GIANTS DEFEAT BOSTON BRAVES

St. Louis Cardinals Drop First Game of Season

Boston, April 20.—The New York Giants ran amuck here yesterday afternoon, taking the Braves for nine runs and 14 hits. The final score was 9-2.

The visitors jumped on Ben Cantwell in the third inning for three runs on four hits and got two more in the fourth on one hit and two errors off Sherdel.

After getting another run in the sixth on one hit and another error they capped the scoring in the eighth on three hits and a sacrifice. The locals could do little with Hubbell, who was able to collect one run on three hits in the second and one more on three hits in the sixth.

Cincinnati, April 20. — Although they found Ray Kremer for eight singles, received five walks and had the benefit of three errors by the Pittsburg team, the Cincinnati Reds lost to the Pirates here yesterday, 5 to 1, Kremer being effective with men on bases in the pinches that the Reds were stranded on the cushions. Cincinnati did not score until the ninth when Cudlyo's force-out of Cuccinello a second after the base hit, permitted Heath to score.

Traynor drove in Pittsburg's first three runs with a double in the first inning and a triple in the third.

Chicago, April 20—The St. Louis Cardinals dropped their first game of the season when they dropped the second of their four-game series to the Chicago Cubs here today, 6 to 5.

An overflow crowd of 43,000 turned out to watch Charley Grimm lead the National League champions to six hits, four of which came in the first three innings.

Doolittle's walk and singles by Frisch, and Watkins in the first, gave the Cards their only tally. Two walks and singles by Hartnett and Herman gave the Cubs a pair in their half.

Watkins scored in the fifth after a double, on a short passed ball. The Cubs added a run in the sixth on Stephenson's single, Hartnett's sacrifice and Grimm's double to right.

Brooklyn, April 20.—The Brooklyn Robins registered their fifth straight game, being beaten by Phil adelphia, 4 to 2, here today.

The Phillies were blanked up to the eighth inning when they got four runs on five hits. They added to the run in the ninth to tie it, but lost out in the tenth.

Herman got his second home run of the season with the first inning and O'Doul his first in the sixth.

ATHLETICS WON FROM NEW YORK

Detroit Tigers Drew First Blood in Cleveland Series

St. Louis, April 20—Two triples, a double, two singles and an error netted the Detroit Tigers five runs in the seventh inning to bring them out of the cellar for the first time this season. The Browns were trailing, 2 to 0, when the rally started.

The Browns calmly used four pitchers to stop the Tiger batting spree, which netted the visitors 15 hits. The Browns his safely 12 times.

The Brown scored in the last half of the first inning with two runs, but relinquished the lead in the visitors in the second when they scored four runs. The Browns got their second run in the third. In later innings, each scored another run, but at five-all, Chicago won in the seventh.

Cleveland, O., April 20—Detroit Tigers drew first blood in their series clash of the campaign with the Indians yesterday, splitting a double-header, 7 to 2 and 7 to 4.

Earl Whitehall, veteran southpaw, was master of the situation from the start, and recorded a five-hit, one-run shut-out but for the home run from the bat of Joe Vosmik, Cleveland's sensational left fielder, with a man on base.

The Tigers got to Wesley Ferrell in the opening inning for three runs on five singles, including a home run shot, double by Gehringer and one-base hit by Rogell.

Washington, April 20—While Lloyd Brown was applying the white-wash to the Boston Braves, the Senators pounded four Sox hurlers to win this game out of a double-header, 8 to 0. This is the Senators' fourth straight win and put them on top of the league.

Brown allowed ten hits but kept them well scattered, only one Sox reaching third. The Senators pounded MacFayden for seven hits in the second and drove him to the showers in the third scoring six. Morris and Murphy held the Senators at the end of the way.

New York, April 20— Rube Walberg had the better of Charley Ruffing in a pitchers' duel and New York piom A's defeated the Yankees in their first meeting for a score of three to two, before 80,403 fans. Walberg allowed the Yanks but six hits, while the Athletics collected seven safeties.

The A's were the first to score, garnering a run in the opening round on singles by Dykes and Haas. Ruffing got a long fly by Cochrane. The Yankees tied it up in the fourth on Ruth's walk, Gehrig's sacrifice and Chapman's single.

NEW YORK YANKEES WIN

Chicago, April 20.—The New York Yankees won the national soccer title by defeating the Chicago Bricklayers in the final game here Sunday, 2-0. Patenaude and Burness scored the goals for the Yankees.

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

We were glad to see such a good turnout of the Victoria (intermediate) team on Friday last. It shows the interest that the boys are taking.

Last year the Athletics led the American League in team fielding—but they led Washington by only two meager points in this respect, which places the two defensive casts practically on a par against them. Likewise in batting, Washington finished eight points ahead of the Athletics in team batting, with the margin of batting superiority more evenly distributed throughout the team.

Picton have assured the Bay of Quinte League that they will be an entry for that league's baseball title bout.

As one keenly expressed it: "When you put through a double play you hit em with both barrels. You get the runner nearest home and the runner next nearest to him. When you get the batter only, and the runner advances, the batter has done good. But when you get a runner coming it may seem at the time, and perhaps it will be of great importance as the game progresses. The two-run single is of material significance in the doubleplay combination. It has become a fetish in baseball.

Frank Whitehouse, Peterboro's star southpaw of 1925-6 was home over the week-end. Frank was a smart hurler until he threw out his arm.

A nineteen-year-old girl who bats and throws righthanded has been signed as a catcher by the Western Association baseball club of Joplin, Mo. Her name is Miss Vada Colyus, whose brother, Lute Corbus, has played in the league two seasons as a pitcher and outfielder.

The local Juniors had a real work-out at the fair grounds on Saturday and there are some smart kids who will go to make up a real team in this town. All they need is encouragement.

The local Ki-Y League are making all preparations for a banner season as they are going to enter in the O.A.B.A. So that is something for them to battle for.

The first battle for the heavyweight championship of the world under the Marquis of Queensberry rules was between John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett, in 1892, in New Orleans Louisiana. Corbett knocked out Sullivan in twenty-one rounds, winning purse, side bet, and the title. It was the last appearance of Sullivan in the ring, with the exception of an exhibition match with Tom Sharkey.

Gordon McLean, the new manager of the Victorias, has sent out word that all positions on his club are vacant and that the best players will be given the first call. There is plenty of room for them to battle for.

Dan Howley ranks as the year's outstanding optimism. Dan insits he's going to finish fifth, and yet he has seen the National League schedule, which shows that the first game of the season is with the Cardinals, Cubs and Pirates. That's a helluva hill to put in front of the Shoemaker from South Weymouth right at the start.

FAIR PLAY
Boosts and Fair Criticism

Sporting organizations are watching with eagle eyes, and we don't mean maybe, what action the CKy Fathers will take in connection with the case of those who enjoy healthful recreation in the sunlight hours, and they likely will. Verily Time it is true that day light saving was defeated by the very persistent, but we still can't believe that young men and women who gain healthful exercise in Belleville should have a voice in this matter, and we are basing it on the basis of the provincial days that would be given their chance. Sport Fans and Players, if you want day light saving, talk to the Aldermen. Create a public standpoint—and work for it. Let us tell you it will be summer sport's greatest boost. City Fathers, remember, that money you may spend will do less to give the Bay of Quinte City greater sport than will your greatest advertisement.—Sport.

* * * *

Much enthusiasm was shown the other night at the organization meeting of the newly formed Victoria Ball Club.

* * * *

A large number of players were on hand and congratulations are due for the serious consideration given to electing capable officers.

* * * *

The Club is most fortunate in securing Mr. C. A. Fanning, Mgr. of the Belleville Steel Company as President. Mr. Fanning, although comparatively a new comer to the city, is widely known in Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, and a real fellow.

* * * *

He has followed the Belleville Senior Club's home games since 1919 and rarely misses a game. He was one of the regulars who came from Wellington to attend the games.

* * * *

Mr. Fanning plans to take an active interest in the Club's affairs, and when, I. say "active", that covers the ground.

* * * *

Mr. McLean, the manager of the team appears to know his baseball and has showed his ability in addition to the sport in Belleville. Now, Boys, Athletics we want the men, and you will be popular.

* * * *

Harold Legge, the quiet and unassuming Supt. of the Canada Cement Company and member of the Hockey Committee for the B.A.A.A., has certainly shown his true colors. Beck, Gibson and the Green boys will be allowed to play baseball in Belleville, this season.

* * * *

This move is no doubt appreciated by the intermediate "B" players, as the Ameco setting has stimulated the other teams to such an extent that it is hard to be an even bet for the starters.

* * * *

* * * *

Something new—but it is proposed to hold one under the auspices of the B.A.A.A. and Kiwanis Leagues.

* * * *

In the past the executives have experienced trouble in lining up Umpires, especially for the Minor series. In many cases the players do not know the rules of the game.

* * * *

As there is plenty of time to be taken for organized work this year, this move will help the executives as well as educate the players.

* * * *

A player of any team should know the rules.

* * * *

One night a week for six weeks will be set aside for this. All players of any age will be permitted to attend.

* * * *

Competent baseball men will be signed with Belleville new intermediate outfit, which may now seek a senior berth. Rumor has it in addition in that town won't be cleared up for a week or so either.

* * * *

Baseball here has another friend in Leo G. McIntosh, Supt. of Stephens-Adamson, who is also an ardent golfer and five pin bowler. Mr. McIntosh is one of the representatives of the Kiwanis to assist with plans of the Ki-Y series.

On the Sport Trail

Belleville athletes' generally make good when they leave the Bay of Quinte shores and another one has been added to the list. Percy Cole, member of the Telegram staff in Toronto, was in the city yesterday on a visit and although reticent, he admitted that he had made a place on the Don Rowing Club eight oared crew and was also a member of the New Reach softball nine. Percy, last year, was president of the Dominion Football Championships, the Rahny Beach squad and played in many of the important fixtures. It is on the books that Rahny Beach team will make a trip to the west similar to the one taken by Tigers of Hamilton last fall and there will no doubt make the trip. He stated that he enjoyed rowing and was next seat to Jack Gaetz, winner of the Diamond Sculls. Gaetz will row all year in the eight and the Dons think they have the making of a champion crew. Congratulations are due to Percy for his advancement in sport since his arrival in Toronto and the sporting editor adds his words of congratulation.

The baseball situation has not cleared up to any extent since the meeting here last week ago. Oshawa is still an unknown quantity and should the team has been taken from the 21st baseball club of Kingston it is problematical what will be done in the Limestone City. The president K. A. Daniel of the league and his executive should come to the meeting on Monday night. A special cut proposition for the fares is going to be made so that teams should be on the practice fields. There is no reason why the practice of the Belleville Nationals will be called off as the baseball at the fair grounds is in fair shape and work will be done to get it in first class shape for the season's play. Peterboro is ready with their team and also the C.O.B.L. but the league would be shaky with only four teams in the running. Reports from the Hill Lot City are to the effect that the Petes will be exceptionally strong this year.

* * * *

The Arabs' Ball Club met in Oshawa the other night, and still haven't decided where to play this summer. They may play in the Lakeshore League, but this is certainly since the Rays left that circuit.

* * * *

And they are thinking seriously of having a team to play with a Toronto League. However, I presume may not care to take them on as it would necessitate travelling expenses for the Queen City boys. Members of the club evidently are going to investigate this angle and report back at another meeting.

* * * *

Meantime, they are considering taking the O.B.L. again. The team is practising today, as nearly every league they are in, they will be ready to go by the 24th of May. They will hardly declare themselves for another week or so when their next meeting is.

* * * *

The 71st Battalion Club, which operated Kingston's senior team last year will not have a team in the Ontario Rugby series there. They dropped something like five hundred berries, and don't feel like taking the chance again of losing more.

* * * *

Most of the players there have signed with the Kingston Intermediate outfit, which may now seek a senior berth. Rumor has it in addition in that town won't be cleared up for a week or so either.

* * * *

However, we hope both Oshawa and Kingston will see their way clear to get back in the Central League again along with Belleville and the Petes. The loop can then almost go right with their organization, which is a hard one to please in any man's ball park.

—Peterboro Examiner.

There are the usual rumors in circulation. Some of them have to do with the Maroon Club. The latter may be expected to make changes, and President James Nicholls, the popular local lawyer, is already figuring on next year's campaign, and if his ideas are carried out Maroons will be a vigorous entry from start to finish. Maple Leaf is also talking about for another high class player, but the significant statement of one of their players that a man like Bowley Smith would make them champions may or may not prompt an offer to pry Reginald Leeso from his lowerings here. That is all speculation, however.

* * * *

Rangers are looking for new faces and there is even talk that the fleet foot from the will west, other Jerseys and an equally fleet kicks will be substituted for the Cook freres and Frank Boucher. Art Ross has started in to bolster up Boston. He announced from here that Gainer would be sold and probably one other player, the retaining Hitchman who didn't fall to click. From form as some of the Boston critics made out, and if this would be snapped up eagerly by half a dozen clubs in the league if they had a chance to purchase him. Jack Adams has decided on a new goal tend, and would like to get some forwards to team up with Goodfellow. Chicago needs another strong player who is a scorer, and they would be set, and very much feared again next year. Canadiens have no player worries, but always keep on the alert for material. The mid-year meeting may see some startling changes, as the executives are new faces to hold public interest is evident even in some Canadian centres.

TORONTO BEAT NEWARK BEARS

Jersey City Won Over Rochester in Close Game

Newark, April 20.—Two mighty clouts of the Herculean variety, one inside the park and another over the fence that behind routing way far in the meadow and adding the maximum number of runs enabled the Toronto Leafs to take the first of a five-game series from Newark Bears here yesterday by a score of 4 to 2.

The one which brought in two groans from more than 12,000 fans, were made by Nora Hamilton in the fifth inning with Raymond Morehart on first base, and the other was made by Jack Smith Strong, former collegian from New York University.

This four-ply killing which came in the eighth with Bill Rogell on the paths, proved to be the greatest blow in the history of the Canadian cause.

Arthur Smith was the Toronto hurler who opposed Myles Thomas of the Bears on the firing line here for one inning. Smith was a bear timer of no mean variety. The one inning in which he experienced trouble was the eighth in which the Bruins scored their second and what proved to be the last of the game. Sherrin Fields Wall.

Richardson and Strong were the outstanding heroes for Toronto but considerable credit is reflected on the ability of James Sherrin, the former Holy Cross boy who is covering the hot and cumbersome first base sack for Steve O'Neill's boys.

Sherrin showed something around the initial sack in the way of stopping apparently wild pegs that drew applause even from the grimey spectators, which is a hard one to please in any man's ball park.

EDMUND LOWE and CONSTANCE BENNETT

THIS THING CALLED LOVE the much talked of comedy-drama coming Tonight at the CAPITOL for three days, daily at 2.30, 7.15 and 9.15.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Reception was good enough to suit the majority of the fans last night without any complaints coming in this morning. Clear enough wasn't it fans, and plenty stations so we didn't dare ask for more.

Premier Bennett speaks tonight from CFRB at 10.30 addressing the York Bible Class during their annual banquet. The banquet is being held in the Royal York Hotel and the speech should be available to listeners in nearly all parts of Canada and the United States as most of the Canadian stations are hooked up with it and in the States by a National network.

We can find plenty entertainment from CFRB at 8.15 tonight in marimba numbers, songs and organ music. Marimba numbers include "Indian Love Call," "Somebody Stole My Girl," "Hitting the Ceiling," "Sitting in Love With Me" and "On the Road to Mandalay." The songs include "In Hoot Owl" and "Deep in My Heart Dear," the Studio Players.

Andy Sanella and his novelty orchestra are on the air from WEAF tonight at 8.15 for a fifteen minute period of music. At 8.30 the Gypsies and at 9.30 the "Motors" program with the orchestra under the direction of Frank Black.

FDU Spitalny at midnight from WEAF and you want to hear a good dance orchestra. From WJZ tonight the first program of interest is at six the Music Treasure Box bringing us Muriel Pollock pianist. At 8.15 the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

The Jesters at 7.15 from this station and Ohman and Arden, piano duo, will be heard at 8.30 along with Rudy Wiedoft and that smart sax of his. Maring orchestra at 9 and Real Folks at 9.30. Lots of fun in Chesterfield tonight with Mac and Matthy, Ziemer and Sneed. Cab Calloway band at 9 o'clock from WABC and Leo Reisman's orchestra from there at 9.30. Organ recital on the WABC network tonight at 10 and Ben Bernie at 11.30.

STIMSON ISSUES WARNING

Washington, April 20—Secretary of State Stimson today gave Secretary United States citizens in Nicaragua, that the United States Government could not undertake general protection of the citizens in that country. The notification sent through the legation at Managua and the consulate at Bluefields, also intended that "all Americans who do not feel sure under the present circumstances there by the Nicaraguan Government through the Nicaraguan National Guard, withdraw from the country by Friday, April 24th, at the latest, so they can be protected or evacuated in case of necessity.

Jersey City, April 20.— A sharp single by Joe Brown, in the ninth inning with a man on second resulted in a 7 to 6 triumph for the Jersey City Skeeters over the league champion Rochester Red Wings here yesterday before a crowd of 10,000.

Hollings threw wild to first on Walsh's grounder, permitting the batsman to reach second and Walter Brown came through with the winning single.

Reading, April 20.—Montreal took the opening game of the series from Reading here yesterday 8 to 7. It was Reading's fifth straight loss.

The locals got 12 hits in all to Montreal's 11 but errors helped the Montreal boys to victory.

Jimmy Adair, of Reading, and Herb Thormahlen, of Montreal, hit homers.

Baltimore, April 20—Buffalo opened its series here yesterday by losing a 9 to 6 decision to the Orioles.

The Birds clinched the victory of Wilson, Danforth and Love for 16 hits among them being a homer by Stroner.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

When I got into the house and saw Cora holding her baby girl, with her little boy leaning at her knees, whimpering because his mother was sobbing, my tears came fast enough. But I couldn't break down for long. I had to help poor Cora, who was just recovering after her long sickness.

Peter Thompson was wonderful.

That was also wonderful, in his way. He tried to make me take a thousand dollars for the funeral expenses.

I wouldn't. I couldn't do that. Peter to my surprise, arranged and paid everything. That sent a big wreath, but did not come to the little funeral.

Father had belonged to a benefit society and there was a thousand dollars coming. When it was paid I gave back Peter all he had spent.

"Let me help you, Kitty," Peter begged, "for old time's sake. Let me help you for a while—it's an awful load for poor pretty little shoulders—your slim little shoulders."

I'll get along, Peter."

"Even if I cannot have you, you cannot deprive me of the privilege of helping you in all this trouble," he insisted.

I half promised.

When he had gone Cora put her arm about me. She had been there during this talk.

"Kitty," she said, "now and then God makes a real man—Peter Thompson is one of them."

"Yes," I admitted to my sister. "Peter is a fine man, but so is That."

"I am not pleasing your life by you, dear," Cora hastened to assure me.

Peter had exaggerated somewhat when he insisted that I had an awful load on my slim shoulders because I wasn't so much of a burden.

The Miers had increased my wages twice. I was earning enough to keep us going. We moved into the new apartment that had been our home for so long, and a maid-of-one, Hilsbeen' doctor said, living room. Cora had the bedroom for herself and two babies, I had the little back room and at night I slept there. This cut down the rent one-half.

They were mighty nice to me at the Miers establishment, offering all sorts of help, but I had an independent streak, and I told them that I only actually need money I was glad to refuse.

I either got dresses from Mrs. Miers at wholesale or else materials from her. Cora was a wonderful hand at making dresses, for she had been a designer of dresses before she married.

"If you feel you shouldn't go in the fashion show so soon after your poor Poppa's death, we are willing," Mr. Miers said, "for we counted on you —we need you—it is all work.

A WONDERFUL DRESS

I see no reason why I shouldn't go into the fashion show for you, Mr. Miers," I told him. "It's nice of you to say that, but as I have to work, what is the difference?"

So that was settled.

Cora had just made a wonderful little dress for me to work in. She had seen something in a magazine and improved on it.

"Why should you buy clothes some where else? Mrs. Miers asked when she saw me wearing it. I explained that my sister made it from materials I had bought right there. I saw her talking with her husband about the dress and he examined it. I explained that Cora used to do that work.

A few days later when I got home Cora introduced me to a dear sweet-faced gray-haired woman.

"This is Mrs. Harmon, Kitty," Cora said. "She is going to do our little housework here and take care of the babies for me."

I looked at Cora in amazement. Had she gone suddenly daffy with ideas about a maid? Cora seemed to read my thoughts, for she laughed.

"I'm going to work tomorrow," she said, happily.

"But Cora"—I stopped then. I wouldn't argue before Mrs. Harmon.

When I got her alone I began to cry.

"Do you think I can't take care of you," I sobbed. "If you got to work now you'll break down. You aren't strong yet."

"I'm all well, and I am going to work for Miers Creations, Mrs. Miers came to see me about it yesterday—all on account of that dress I made for you," and Cora named her wages. She was proud and happy. She insisted that it was time she helped and her salary was surprisingly large. She was to get even more if she progressed.

"I'm going to save and put my boy through college," she assured me.

"You are only twenty-five—you'll be getting married again," I told her.

A STEADY VISITOR

"Perhaps was all she said. This surprised me. I was sure she would protect that she would never marry again.

That came to see me once a week. He brought flowers and candy and now and then toys for Cora's kiddies. I had not gone into deep mourning. I couldn't very well in my line of work, but I didn't go out to shows and dances. For six months, at least, I could give up the playing around out of respect to father's memory—the memory of a man who slaved cheerfully in a rut all his days for his loved ones.

In two more weeks the fashion show would open. I was thrilled over it. My chum, Viola Clarson, said that while it was rather thrilling, it was also terribly hard work, parading every few hours all through the week.

Molly had become decidedly independent, and one day, in a fit with good Mrs. Miers, she left suddenly.

"No one can walk over me—I'm too independent!" she cried.

Mrs. Miers tried to console her that she wasn't "walking over" her, but Molly was away up on her high horse.

"I don't have to work—and I'm through," she declared.

This was only a few days before the fashion show.

"I should worry, my dear," Mrs. Miers said, calmly and with a sly little wink at me.

"I don't care if you do need me for the fashion show," Molly stormed.

"I don't need you, dearie—fat models are as common as flivvers."

LOSES HER TEMPER

Molly lost her temper then, called Mrs. Miers a lot of names and yelled for them to keep what salary was coming to her, as she didn't need it. It tried to argue with her, for I had my job to think of, but she turned on me rather savagely.

"You are an awful sap to be working, too," she cried, "when you might be loafing around and have your own car!"

Be yourself—you're crazy," I scolded.

"You can't fool me—do you suppose I didn't hear you and Cora make runs around with you to hold your hands?

"I don't care what you think," I told her, and walked away.

Now said then Peter would drop in to see how we were, but with both Cora and myself working he soon understood that we didn't need any financial help he had so sincerely offered.

Now and then I went out to dinner with That, but not to shows or night clubs, and he assur ed me that he respected me for it.

"After the six months, dearest," he said, "we will out loose and have a gay time. A beautiful girl like yourself is made only for happiness—and we are affording the others something worthwhile to look at."

He doesn't seem in any hurry to propose." Cora said one night after That had dropped in for half an hour's chat after we had dined at a hotel.

"He wouldn't right now, so soon after father's passing," I explained.

I told myself, and I believed it, that when we started out for our gay parties again I would have him proposing almost no time at all.

Cora was getting along splendidly at her designing work. And then, one night when I came home from a dinner with That, I found a Mr. Parker there. Cora introduced me. There was a flush on her cheeks, a light in her eyes, that hinted much. When Mr. Parker, during our talk, told me that he had been a great friend of Dick Daniels, Cora's husband, and had often visited them and dined with them, I began to suspect that he was sweet on Cora.

AN OFFER OF MARRIAGE

I was right about it. Cora admitted it.

"Mack," she said, meaning Mr. Parker, "was always honest about it—he never made love to me when Dick was alive, but before both of us he said a hundred times that it was a good thing for me that my first or he would have married me."

"And now?" I asked.

"He's asked me," sister admitted, "and I am thinking it over."

"Go to it, old dear, if you love him. I can take care of myself you know."

"I know," she answered.

Right after this the fashion show opened.

I certainly was thrilled over the decorations, over the great platform with its floor of mirrors and especially over the runway out into the hall where the models would walk to give the spectators a closer view of the gowns—incidentally, of the models.

Sister Cora was there in the department, fitting, arranging, helping us change from gown to gown.

On the very first evening That was there with Curt and Susie Lawlor, and of course, the ever present Arline Sargent was tagging along. It surprised me that Susie Lawlor didn't get wise about her husband and Arline.

That was waiting for me after it was over. I was too tired to go anywhere with him but stopped at his car to chat a moment. Then he made me get in and took me home. He and the Lawlors raved over me. Arline Sargent didn't rave at all.

How It Happened—

The third night I spotted Forrest Malvern and a stunning woman in the crowd. He smiled at me and I managed a little nod. Later, when there was a recess and we models mingled with the others during the musical part of the show, Mr. Malvern came over to me.

He introduced me to Mrs. Dutton, his companion.

"You are the queen of the outfit, my dear," he said.

The way he said it embarrassed me. The way Mrs. Dutton looked at me made me feel queer. I tried to change the subject.

"Oh, Mr. Malvern," I said, "whatever became of Dolly Hawkins?"

Forrest Malvern was startled or embarrassed, perhaps both.

"Dolly Hawkins?" Mr. Malvern repeated.

Mrs. Dutton was watching him with what seemed to me best expression as "eagle eye."

And if Forrest Malvern wasn't surprised and embarrassed over my question, then I was very much mistaken.

"Yes, Dolly," I said.

"Oh, Dolly Hawkins—pretty little kid, I remember her now," Malvern said. "always jolly. Haven't seen her for a long while, I think she had a home upstate. Probably she got tired of city life and went back to the sticks and married and drove an ice all that sort of rot, as the popular phrase have it. No doubt some farmer lad is some farmer' boy by this time."

"Strange she never said a word to any of us," I persisted.

I didn't like the way Forrest Malvern spoke of her, as if he could scarcely remember her, and he used to be crabby about her, and go everywhere with her. Dolly had told me herself that she would marry Mr. Malvern and know the reason why.

SOME DEMENDS HIM

Forrest can't help knowing oodles of silly girls," Mrs. Dutton said. She almost cooed as she spoke. I didn't like her, I had a hunch that she could be very much of a wildcat un-

NERVOUS AND DISHEARTENED

Mrs. J. Johnson, of Galt, Blesses Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (Tonic)

"A few years ago, following the birth of my first child," writes Mrs. J. Johnson, 157 Semadeni St., Galt, "I was left in a very run down condition. My rich blood seemed to be thin as water. I was discouraged and used a doctor's advice to begin on Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Right in a half-hearted sort of way as a blessing they proved themselves to be! I felt so much better."

A Fine Spring Tonic

If you are tired and run down this Spring you need a tonic. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a famous prescription containing iron and other effective elements. They enrich and purify the blood and increase bodily strength. Don't wait till you get worse. Get them today at any druggist's. Be sure and say "Dr. Williams'" so that the druggist will know exactly what you want. 183 der her veneer of sweetness and her velvety voice.

"However," Mr. Malvern protested.

"But it's true—silly little girls throw themselves at him, but Forrest is wise; he understands their selfish motives." Mrs. Dutton went on.

"Don't chatter such nonsense, Fannie," Mr. Malvern scolded.

I had to leave to get into some my first gown for the next showing. I puzzled over Mr. Malvern's pretense of scarcely knowing Dolly Hawkins, and decided that he was' sweet on Dolly, my little widow, Fannie Dutton, and didn't want anything brought up about former sweethearts.

Chubb Osmund drifted in that evening. He beamed all over and smirked and winked when he saw me.

A little later when we crossed the mirror-floor of the platform and marched slowly up and down the runway out in the crowd, in our entrance season bathing suits, I thought poor fat Chubb would pass out, his eyes popped so, and he grinned so outrightedly.

Forrest Malvern stood close to the runway and stared at me. He smiled also, and winked. I pretended not to notice the wink. Then he whispered something to Mrs. Dutton, who was clinging to him as though afraid she would lose him. Whatever he whispered was about me. Mrs. Dutton looked at me, then sneered and shook her head as she whispered back to him.

As if I cared.

I'll get even with Molly!

How she was decked out!

She had been wearing swell clothes and good jewelry for months before she quit the Miers establishment but in this time she seemed to be just pouring out of an evening gown, she was so plump. With her was Major Boyden.

MUCH CLOSER

He recognized me and smiled and smiled.

Molly stared at me, grinned and then seemed to be trying to drag Major Boyden away, as if his steady staring at me annoyed her.

During intermission I found Molly and asked her how she was and what she was doing.

"Oh, dressing and minding my own business," was her peculiar answer.

"Just what is your business?" I asked pointedly.

"Playing around and having one swell time—can you trump that one, little sly fox?" was her comeback.

"I don't want to trump it, dearie," I assured her.

On the last evening of the fashion show Forrest Malvern was there alone.

He smirked at me whenever he got a chance. During one of the intermissions I went the little blue-and-gold model out with the crowd. Part of the game was for some of the models to mingle with the crowd during the musical intermissions and give the people a closer view of the gowns.

It was during this intermission that Malvern hunted me up. I was going about with Viola at the time. I introduced them. Mr. Malvern began to pour out compliments.

"Your little widow friend didn't seem to approve of me so heartily," I reminded him.

"Mrs. Dutton? Oh, She's just an old-time schoolmate," he remarked, carelessly, and then he turned to me with eager eyes.

"Look here, Katie, you shouldn't be hiding yourself from me like this —we've got to be better friends. Why haven't you looked me up?"

"Why should I, Mr. Malvern? The last I knew of you, you and Dolly Hawkins were like that!" I crossed my fingers to indicate how chummy they had been.

"Well, Dolly is out of the picture now—but you certainly outshone every other model here."

Viola grinned. She had a great sense of humor.

"Thanks, awfully," she said.

"Present company excepted," Mr. Malvern said, hastily, but he slipped me a wink.

"Can't I see you some place, Kitty?" he begged.

"Right here—or on the floor at the Miers establishment—if you come to buy gowns by wholesale—"

"Be nice to me, Kitty, I'm serious about it—I want to be one of your pals." Mr. Malvern was decidedly eager about it.

"Sweet of you, Mr. Malvern; but I'm so busy I have no time to pal around. My first fault—and I have to help support quite a little crowd," I told him. It wasn't true then, for Cora was doing more than I was since she was working, trying to make up for the year or more that half of my I gave to her.

"Those little worries are easily adjusted—"

The signal came and Viola and myself had to rush back to change for the next showing.

"I don' tlike him so much that I'd die if he went to China to live," Viola said, in her flippant way.

"He's nice, honestly he is," I defended; "he has wealthy and good company."

"Perhaps—but to me he looks like one of the sort of men who think they can buy the best sister to madam's prayer—as if he believed that he ought to have a big gown just to keep the girls from surrounding him."

I laughed at her and soon forgot about Forrest Malvern.

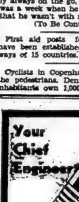
Mr. and Mrs. Miers had been voted three awards for their creations, and I had won two of them! Naturally, I was proud and excited.

A HUNDRED DOLLARS

The next day Mr. Miers handed me a hundred dollars.

"We and Milton think you should have it—if it wasn't for you we wouldn't got no awards on them two dress," he explained.

The months passed rapidly.



That was here and there, seemingly always on the go, but there never was a week when he was in the city that he wasn't with me.

IN APPRECIATION OF A GREAT VICTORY

A thoughtful presentation took place Wednesday night at the banquet tendered in Montreal to the Canadiens Hockey Team, winners of the Stanley Cup for the second time in succession and which is emblematic of the Professional Hockey championship of the World.

Several speeches were made by notable guests and for the splendid showing made by the individual players of the team, the Gillette Safety Razor Company of Canada, Limited, presented each member of the team with a beautiful Razor and complete shaving outfit. Each article was imprinted with the individual's name in gold leaf lettering.

Mr. J. S. Lavene, Managing Director of the Company who said "I do not know of a better way to show our appreciation of the very fine performance of the Canadiens team this season, so it is indeed a privilege and a pleasure to do our bit by presenting each player a Gillette Safety Razor."

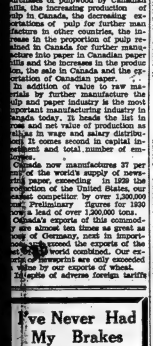
PROGRESS IN PULP, PAPER INDUSTRIES

In Better Position Than Ever, According to Report

While the Canadian pulp and paper industry undoubtedly feels the present economic crisis, it is in a better position than ever to contribute toward the world's requirements of pulp, newsprint and other paper. So it appears from the latest report on the industry, recently issued by the Forest Products Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, in which it is shown that the industry established new high records in 1929 in the production of pulp, newsprint and other paper, not only in quantity but in total value, despite a decline in average prices.

Further progress was being made toward the more complete utilization in Canada of our natural resources as developed. While the annual exportation from Canada to the United States of over a million cords of pulp or unmanufactured pulpwood and the production in Canadian mills-mills of a preponderance of comparatively cheap newsprint constitute a theoretical economic loss, the industry as a whole showed a strong tendency toward the more profitable manufacture of raw materials within the country. This is clearly reflected by the increased purchases of pulpwood by Canadian mills, the increasing production of pulp in Canada, the decreasing exportations of pulp for further manufacture in other countries, the increase in the proportion of pulp retained in Canada for further manufacture into paper in Canadian paper mills and the increase in the proportion, the sale in Canada and the exportation of Canadian paper.

In addition of value to raw materials by further manufacture the pulp and paper industry is the most important manufacturing industry in Canada today. It heads the list in gross and net value of production as well as in wage and salary distribution. It comes second in capital investment and total number of employees.



Canada now manufactures 37 per cent of the world's supply of newsprint paper, exceeding in 1929 the production of the United States, our nearest competitor by over 1,300,000 tons. Preliminary figures for 1930 show a lead of over 1,200,000 tons.

Canada's exports of this commodity are almost ten times as great as those of Germany, next in importance, and exceed the exports of the next three world combined. Our exports of newsprint are only exceeded in value by our exports of wheat.

I've Never Had My Brakes Fixed

Yet This Year I've Only Had 4,362 Accidents

SAYS MR. LEAN FELLEM

There's no accounting for tastes, there ain't. My friends won't drive with me — they say I'm a careless driver, they do. Sez I say I have too many accidents, they say it's on account of brakes. Well, I figure there ain't no brakes handier than mine I can't make use of it, says I. Ain't you know what, th' insurance people ain't going to renew my policy, that sure is queer, that is.

It's surprising how many people like Mr. Fellem endanger without realizing it, their own lives and others too, with poor brakes. If your slip, spook or grab it's a warning sign that something is wrong. Drive in and we'll check them over.

This progress is the more remarkable because of the complete detailed statistics for the pulp and paper industry for the year 1929 and 1930, may be secured on application to the Dominion Statistician, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa.

DAILY MEDICAL SERVICE

DIET FROM FIVE TO SEVEN

At five years, children begin to reason. And often then, they begin to become finicky about their food, refusing to eat this and that, overeating on what they like, etc.

Children during these years require body building foods. Milk, eggs, green vegetables, fruit, butter and potatoes are among such staples. Plain deserts as well as plain food in general are most desirable.

Variety, however, becomes important. To this end Dr. M. S. Rose has outlined two excellent food plans which are listed below. The food value of the first is from 1400 to 1700 calories. In the second it is approximately the same.

BREAKFAST:
Orange
or
Baked apples 80-100 calories.
or Prunes.
Well-cooked cereal 50-100 calories.
Milk 150-200 calories.
Dry Toast or stale bread 50-100 calories.
Butter
or Cream 28-56 calories
or
Bacon Fat
10-1/2-20 A.M.:
Milk 125-175 calories
Bread 50-75 calories
Butter 25.50 calories

Soft cooked egg 50-75 calories
Mashed or sifted vegetable, as spinach, peas, beans, carrots 5-15 calories
Baked potato or boiled rice 50-100 calories
Bread 50-100 calories
Butter 50-100 calories
Milk (may be combined with vegetable in soup 100-150 calories.
Stewed fruit or plain pudding 100-200 calories
SUPPER 5.30-6:
Cereal with milk
or Cream soup
or Milk Toast
or
Bread and Milk
Stewed fruit, custard or junket, with or without plain sponge cake or plain cookies 100-200 calories.

BREAKFAST, 7.30 A.M.:

Persian Balm the creator and preserver of beautiful complexions. Tonic in effect and wonderfully stimulating. Safeguards and beautifies the most delicately-textured skin. Cools and relieves all skins flushed or irritated by weather conditions. Magical in results. A little gentle rubbing and a youthful freshness and daintiness is instantly created. Invaluable for softening the hands and making them flawlessly white. Truly the perfect toilet requisite for the woman who cares.

Farmers of Chile expect to shortly feel the benefits of the aid undertaken by the government.

WILL ROGERS IN NEW JOYOUS ROLE

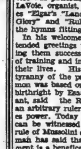
Mark Twain's Classic "A Connecticut Yankee" Comes to Bells Wednesday

Will Rogers, having made rollicking trips to Paris and London on the talking screen, goes to sleep in his newest starring picture, "A Connecticut Yankee," and wakes up in the court of King Arthur....round table and all. Yes, Will Rogers is now to be seen as the engaging hero of Mark Twain's immortal and fantastic comedy, "A Connecticut Yankee," which, modernized in the spirit of good, clean fun, emerges as amusing, infectiously gay entertainment.

From beginning to end Will Rogers, suddenly transplanted from the twentieth to the sixth century, makes monkeys of the omnipotent King Arthur and his iron-clad and pallid knights. Will upsets the aristocracy of Arthur's court, installs modern inventions and conveniences and, thick by little, puts good old Yankee pep into the days when fair ladies swooned and courageous knights rode to combat.

Few pictures of recent vintage so completely suit the entertainment needs of the day as does this Fox Movietone adaptation of "A Connecticut Yankee." And with insatiable Will Rogers addressing King Arthur as "Mr. Toastmaster" while on trial for his life, the fun remains at a high pitch of pleasant excitement until Will finally wakes up in the Connecticut of his birth.

You'll find Will Rogers and "A Connecticut Yankee" entertainment of the better sort. It also has spread an abundance of first rate action, compelling love interest and screamingly funny situations. The settings are most impressively beautiful, are in keeping with the modernized treatment accorded the picture by director David Butler.



Supporting Will Rogers is a fine cast headed by Maureen O'Sullivan, leading lady of "Song O' My Heart," "Just Imagine" and "The Princess And The Plumber;" Myrna Loy, Frank Albertson, William Farnum as King Arthur, and Brandon Hurst.

Will Rogers in "A Connecticut Yankee" will be shown at the Bells Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, matinee daily.

The Oil for the Farmer.—A bottle of Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the farm house will save many a journey for the doctor. It is not only good for the children when taken with colds and croup, and for the mature who suffer from pains and aches, but there are directions for its use on sick cattle. There should always be a bottle of it in the house.

"Dramatic reviewers of today are too enamored of their own wit to be of any other use."—Walter Hampden.

SEA CADETS AT SERVICE

Rev. C. E. Clark Preaches on Theme of "Tyranny of Present"

Belleville sea cadets made their first appearance at a religious service since their organization when they attended Christ Church where the Rev. C. E. Clarke, the rector, addressed them. The musical service was patriotic in character, Miss LaVole, organist, playing as preludes "Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory" and "Rule Britannia" and the hymns fitting the occasion.

In his welcome the minister extended greetings to the corps, wishing them success in their objective of training and in the enrichment of their lives. His theme was the tyranny of the present and his sermon was based on the selling of the birthright by Esau to Jacob. A tyrant, said the Rev. Mr. Clarke, is an arbitrary ruler and one who seizes power. Today this type of power can be witnessed in Italy with the rule of Mussolini and in Russia. One man has said that the best government is a benificent tyranny but Mr. Clarke stated there is little likelihood of a tyranny being beneficient for the tyrant is too anxious to retain power. "Now we live in a democracy, but there is a danger before everyone of us, that is the tyranny of the present."

Contrasting Esau the hunted, and Jacob, the fair to look upon, Mr. Clarke said that their outward appearance was symbolic of their lives. Esau set no value by the birthright and chose the mess of pottage when he was weary and hungry after a hunt; he gave way to the tyranny of the present.

Thinking of the Future

"How many of us today are really thinking of the future?" asked the preacher." I look up and down the land and see people who have discounted the future, invested in radios and motorcars and are without money. Do not go and spend every cent you have on clothes and things to eat. Do not let your present tyrannies over you". Even the manufacturers encouraged people to buy more and more, with the result that the depression and distress are emphasized.

One must not take in all that life offers, the next dance, the next social event. If one does, one fears his examination at the end of the school term. The only way to live is to live with the thought of the future. In scouting boys are taught to measure distance. The ribbon-like line in the far distance is a road as wide as the road on which the observer stands. It is said that Christ said "Take no thought of the morrow", but the minister stated that this was an erroneous translation, the words of Christ meaning, "Be not anxious nor worried about the morrow".

Of course there may come a time in life, in days of illness and in pain, in times of financial worry and distress of other kinds, when one might say "live only day by day", but that is not the message for the young.

Sayre's Story

"Lastly you have entered into training in the sea cadets and for you there must be something of the glamour of the wonderful history attaching to the navy and the merchant marine. The story of the navy is one of sea-faring ancestry, men who dared. You inherit this as sea cadets. Let that be your thought so that there may come not only physical fitness but also something of the spirit of those who made Great Britain great.

"Remember that we are thinking of eternity in the light of the Easter fragrance and I think we are born not only to be citizens of this life but also of eternity."

In his message to children, the rector spoke of the man who swallows himself, like the Cheshire cat in "Alice in Wonderland", which backed out of the picture leaving only its grin. Those who swallow themselves are those who boast, those who speak evil of everyone and everything that is brought up in conversation and those whose versatility can never be trusted for the multitude of lies they tell.

NEARLY KILLED BY GAS —DRUGGIST SAVES HER

"Gas on my stomach was so bad it nearly killed me. My druggist told me about Adlerika. The gas is gone now and I feel fine."—Mrs. A. Adams.

Simple glycerin, buckthorn, saline, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, helps GAS on stomach in 15 minutes! Most remedies act on lower bowel only, but Adlerika acts on both upper and lower bowel, removing poisonous waste you never knew was there. Relieves constipation in 2 hours. It will surprise you. Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly.

Having had a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years' standing.

Mr. Alex. Krcubrecsk, Chatel, Sask., writes: "Constant indigestion and cramps just about doubled me up. I lost weight; nerves were on edge; felt tired all the time. TANLAC brought back my healthy, vigorous self again; meals digested easily cramps gone for good."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation, or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. It is good, pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and barks. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you.

APPEAL DISMISSED

Toronto, April 18.—The second Appellate Court has dismissed the appeal of the Attorney-General of Ontario from the quashing of a conviction against Michael Needham for having liquor in a hotel at Pembroke, Ont. The conviction was made by Police Magistrate McGregor and quashed by County Judge Mulcahy. The Attorney-General appealed on the main ground that County Judge Mulcahy erred in quashing the conviction, because no formal complaint was made out by the Police Magistrate. It was held by the Appellate Court that the conviction should be quashed in any event because a charge under another section was inserted in the information.

The oldest coronation of which any contemporary relic survives, was the coronation of the Ethiopian King Asaphut, about 600 B.C.

Today Genuine Value receives its Just Recognition

Owing to their popularity, the smart models of 1931 McLaughlin-Buick Straight Eights will be continued throughout the coming summer and fall.

WHEN men gather in home, club or office, and the conversation turns to motor cars, there are always words of praise for McLaughlin-Buick. These are times when careful thought is given to important expenditures — times when genuine value, such as McLaughlin-Buick offers, receives its just recognition.

Hence McLaughlin-Buick is *winning more than fifty out of every 100 sales of eights in its price class— with 14 other makers sharing the remainder. Any company may have a good year, may catch the public's fancy through some one point or other—but McLaughlin-Buick cars must be better or people would not be buying them in such unrivalled volume.

ONE DROWNED, TWO ESCAPE, WHILE FISHING

KING ALFONSO FEARS DEATH AT HANDS OF ASSASSINS

MARMORA MAN IS DROWNED IN BEAVER CREEK

William Moffatt Met Watery Grave While Fishing

NO INQUEST

Younger Brother and Harry Woodbeck Managed to Reach Shore

Marmora, April 21 (Special Correspondent)—William Moffatt, 28, residing five miles from Marmora village, was drowned late yesterday afternoon in Beaver Creek, the boat in which he was fishing, springing a leak and sinking. At the time he was accompanied by his 15 year old brother, Norman Moffatt and his brother-in-law Harry Woodbeck, both of whom succeeded in reaching the shore. The accident occurred when the boat went down and never re-appeared.

The fatality occurred in water about fourteen feet deep where the current is said to be swift. The body was recovered a half hour later by John Vincent and Irvine McCoy, when it drifted into shallow water.

Provincial Constable Grey of Marmora, Chief Gillen of Marmora and Dr. Crawford went to the scene but life was extinct. There will be no inquest as the tragedy was purely accidental.

The three left their home in the afternoon in an old row boat to fish for suckers and went down the river, when the boat suddenly filled with water. The craft was in such a state by the centre of the stream and all three jumped overboard and started to swim to shore. Norman Moffatt and Woodbeck reached safety but the unfortunate man sank almost immediately and did not rise again in the surface. John Vincent and Irvine McCoy were soon on the scene and an active search was made for the body, it being recovered in less than half an hour. The deceased leaves to mourn his loss a mother, two brothers and one sister.

CAMPBELL WILL ASSAULT MARK

Sir Malcolm Will Attempt to Lower Florida Record

(Canadian Press)

London, Eng., April 21.—Sir Malcolm Campbell has definitely decided to attempt to better his world's automobile record of 206 miles an hour set recently at Daytona Beach, he said today. As soon as his car, the Bluebird, is returned from Buenos Aires it is to be rebuilt for the attempt, he said.

He has not yet decided where and when but he is going to New Zealand at the end of the year and "may have a shot at the new record there."

CONDITIONS HERE ARE IMPROVED

According to reports as issued by the local government employment office, conditions show a slight improvement over the last two weeks' period.

Employment of a casual nature has been quite brisk comprising jobs of 2 to 3 days' duration.

Farmers in this district are placing their orders for farm help, at rates of $20, $25 and $30 and board, for single men and $40 a month and board for married couples. Upwards of thirty men are working on the steel laying gang of the C. N. R. near Kingston.

There are still a number in private homes are in demand, both in Belleville and surrounding centres.

BRITISH ALTER BIG "J CLASS" BOATS TO MEET UNITED STATES CHALLENGE

In order to successfully compete with two class "J" yachts which the New York Yacht Club are sending to England to race in British waters, British yachtsmen are busy having their big class boats altered. The Shamrock V (left) is undergoing extensive changes in quilverons and a steel mast is to replace the wooden spar used in the America's Cup races last year; Britannia, (right) King George's grand old cutter, is also being equipped with the latest requirements of the Bermudian rig and steel mast. The Westward (centre) is being changed as are the Astra and Candida.

QUESTION OF DEPORTATION IS DISCUSSED

Consider Problem of Subjects who are Suffering From Disease

(Canadian Press)

London, April 21—The question of deportations from Canada of British subjects who had become public charges or were suffering from diseases, was again raised in the House of Commons today. Sir Henry. J. H. Thomas, secretary of state for Dominion affairs, said he was taking steps to get in touch with the Canadian government.

When the questioner pressed to know if the principles of the matter could be taken up with the Canadian government, the Minister replied the principles involved were very far reaching. The situation was difficult and delicate.

In reply to the questioner, Mr. Thomas said nothing would please him better than to see the establishment of complete friendship in the Empire. He said the suggestions might be made to the Dominion.

WOMAN IS GIVEN SPANISH OFFICE

New Republic Recognizes Political Equality in Appointment

Madrid April 21.—The Spanish Republic took the first step toward recognition of the political equality of women with men in the new regime today when Victoria Kent, an attorney, was sworn in as director of prisons.

She took the oath of office in the presence of the new Minister of Justice, Fernando de Los Rios and the Minister of Public Works, Alvaro Albornoz.

De Los Rios characterized the occasion as historic. He said it was particularly memorable because for the first time in history a woman was given an administrative post in a Government of Spain.

Another pronouncement of major importance was made today when the Minister of Finance, Indalecio Prieto, during a general discussion of his financial program, announced that a constitutional assembly would be called within three months.

Prieto said that he favored the nationalization of the pesets, but that the problem of currency stabilization would be left to the assembly, he cortes, as it is known in Spain.

PENSIONS MINISTER MAY QUIT CABINET

Hon. Murray MacLaren Likely to Be New Brunswick Governor

Ottawa, April 21.—Resignation of Hon. Murray MacLaren as Minister of Pensions and National Health is expected after the present Parliamentary session. It is reported he will be the next Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick. MacLaren served with distinction in the Canadian Army Medical Corps, overseas. It was his department that, some months ago, suddenly and without warning, reduced the relief payments to disabled veterans who were unemployed. This caused considerable embarrassment to the Government. Dr. MacLaren is a wealthy man—worth several millions — and retired in 1926 from New Brunswick Government House picture nicely.

EARTH TREMORS IN STATE OF N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y., April 21.—Upstate New York earth quakes of Monday's tremors were felt was not definitely outlined but they seemed to centre about the Albany-Schenectady-Troy area.

In those cities dishes rattled on pantry shelves, pictures swayed on walls, chairs rocked by themselves and objects skidded about on tables and mantels. A Watervliet, N.Y., man cut himself while shaving attributed it to the sudden lurching of his house.

The earthquake was officially recorded at the Dudley Observatory in Albany and at Canisius College in Buffalo. Rev. John P. Delaney, in charge of the seismograph at the college, said the instrument showed it beg n at 2:36:34 p.m. and lasted about one minute.

Reports of cracked walls and brokken plaster poured into newspaper offices in Troy, Glens Falls, Albany, Schenectady, and Saratoga Springs. Residents along Lake George said the shocks were preceded by a loud roar at Kaslkill.

INDIANS FINED FOR TRAPPING IN THURLOW

Raymond Maracle and Brant Brant are Convicted

His Worship Magistrate Millar (Lovell Pelgrame) of the Court of Raymond Maracle and Brant Brant, Indians on the Mohawk Reserve, charged under the Game and Fisheries Act, with destroying muskrat house, trapping out of season, and setting traps within five feet of a muskrat house, finding the accused guilty in each case. The fine was set at $10.00 and costs for each offence amounting to $82.00 in all against each man. The men were given until Monday to pay their fines, and in default they will serve one month in the county jail.

Magistrate Millar found that the men were trapping on land in Thurlow Township instead of Tyendinaga Township, where they had a right to trap. "There is no doubt in my mind under which power the Minister personally that the offences were committed in Thurlow Township," said His Worship. "There is no excuse based on the merits of being realists of the Reserve and the Indians may have special rights on their own Reserve, but when these offences took place they were not on Reserve land. If the Indians have special rights on the Reserve with that I am not concerned in this particular place. The Indian feels that he is an ally and not a subject but this view is entirely wrong."

BANDITS HOLD UP TREASURER

Robbery Executed After Collection of Taxes

Detroit, April 21.—Cutting through the heavy wire of a cashier's cage, two robbers obtained $28,458.01 in cash from the office of Ralph Smith, City Treasurer Charles L. Williams in the second floor of the City Hall late this afternoon while three police officers assigned to guard the office looked on from 30 feet away. The bandits cut through the cage, reached in, grabbed the money and checks and made a dash for Michigan Avenue.

One of the alleged robbers was arrested a few minutes later on a street by a patrolman, who chased him up Michigan Avenue to the corner of Third Street. He gave his name as Theodore Crowley, and his residence as Chicago. He was twenty-two old. No cheques or cash were found on him when he was searched by police headquarters.

The robbery was executed after careful study of the method of collecting taxes. One of the three policemen assigned to guard the office usually sits on a high stool beside the cashier's cage. The robber who cut the wires replaced the officer on the stool, and while pretending to read a newspaper cut through the heavy wire. When George Wilcox, the cashier, stepped from the cage the second robber rushed up, thrust a hand through the opening and grabbed the cash and cheques, which Wilcox had made the receipts for the day for this cashier.

PAIR GUILTY OF CONVERSION AND SENT UP

Charles and Mary Oliver Convicted at Hamilton

LARGE SUM LOST

Culmination of Exposure Results in Prison Terms

(Canadian Press)

Hamilton, Ont., April 21—Charles and Mary Oliver, convicted on conversion and fraud in connection with the affairs of the defunct McKnight-Oliver Syndicate were sentenced to terms of imprisonment by Judge Thomson today. The latter was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary on both charges, the sentences to run concurrently, and he must pay a fine of twenty thousand dollars or else spend another year in prison. His wife was sentenced to eighteen months detervination in the reformatory and on the charge of fraud was determinate. Both will be deported at the expiration of their terms.

Senator Thomson, the latter declared, moved for the arrest of Judgment. Crown Counsel Wishart read the indictment. The Crown submitted, however, that no indictment had been made good. Judge Thomson finally amended the charge of conversion slightly and dismissed the counsel's motion.

The Oliver case began more than a year ago when the McKnight Oliver Syndicate, Hamilton, Canada and United States investors had placed large sums of money became insolvent. The Oliver were arrested but the cases were postponed until the Crown strove to complete its evidence. They were tried several months ago, the hearing lasting for many days. The syndicate was formed to be backing invention by Robert McKnight of the Alloy Steel production.

INEBRIATED SAILORS TURN ON TAPS AND FLOOD POLICE DEPOT

Port Colborne, April 21.—The police station at Port Colborne was almost flooded out this afternoon.

Two sailors, rather wet inside and in a fighting mood, were locked up by Chief Constable Fred Davies and P.C. James Stevenson.

With the prospect of missing their boat, the sailors vented their wrath by tearing out a part of the plumbing and creating a miniature lake in the large cell room.

When the police remonstrated, the stream from the broken water pipe was turned through the cell door in their direction, and the flood invaded the police office. Stern measures were required to prevent further damage to the cells.

The pair will appear before Magistrate J. C. Maude tomorrow on charges of being drunk and doing malicious damage.

DIAMOND AGAIN UNDER ARREST

CATSKILL, N.Y., April 21.—(CP)—Jack "Legs" Diamond was arrested today on a bench warrant, presumably in consequence of the story of Grover Parks, Cairo, N.Y., truckman, that he was tortured by Diamond's gang.

The nature of the charge was not made immediately known. Diamond was taken quickly from his home and is lodged in the county jail here.

RUTH NICHOLS PLANS FLIGTH ACROSS OCEAN

Famous Woman Pilot Will Seek New Honours

New York, April 21—Ruth Nichols, within two weeks will attempt the first woman solo flight across the Atlantic ocean, Col. Clarence D. Chamberlain, her aeronautical adviser said today.

In the Red Lockheed, the very plane which she flew at a speed of 210 miles an hour at Detroit a week ago, she will take off from Harbor Grace, Nfld., to follow the Lindbergh route to Paris. It is said Chamberlain's vanity tried to dissuade her from the attempt. Miss Nichols who was only known as a society girl before she took up flying five years ago, is considered one of the leading female aviatory in the United States.

DOCTORS APPROVE OF BIRTH CONTROL

Committee Report Says Lack of Sex Education Mediaeval

New York, April 21.—Resolutions favorable to birth control were condemned in a report of the Public Health Relations Committee of the New York Academy of Medicine, it was revealed today when the report, approved on April 7, was made public.

"The absence of education of the public in sexual matters by the medical profession is mediaeval," the report said. "It is to be deplored, and efforts should by made to change the present attitude of physicians."

The recommendations pointed out that the New York Academy should be concerned with medical and public health aspects of birth control and not with its economic aspects; that conscriptive clinics now operating lawfully and in interest of individual health should be continued; that all institutions in which contraceptive service is rendered should organize similar clinics; that extradural clinics staffed with competent persons, should receive support of the medical profession as long as their services are required, i.e., until sufficient hospital clinics have been established; that medical schools should include in their curriculums instruction in modern contraceptive measures and that hospital clinics should give such instruction to practising physicians.

HAMILTON CLUB HERE

An inter-city visit made last autumn by the Kiwanis Club of this city to Hamilton, will be returned tonight when a number from Hamilton will be guests of the Belleville branch as well as members of the Picton Kiwanis Club. Bill Mayall, District Governor of Hamilton will give the address of the evening, while a programme has been arranged for the pleasure of the visitors. After the luncheon, they will be taken to the Belle Theatre for a special showing of Will Rogers in the "Connecticut Yankee." The Hamilton members will arrive at six o'clock, being met by members of the Belleville and Picton Club and escorted to the Quen's Hotel, where the luncheon will be held. A large turnout to the Belleville Club is expected to help entertain the visitors. This so delightfully entertained the Belleville contingent when they made the pilgrimage last fall.

GOES TO JAIL

Joseph A. McVicar, Desoronto, appeared before Magistrate Bedford yesterday in Desoronto, charged with indecision and after evidence was given by Edward Cole and Chief Hamilton, he was convicted of the offence. The young man also pleaded guilty to two former convictions of the same charge and was sentenced by His Worship to four months in the County Jail. The offence before the court was committed on March 27th, on the evening of a dance at Summerside Pavilion on the outskirts of the town. Edward Cole, proprietor, stated in court that he asked the young man not to enter the dance hall in his condition and when refused, Chief Hamilton investigated and made the arrest. The officer stated that McVicar showed all the signs of intoxication and Magistrate Bedford found him guilty of the offence, when the accused did not offer any evidence on his own behalf.

Dr. R. A. Flynn, who came to Belleville recently from Ottawa, has purchased the residence of Dr. F. W. Hill, corner of Queen and George street, and will occupy the same for office and residence. Dr. Hill, it is understood will shortly take up residence in Ottawa.

SPANISH CONSUL HERE

A distinguished visitor in the city over the week end was the Spanish Consul to United States who had been in Montreal and was en route to his residence in New York via Toronto. The party which included the consul and his wife, their three children, chauffeur and nurse maid, remained in Belleville overnight, guests at Belle Villa.

STILL WARM

The mercury still continues to climb to summer temperatures. Yesterday it touched seventy-eight above once again, equalling the mark set on Sunday. The lowest point the thermometer dropped to last night was forty-nine degrees above. The readings for the past two days were:

Yesterday	78 46
Today	71 50

COUNTRY CLUB OPENING

The Bay of Quinte Country Club will officially open its season this year on the 15th of May. In previous years it has been the custom to open on the 24th of May but as many people go away on the holiday it decided to change the date. The opening will take the form of a ball in the clubhouse.

PLAY PRESENTED.

"Cranberry Corners" was presented by Canniffon Dramatic Club at St. Andrew's Church, Gilead, last evening. A large crowd attended and greatly enjoyed the play. After the performance the members of the cast were entertained to a supper by the ladies of St. Andrew's Church congregation.

POLICE COMMISSION MET.

A meeting of the Police Commission was held at the Chambers of Judge Wills, Court House, today, all members being present. Only routine matters were discussed and outstanding accounts passed.

THREE OFFENDERS

Three appeared before His Worship today in police court charged with intoxication. All pleaded guilty and were assessed the usual amount $15.00 and $7.00 costs. None of the parties had sufficient funds to pay their fines but the court was in a lenient mood today and they were allowed until tomorrow to raise the amount. A motorist was fined $10.00 for having defective brakes on his car while another paid $2.00 for parking an unreasonable time on Front St. These fines were paid, the offenders pleading guilty without appearing in court.

INSTALLING POWER PLANT

Installation of the power plant was started this morning, by the Hibberd Bros., electricians, at the local filtration plant. It is expected that the power will be turned on by the end of the week for trial.

QUEEN VICTORIA WON

After dropping a soft-ball game to Queen Mary School on Thursday evening last by a score of 25-19, Queen Victoria came last night showed a startling reversal of form and beat Queen Mary by the significant score of 47-7. Lela Empey, on the mound for Queen Mary, pitched a good game but her team-mates were slightly off color. Victoria was slamming the ball hard. The lineups were Queen Mary, R. Morgan, c; L. FIRE PUMPER DEMONSTRATED AT CITY HALL

Fire pumping equipment such as is used in the city of Montreal to boost the pressure from the hydrant, was demonstrated on McAnnany St., before noon hour today when one of two pumpers of the Seagraves Fire Engines Limited of St. Catharines was attached to the hydrant at the city hall corner and pumped streams of water practically as high as the top of the tower of the city hall. The pumping equipment is capable of pumping 1300 gallons taken from the hydrant at thirty pounds and converting it into a stream of seven hundred and fifty gallons at two hundred pounds, or six hundred gallons at two hundred and fifty pounds pressure, or 400 gallons at 300 pounds.

Several streams were poured along McAnnany street at a pressure of less than two hundred pounds and then pressure was put up to 210 pounds and finally to 225 pounds. The stream which reached almost to the top of the tower of the city hall was pumped at a pressure of 225 pounds.

This afternoon after lunch, the Seagrave centrifugal pumper was taken to the fire hall park and water pumped from the river effectively.

The Belleville city council, Fire Chief Lynch, Waterworks Manager Austin and other officials of the city as well as the council and officials of Cobourg, the fire chief, Commissioner, Cobourg council, not being able to have a demonstration at home, came to Belleville to witness the performance of the machines, for Cobourg is thinking of purchasing such a pumper to add to their fire fighting equipment.

Following are the members of the delegation who witnessed the demonstration: Mayor George Thompson, Reeve W. E. Praill, Police Deputy J. H. Davidson, 2nd Deputy W. J. Corbett, Councillors Dr. Hodgson, by A. J. Russell, Town Clerk Alex. W. Young, Treasurer Jeff Field, Assessor Harry McGuire, Fire Chief R. Turpin, Assistant Chief Ward and Road Foreman James Campbell.

Mr. Duncan A. Carmichael, Jr., representing the Seagraves Fire Engines Limited, was in the city with the demonstrations.

The pumpers here today were on their way to Montreal where they are to be delivered.

WILL PLAY TITLE ROLE IN OPERETTA

This paper regrets exceedingly it was misled in printing the article in last night's issue regarding the operetta "Bulbul" by some members of the Tabernacle choir assisted by local talent.

It was supposed it came from those having the matter in charge, which was a mistake, A full advertisement of this comic operetta "Bulbul" in which Miss Doris Bodley is graciously playing the title role, appears in another column. Read it.

OBITUARY

MISS DORIS BADGLEY

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital at four o'clock Tuesday morning of Doris Badgley daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Badgley, Shannonville. The late Miss Badgley who was in her sixteenth year, had been ill only since Thursday with peritonitis. She had been a student at Belleville Collegiate Institut; and Vocational School last term, but was at home this year. She was a member of the United Church. FIRMAN—DOXSEE

The marriage took place on Saturday, April 18th, 1931, at the Anglican Church, Lindsay, of Mrs. Helen Doxsee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Snell, Charles Street, to John Harrington Firman of Sarnia. Mr. and Mrs. Firman will reside in Sarnia.

REOPENING OF WESLEY CHURCH

Sunday, April 19th, was a great and helpful day at Wesley United Church. The interior of the church has been greatly improved, the decorative work having been splendidly executed by Sr. H. Silingerland of Frankford. Many words of appreciation have been expressed by the people of the community as well as by visitors. The services on Sunday delighted with the richness and spiritual uplift of the messages given. The morning communion service "The Sanctuary". The evening message by Dr. Bishop on "Ye Shall be my Witness" was an uplift to all present, gripping the hearer in an admirable manner presenting the supreme function of the church. The choir leading spiritual services, gave additional interest to the services. Miss Marjory Calnek was pianist, and her services were much appreciated. In the evening service Mr. Ridley sang "Jesus is All the World to Me", as usual displayed a rich and pleasing voice and also were largely attended and all were assisted in a quartet composed of Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth, Miss Jas. Donaldson, Mr. Gazley, and Mr. Ridley. Mrs. E. Rush being accompanist. A thankoffering was asked of $183, so generous was the response that almost $190 was contributed. Rev. Mr. Farnsworth was present, and closed this long to be remembered service with a fitting prayer. The pastor, Rev. J. R. Buller expressed gratitude to all.

WILD GEESE BY THE MILLIONS FLYING NORTH

Forerunners of Huge Flocks Pass Near Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Man., April 21. (CP).—Forerunners of vast flocks estimated at close to a million, wild geese in their thousands are trending the northward march of spring across the prairies with a mighty migration to the haunts of the Arctic.

Feeding on prairie stubble, west of Winnipeg, several thousands of these winged vagrants are resting before resuming their long annual flight to Baffin Land, north of Hudson Bay, their spring nesting grounds.

Several species make up the flock, including the well known Canada goose, the blue goose and several sub-species known to sports men as "Wavies." They are distributed over a large section of the country ranging west from Rosser, Grosse Ile, and Stonewall to Reaburn Marquette and Woodlands districts.

They are most numerous between the Assiniboine river and the small Lake Manitou, to the north.

Naturalists who annually watch the migration of these birds declare that within the next week or two the flocks daily will be augmented until by the end of April the maximum concentration of geese on the North American continent will be found in this region.

In addition to the geese there are a few of the rare whistling swans to be found among the very fortunate observers.

During the past ten days annual migration of the smaller birds has been in full swing and in many places, observers report, the birds are several days in advance of the usual arrival dates. This proobly is the result of the continued fine weather that the west has enjoyed.

Provincial police and honorary game wardens are patrolling those areas selected by the geese for their concentration points, to prevent visits from the out-of-season hunter.

ANNIVERSARY OF AUXILIARY AT MOHAWK RESERVE

Tyendinaga, April 21.—The third anniversary of the Tyendinaga Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was celebrated at the home of Miss Lizzie Hill and her sister Mrs. Lucinda Hill, at Deseronto, on Wednesday, April 15th.

It is interesting to note that the Branch have celebrated each anniversary as Miss Hill's home since Pa organization in 1931.

The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. Elmer Amey. There were twenty members present. Hymn No. 318 was sung, followed by the Litany, prayers and scripture reading.

The Secretary, Mrs. H. A. Brant, read the minutes of the last meeting. Moved by Mrs. Mary Louis, seconded by Mrs. Irs Maracle, to adopt the minutes of last meeting—Carried.

Mrs. (Rev.) Pringle read the monthly report secetary of the Diocesan Board.

The Treasurer, Mrs. A. Maracle, gave her report.

The Little Helpers' Secretary, Mrs. B. Brant, gave her report.

The Superintendent of the Junior Mrs. (Rev.) Pringle, gave her report.

"The Leader of the Girls' Branch, Mrs. Ira Maracle, gave her report.

Offering was $2.26.

Hymn No. 317, with prayer, closed the meeting.

An enjoyable time was spent in sewing and a most delicious lunch was served later by Miss Lizzie Hill and her sister Mrs. Frank Burgess.

When the lovely W. A. birthday cake, with its glowing candles, was brought in, Rev. Mr. Pringle wished the Branch many happy returns, and Mrs. Lucinda Hill, the gracious hostess, and as the oldest member of the Mohawk Branch of the W. A. gently blew the candles out.

Mrs. Hill celebrated her 86th birth day on March 11th, and although a little hard of hearing and crippled is not as keen as when she was a girl, took part in the devotional part of the meeting.

As a Mother of the Mohawk Tribe, she is known as Ska-sonh-na-dy, meaning an honoured name.

Mrs. Hill is greatly beloved and respected for her gentle and kindly qualities, and many of her hopes expressed by the W. A. members present, that she may be spared many more years of health and happiness.

How To Lose Fat and Get That Youthful Feeling

Over in Great Britain when a man is feeling "as fit as a fiddle" and looking the "picture of health" they say:

"HE'S GOT THAT KRUSCHEN FEELING."

That means he takes his little dose of Kruschen Salts every morning.

It's the same in the U.S.A.—in Germany—in Holland—in Australia—in South Africa, for Kruschen Salts are now sold the world over.

Kruschen Salts is not one salt only—it is the combination of six salts necessary to healthy life.

Take half a teaspoon in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning, modify your diet and exercise regularly.

But don't miss a morning, for Kruschen not only puts and keeps the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels in splendid healthy condition, but purifies your blood-stream, and sends new life and activity to every part of your body.

HUDSON MOTOR COMPANY GIVEN A BIG CONTRACT

One of the largest contracts for automotive transportation placed by the government since the war has been awarded the Hudson Motor Car Company which has received an order for 1,000 Essex Super Six units. The cars are to be used by the postal departments on mail delivery work in 25 cities for light and heavy duty and long and short hauls, each unit having passed the more rigid tests established as part of the government's economy drive.

Postal work is not exactly new to Essex, for 12 years ago two Essex cars carried mail from New York to San Francisco and San Francisco to New York, the first automobiles to do so, in record-breaking time to deliver their mail sacks hours ahead of train time.

William J. McAneeny, president and general manager of the Hudson Motor Car Company, indulged in several reminiscent smiles when he learned of the new government contract. It was Postmaster McAneeny, then president of Essex Motors, who organized the mail trip, the success of which resulted in a general stimulation of business throughout the industry, the official government approval for such important work as mail carrying being the most convincing argument for reliability that had been offered up to that time.

"I can remember the difficulties that the trans-continental Essex mail cars had to overcome," reminisced Hudson's chief, "for the roads were terrible and the weather we encountered was severe. We had to wear in 16 dealers scattered across the country as official mail carriers and these men changed over with each other much as the old pony express riders used to do. The government made a special cancellation for the stamps on the automobile mail, and many of these are treasured by men who regarded the mail trip as a new milestone in the progress of the industry.

"We are very proud of the new government contract, and doubly proud that the Essex Super Six can assist the government in its economy program at this time," said Hudson's chief.

UTOPIA CLUB EUCHRE, DANCE WAS A SUCCESS

Proceeds Will be Devoted to Moira Lake Boys' Camp

A considerable sum will be devoted to the Boys' Camp at Moira Lake as the result of a delightful "At Home" held last night in Johnstone's Academy by the Utopia Club of this city. A large number were present as the function being drawn from the whole district. A. Short of the Y. M. C. A. distributed the many beautiful prizes donated by the merchants of the city for the many spot and prize dances and the euchre competition. Two orchestras dispensed popular music during the evening, Bernie Stewart and His Canuck Serenaders playing the first half of the programme, while Charlie Cloyer and His Bon Tons were heard in the second half. The music in both cases was all that could be desired, and the majority in attendance were present when the National Anthem brought to a close the evening's fun.

Dancing did not start until ten o'clock, the early part of the evening being devoted to a euchre drive. Competition was keen and the prizes won were worth playing for. At the conclusion, the following were the successful players: Ladies, Mrs. H. Bennett, Miss I. Taylor, Buffalo, Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Jean Deline, Mrs. Fred Andrews, Mrs. A. Johnstone and Miss Grant, while the gentlemen winners were Harry Boyle, Max Shorey, L. Baker, Arthur Smith, Fred Woodland, W. Doreen and W. Mattis.

A large number of spot and prize dances were run off but the chief attraction was the prize waltz. A large number competed and soon only five couples were left on the floor. After considerable discussion, the judges John Calcutt and Mrs. Dyer-Bennet awarded the prize to Mr. and Mrs. Larmer Mason with Mrs. James Lainstaer and Fred Bennett second. The other prize winners were Miss Grace Edison and Don Moynes, Miss Evelyn Bramhall and Howard Lowes, Miss Evelyn Bramhall and Walter Conklin, Mrs. L. Mason and Bruce Martin, Miss May Murphy and Robert Little, Miss Jewel Riggs and George Semark, Miss Jewel Riggs and Harold Doyle, Miss Mabel Chisholm and Mr. Rigrs, Miss Darrah and "Bennie" Stewart. The door prize, a five dollar gold piece donated by W. E. Tummon M.P., was won by Gerald Post. At the midnight hour dainty refreshments were served by the committee of the Utopia Club and dancing was resumed till the early hours.

DRAPERIES MADE NEW

"When we resumed housekeeping a month ago I found my draperies had faded and ruined from packing. I hung them out on the line, hoping to freshen and cleanse them. Then I forgot them. The result was they became badly faded and sun-spotted.

"I was heartsick until the happy thought struck me to dye them. I just dyed them a deeper green, and as I used Diamond Dyes they look gorgeous and new. I have never seen easier dyes to use than Diamond Dyes. They give the most beautiful colors—when used either for tinting or dyeing—and never take the dye out of cloth as other dyes do."

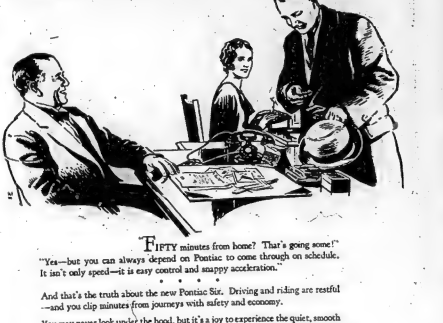
A WISE PURCHASE



Winnipeg, Man., April 21. (CP)—Fifty years ago a prairie waste, scorned by land buyers, Armstrong Point today is one of the exclusive residential districts of Winnipeg.

John McDonald and H. Rothwell paid $28,000 for Armstrong's Point a half a century ago, much to the amusement of many Winnipeg citizens who ridiculed the purchase as forced outspoken terms. The Point at that time was far removed from the heart of the city.

Today, Armstrong's Point contains fine homes and quiet driveways and is valued at $1,500,000.

"There is nothing more dangerous to the prestige of a nation and of the law than the making of laws the observance of which cannot be enforced."—Albert Einstein.

"Ten minutes faster to the office this morning — and I didn't speed..."

FIFTY minutes from home? That's going some!"

"Yes—but you can always depend on Pontiac to come through on schedule. It isn't only speed—it is easy control and snappy acceleration."

And that's the truth about the new Pontiac Six. Driving and riding are restful —and you clip minutes from journeys with safety and economy.

You may never look under the hood, but it's a joy to experience the quiet, smooth power-flow of Pontiac's 60-horsepower engine. Steering and gear-shifting are effortless. And if you care for that sort of thing, you can "stop on a dime"—with Pontiac's big brakes.

Then consider Pontiac's modern beauty, the luxury and completeness of its appointments. Bodies by Fisher are finished with such careful attention to detail as special insulation against engine heat and noise. Such unusual items as 5 wire wheels, Lovejoy shock absorbers, fender indicator lamps, radiator screen and new-style bumpers, demonstrate the high standard of its General Motors value.

We invite you to see the Pontiac Six and to test it. You will be agreeably surprised at what you can buy for such low prices. Likewise you will be satisfied with the low, time-purchase terms of GMAC; and the generous provisions of the General Motors Owner Service Policy that safeguard your satisfaction.

PRICED FROM $875 at factory, Oshawa, Taxes Extra.

FAKING THE BEST

A good name is valued even by criminals, the tribute to reputation. In New York the other day a huge plant containing 6,800 gallons of bogus beverage was seized after a search lasting for twenty-five cities. This was the aftermath of the discovery of a counterfeit beverage ring at work which has cost a manufacturing company one hundred thousand dollars in the past year. A vat, printing press, and imitation plates and soft drink labels, a truck, 6,800 gallon jugs of imitation beverage and eight hundred gallons more in barrels already on the truck were seized. For more than a year the company has been receiving complaints and the result was the discovery that the company was being victimized by a bottling ring. The ring had been operating one year and moved their headquarters from time to time. Five suspects are held.

Men not fake or imitate the worthless, that was why this liquid was chosen as the one to imitate. As it is a large seller, they must have made considerable sums of money.

A LITERARY MAN'S ESTATE

Arnold Bennett left an estate of half a million dollars as a result of his tireless activity in the field of literature. Had a financier his field opened the genius for finance that Bennett did for literature, the financier would have doubtless had one hundred times as large an estate to leave behind him. No one ever hears of ten or hundred million estates left by writers. Yet this is a proof that some recognition is at least due to the literary craft, though budding writers ought to remember that Bennett is one in thousands of writers to leave so much wealth behind him.

KNOWING THE GREAT

In California a test was made of the knowledge of the great men and women of all time possessed by students of a high school. More than two thousand were asked to give the names of twenty-five great persons and the answers were many of them laughable but also sad from the standpoint of lack of knowledge. Asked to mention "leaders" some thought they referred only to military commanders or politicians. Nearly half could not find twenty-five "great". Inventors, however, were named most often as benefactors of humanity. Authors came second, discoverers third, explorers fourth and musicians fifth. There was no apparent widespread knowledge of personages in the dramatic or plastic arts, and there was no high average of movie stars. Leaders in the church were named usually because they had helped human welfare rather than for the refinement of doctrine. Women fared badly, the woman most mentioned, being Joan of Arc, twenty-sixth on the list.

The students confused "invent" and "discover", "find" and "found".

The New York Times comments: "This poverty of knowledge, with the widely diverse selection, indicates the need of correcting high-school teaching of history and biography."

THE GARDEN

"Ever since the days when 'the gardener Adam' tilled the soil, man has loved to potter around on his bit of land," writes the Toronto Globe. "The more amateur he is, the greater his enthusiasm, and he will be satisfied with lesser results than those expected by more skilled toilers in the backyard.

"With the disappearance of the snow the gardener prepares for work. He takes down the spade, the hoe and the rake and assembles them in the woodshed. Good Friday, early spring holiday, saw him looking over the scene of his miniature operations; and there is no more satisfying sight than that presented by a man on his back doorstep, arms akimbo, making decisions as to where the beds will be located that are to yield the potatoes, the beets, the parsnips, the cauliflower, and the bit of sage that is to be dried for winter use. Annual, the fringe of flowers will be close to the fence, as that is where the hardy perennials have established themselves.

"Now he is into the work in earnest, enjoying the inimitable aroma of freshly upturned earth. Pockets of seed are in his pockets; and he whistles as he works. Before the planting is done his back will be sore; the manual exercise will be the last mind that, the garden is taking definite shape, and all that remains to be done is to place on beds the green growing branches that are to frustrate the predatory efforts of the neighbor's chickens. Thus the poet: 'I think of the garden after the rain; and hope to my heart's comes singing.' "

It is a good thing that the days are long and growing longer so that discussion on daylight saving and standard time need not be curbed. There will be plenty of time to talk upon the question and perhaps even to vote upon it.

GROWING SMALLER
By Aline Michaelis

The world is growing smaller year by year
And as it shrinks far places are brought near
What once was but a fable, vague and dim,
A storied realm upon the wide Earth's rim,
Looms now so close an outstretched hand can reach
The sacred mountain, the exotic beach.

As conquerors of time and space, we know,
More truly how once-distant lives must flow
All that was veiled, uncertain and obscure
Becomes known land, wherein our steps are sure;
And with increasing continents revealed
Increasing treasures do the swift years yield.

The world is growing smaller and we find
As it has dwindled, hearts have grown more kind.
Greater man's grasp of all his brother's needs,
And quicker his response to all their needs;
Until bright promise shows the Earth, one land
Whereon all peoples love and understand.

SETH PARKER and the neighbors of Jonesport, Maine, are in Toronto today, and having one of their old fashioned gift-effings in Hall, Bick, Craft, Hughes, Parker, Lizzie and Cephas, the Captain and all the other real folks who delight so many radio listeners-in every Sunday night, but are touring some now and filling invitation engagements hither and yon. Let's hope they come this way. Phillips Lord, creator of "Sunday Night at Seth Parkers," says "Seth Parker" is not a religious character in the ordinary sense of that term, but just a man who loves his God and his neighbor. In one program soon to be on the air, Lizzie asks, "Who are Christians?" And Seth replies: "Well, Lizzie, if a feller cut up in the morning with neuralgia in the back and rheumatis in the legs, and the biscuits didn't set well on his stomach, and it wuz rainin', and he had to climb in under the hencoop and mosquitoes was bitin' him; an' I come along and seen his feet stickin' out and I say, 'Howdy,' Mister!' and if he sings out 'Howdy!' Nice day, ain't it?' then I wouldn't have to see the rest of him to know he was a Christian."

CIMARRON, film version of the famous rush into Oklahoma Territory, and subsequent development of that state, gives a graphic picture of how the American Indian has been exploited by the white man. Gradually, driven back and their land taken away from them these particular Indians were given reserve in Oklahoma, noted principally for its rocks, sand and general worthlessness. Later Lady Luck handed the Indians a golden gift in the discovery of oil on the reserve. And the white man, Yankee Crevat, pioneer editor, fought for the rights of the Indians when the Indians were unprepared to have any rights when the white man could not grab. Millionaire Indians became common after the oil discovery, and that fretted a certain type of dirty white man who was hard put to it to separate the Indian from his easy money. A press despatch from Washington, however, reports a bill having been passed sometime in the past which will take the oil land away from the Indians in five years, or in 1936. Uncle Sam will have some tall explaining to do if he lets the schemers get away with that.

UNPAID TAXES

It is apparent that Oshawa is not the only city which is having trouble with unpaid taxes. The neighboring city of Peterboro is quite perturbed over its situation. It has on its books unpaid taxes to the total of over $55,000, and it has an overdraft at the bank of $40,000, so the council of Peterboro has given the tax collector orders to make a strong effort to collect some of the tax arrears.

Under present conditions, however, it is one thing to give orders, and quite another thing to give them into effect. People do not allow their taxes to get into arrears for the fun of it because they want to. On the whole, the people of most communities realize their obligations, and do their level best to meet them. So today every community is a greater or lesser extent is suffering from an overdraft, simply because the people have not got the money to pay their over due taxes. It is not a serious condition, but it is hard to know what to do about it, outside of waiting for conditions to improve so that the delinquents have the money with which to pay the arrears of taxes.—Oshawa Times.

GANDHI AND HIS SURRENDER TO TROUSERS

It was at first announced that Gandhi would attend the forthcoming Round-table Conference in London clad only in sandals, loin cloth and dhoti, but the Mahatma, it is now presented as saying that he would firmly adhere to this costume which distinguishes the Indian pariah, and which he has now worn for many years. He was, moreover, said to have objected to European clothes as being uncomfortable and even a torture. But it was not always so.

Pictures taken in 1890 when he was a law student in England, show that he were fashionable clothes, with shirts, wing collars and bow ties. At that time he made a brief attempt to rival his Western classmates in fashionable dress, and for a while went to Bond Street to have a dress suit fitted. He bought a silk top hat. He took home from the shop a walking chain (today he pins his watch on his robe with a safety pin). On the mornings he did and undid his tie until it was just right, and parted his hair—on the right side—very carefully.

Later, when he became a successful lawyer in India and South Africa, he became less finicky about his appearance, but he still dressed as a normal European. It was while there, in South Africa that he took the vow of poverty and began to live as nearly like the poorest and lowest-born Hindu. It may be that his return, even for a time, to Western dress will have a tendency to modify his political views, but of this no development upon which the British Government should be much too much.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

College Offers Boy Hero Free Education

DENVER, April 21—Bryan Untiedt, 15-year-old hero of the bus tragedy of the Pleasant Hill School, near Downer, Colo., intends to get "a lot of good advice" from President Hoover concerning his future education.

Bryan was at a luncheon for the bus survivors here today when he said he had been offered a 4-year scholarship by Washington College at Chestertown, Md.

The Associated Press dispatch telling of the award was read at the luncheon and Bryan's schoolmates cheered as did other guests in the hotel dining room.

Bryan did not respond with a speech but he told newspaper men he appreciated the offer.

"I'd like to go to West Point," he said.

"That's the idea I've always had and if there is any chance of getting there I'm going to try my pass the examination. Of I'm not in the high school long enough to get another year before I'm years of high school.

"I expect to get a lot of good advice from President Hoover when I see him in Washington."

Bryan, who strove valiantly to keep schoolmates from freezing to death in the blizzard which overtook the stalled children died, will be a guest of Mr. Hoover at the White House.

H. A. Untiedt, thinks his son should "do the eighth grade twice, just to get a good grasp on things."

Mrs. Untiedt characterized as a "marvelous opportunity" the award by Washington College. The mother said she was not qualified to advise her son about his education, saying she could only teach him to differentiate between right and wrong and emphasize the "power of Divine Guidance."

The family will hold a little living room conference when Bryan receives Washington College's offer.

The fifteen survivors of the bus tragedy are here for a week's visit as guests of The Denver Post.

Chestertown, Md., April 21—Dr. Percy Starkey, president of Washington College, today sent a telegram to Bryan Untiedt, informing him that the college had awarded to him a four-year scholarship including room rent, board and tuition, effective upon his graduation from high school.

Washington, April 21.— President Hoover is fixing a date for the visit of Bryan Untiedt to the White House and an endeavor to arrange one which will give him an entire evening to

Educational Methods in English Prisons

NEW YORK, April 21.—Emphasis on the careful selection and training of a personnel together with provision for a complete program of education and employment related to them are outstanding factors in the system employed in English prisons, according to Alexander Paterson, commissioner of Prisons in England and Wales, who addressed the members and guests of the National Society of Penal Information at a meeting held yesterday under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary in the Hotel Metropolitan House, 34 East Thirtieth Street.

Declaring that any prison system will stagnate unless experiments are made, Commissioner Paterson said: "Why not shift the locks to the other side of the prison door? The cell is the prisoner's room and his home for the time being. We tried it with success and with the approval of the prisoners. We left the doors open and women are dealt with in all the prisons under the supervision of the period of a year.

Referring to the extensive program of vocational training, he said: "We planted the meager instruction in the 'three Rs' to the level of efficiency and that every subject from playing to carpet-keeping and economy was included in the work provided for prisoners sentenced to terms of imprisonment. Classes are also arranged to conform to the program provided by the government's radio broadcasting and are conducted by instructors who volunteer for the services.

Outlining the system of selecting suitable candidates for the personnel of prisons, the commissioner revealed that the 1000 applicants a year only 120 are selected for the period of probation which is required before the men are placed permanently in the service. While in the training school candidates after a full program of eight hours' work are expected to study further at night, he explained.

Mr. Paterson, who has just completed a tour of the principal prisons of this country lasting four months, said after his address that there was a great contrast in the systems in England and the United States, because of the comparative size of their institutions and the number of prisoners. He also said that he had given some study to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment during his tour, as well as the development of the Borstal system among the women's prisons of this country.

FACING FACTS

Many men in the market, and it is rather surprising to read in the Financial Post of changes that they do not want the truth but prefer to live in a fool's paradise. In an article in the National Business section of the Financial Post, Mr. Alvin T. Simonds, president of the Simonds Saw and Steel company, gives instances of the refusal of business men to face facts. In February, 1929, a business magazine turned down one of his articles because it depicted a cyclical down-turn in business. When subsequent irregularities of

There's No Secret in Making Good Frosting

By Hannah Wing

Somebody or other started the rumor, which has been fostered by jealous cooks, that it takes secret and dark art to turn out those resplendent frostings, those creamy fillings. Not at all! It simply requires a good recipe, some reliable ingredients, a little care—which is all most cooks long requires!

There are a world of helps in simplify the making of frosting and filling. If your time is limited, and your cake is plain, you may make a simple uncooked frosting with a recipe that results no creaming. A fanciful and decorative cake may be turned out quickly for the party or birthday with the use of the shredded coconut grains in pastel shades.

A smooth "boiled" frosting with just a grain in a penful, and not a trace of that sugary taste is easy to make if you use corn syrup in it; the same ingredient comes in several flavors so you may vary the recipe without changing the method at all.

Corn Syrup Boiled Frosting

2 cups sugar,
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
1 teaspoon flavoring
1-2 cup water
2 egg whites

Boil sugar, water and syrup until it spins a thread (240 degrees F.) Pour over stiffly beaten egg white, never, set bowl in water, and beat until thick enough to spread.

Coconut Frosting

Use above recipe for boiled frostings, sprinkle shredded coconut on; coconut frosties is pink, green, orange, toasted or rainbow, generously over surface of frosting.

Orange Date Filling

1 tablespoon butter
1-3 cup sugar
2 1-2 tablespoons cornstarch
1-2 cup chopped dates
1 egg yolk
1-2 cup water
1-2 cup orange juice
1-3 teaspoon grated orange rind

Melt the butter in the top part of a double boiler, stir in the sugar and cornstarch, then add the water, orange juice and grated rind. Stir over hot water until thick. Add slightly beaten egg yolk and chopped dates and cook for 1 minute. Cool before spreading on cake.

Fudge Frosting

2 squares chocolate
3 cups sugar
1-2 cup milk
1-4 cup dark corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons butter

Cut chocolate and combine with sugar, milk and syrup, and cook until it forms a very soft ball when tried in cold water (234 Degrees F.). Remove from fire, set pan in cold water, add butter and let stand until mixture thickens enough to stir well, when tried with spoon. Add flavoring and beat until thick enough to spread on cake.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

It is plain to any brain that clicks that the army of beauty seekers must carry on. There are times when the suppliant for pulchritude is ready to give up the fight, she actually thinks she'd enjoy the peaceful business of growing old and ugly. But it won't do to join with the beauty slackers. To lose interest in the reflection in the looking glass is to lose interest in life, to start going to seed, to be on the toboggan hurtling one self towards the valley where wall-flowers grow. So keep fit, keep in form, keep on your toes. There's nothing to be gained by quitting the game.

The vinegar rinse is a help to the feminine three other beauty plants daily hair. It makes the shampoo more thorough, separates each hair from its neighbors, gives the strands body and resiliency. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar to a quart of warm water. After the shampoo hold the head over a washbowl and pour on the rinse. Pour on repeatedly by using a cup, or dip the head in the bowl. Finish with a tepid spraying.

A rose-red nose may be caused by impaired circulation, in which case rubbing the body with a moistened salt every morning, removing the crystals with cold water will prove beneficial. If the diet is at fault, cut down on rich, heavy, dishes and substist mainly on lean meats, poultry, fish, green salads, vegetables and fruits. Apply ointment of zinc oxide nightly.

Here is the recipe for a massage cream that is valuable in lessening of wrinkles; melt together one half ounce of white wax, one half ounce spermaceti, one ounce of cocoanut oil, one ounce of lanolin; add two ounces of oil of sweet almonds; remove from heat, pour in one ounce of orange flower water to which a few drops of oil of lavender flowers have been added. Whip with egg-beater until the consistency of whipped cream then pour into jars.

Peroxide and powdered pumice stone form a paste that is effective to use with orange wood stick for the purpose of detaching cuticle from the nail base and sides. Send the stick around in a circular motion.

SCOTT'S EMULSION FIRM ACQUIRED

The Ritchie-Shoemaker combination has bought one of the leading proprietaries — Scott's Emulsion, which has been manufactured for nearly seventy years by the firm of Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, New Jersey, and New York, with subsidiary companies and factories throughout the Western Hemisphere. This purchase has been made by Harold F. Ritchie, Harold F. Ritchie & Co. Inc., of New York; the Ritchie Chemical Products Co., Limited, of London, England; the Pompeian Company, Inc., International Proprietaries Limited, owners of Eno's "Fruit Salt," the Thermogene Company, Limited, Thermogene's Health, England, and several other companies.

The internal management of the manufacturing business of Scott & Bowne will be handled by the Shoemaker family of the same name as the financial business. The sales department of the business will be handled by the Ritchie Companies, and the Shoemakers and Ritchies will handle the sales in the U.S. advertising the same way in which Scott's has always been done.

Manufacturing will be carried on as in the past at Bloomfield, New Jersey. Also in Toronto, Canada, where the company now has a modern factory. It also has nine factories in South and Central America, and one in Mexico.

The following Board of Directors was elected at yesterday's meeting: F. M. Shoemaker, Chairman; Harold F. Ritchie, President; Guy S. Shoemaker, Vice-President; W. L. Armitage, Vice-President; Clayton S. Shoemaker, Arnold Caine, Peter B. Ritchie, Charles Fowler, W. R. Platt, directors.

Taxicabs now may be hired in Kingston, China, for 56 cents an hour.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers:

A recent article on Queen Mary's jewels is of special interest at present when royalty in general is being rudely discussed:

"As everyone knows who has attended court and official functions during the season in London, the Queen has one of the most wonderful collections of jewels in the whole world, "and she is a past mistress in the art of wearing them so as to show off their full beauty.

"The most wonderful of her Crown jewels is probably the Koh-i-noor. That this should adorn the Queen's crown, rather than the King's is because of an old eastern tradition which maintains that if the jewels ever are to be worn by a man ruler the loss of India would result.

The royal set of emeralds, which the Queen sometimes wears at one of the courts, were won by Her Majesty's grandmother, the Duchess of Cambridge, in a lottery. Rhine they have come into Queen Mary's possession she has added many other gems, with the result that she now has one of the finest collections of emeralds in existence.

"Her Majesty is fond of jewels and has an enviable collection of her own, as well as those she wears on official occasions. During her frequent visits to antique shops she has recently acquired some fine strings of Jade and amber, which she has placed together on black satin beds in a Chippendale cabinet in her boudoir.

"Among her treasured personal presents of jewellery are a magnificent diamond bracelet and drop pendant, both costly and wonderful pieces, which were given to her by the King.

"The Queen always chooses the jewels she will wear with a certain toilette with the utmost care, and she never appears twice successively with the same jewel scheme. Like Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra Her Majesty is very fond of pearls Her Scotch pearl necklaces are adorn ing a source of wonder, and on unofficial occasions she may often be seen wearing a double row of pearls and single pearl earrings.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

Advice to the Lovelorn

What Shall She Have For Supper?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I notice in your column that you often advise girls to invite their men friends to Sunday night supper, as it is an easy meal to prepare and simple. Two or three of my friends have taken your advice and had such good times I am tempted to try my luck as a hostess, too. But I really don't know what to have. Would you mind giving me a few hints? ANNE.

Don't attempt anything elaborate at first, but have everything good and appetizing. Sandwiches are always a good choice and people like them. There are literally hundreds of different kinds. Have a few made of meat—chicken, or tongue, roast beef or cold ham. They are especially good when toasted, and, if you have an electric toaster, it is jolly to toast them at table. Cottage cheese, pimentos, olives, all make good and with filling, also chopped nuts and pickles. Sandwich cake is always a treat, and, if you're not accomplished enough that line, buy one at a good bakery and get it of the best quality. Nothing is quite so unappetizing as poor cake. Have good coffee—there is no excuse for any worse—and you know how to make that. If you want a second refreshment than sandwiches, fill your cake and tempt something more elaborate, salads are most appetizing.

How Shall She Invite Him?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A few weeks ago I met a very nice young man at a party and I should like to invite him to call on me, particularly as my father knows and likes him very much. Would it be proper to write him a note or phone and invite him to the house?

Rosebud.

Either would be proper but perhaps it would be better to phone him as it would seem less formal.

She Says Boys Don't Tell.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two girls who fell very much in love with a couple of boys who are in the same school with us. When they found out we liked them they were pleased and showed us a great deal of attention. But as girls are bound to do, we told everyone about it, and when the boys heard we'd been talking they suddenly cheased. They have not spoken to us when ever they see us now. Please give us your advice about acting so we will care about them.

Miss and Lonely.

Charge this little incident up to experience and the next time you become interested in boys don't tell "everyone". If, as you say, they make fools of you, they deserve no more, I should think your pride would come to your rescue and refuse to have not want to make up with such unmannerly boys. And don't forget, any girl makes a doormat of herself, she's likely to get a doormat's treatment.

"BABE" RUTH GARNERED TWO CIRCUIT BLOWS

39-YEAR-OLD VETERAN WINS BOSTON RACE

BOSTON BRAVES DIVIDE WITH McGRAW'S TEAM

Cullop's Home Run Helped Reds to Win First Game

Boston, April 21— The Boston Braves scored a run in the ninth inning of the second game yesterday against the New York Giants, winning 1 to 0, but lost the first game yesterday morning 4 to 3.

In the second game Richbourg walked to start the ninth, Berger, in attempting to sacrifice, popped out. Sheely singled to right and Richbourg pulled up at third. Chatham batted for Wilson, and walked on four straight balls, filling the bases. Spohrer sent a long fly to Lindstrom and Richbourg scored after the catch with the only run of the game.

Carl Hubbell for the Giants and Harry "Socks" Seibold for the Braves pitched the entire distance, allowing six and seven hits, respectively.

Frankhouse, starting Boston pitcher in the first game, was removed in the eighth inning and the Giants scored the winning run, had tripled, Terry scoring on Chatham's wild pitch.

Cincinnati, April 21—Nick Cullop's home run over the left fence with two on, two out and the score tied at 3-3 in the fifth inning here yesterday, played a decisive role in handing the Cincinnati Reds their first victory of the National League race.

The Reds drove two of Lo Ji with Rad Lucas pitching the whole route and holding the Pirates safe, after they had added two runs in the seventh.

Two errors by Regan while he was attempting to throw a throw by Traynor for a double play in the fourth enabled the Reds to get three runs.

Philadelphia made their long five straight games. Manager "Uncle" Robinson and the Phillies. The score:

The Robins pounded Dudley Fallenstein, Wilson and Watt for 15 hits, while Van Mungo and Joe Shaute, former Cleveland Indian southpaw, had two season hits, a double and a hits.

Chicago, April 21—Jim Bottomley, first man up in the ninth inning, poled a home run into the right field stands, to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 6 to 2 victory in the third game of the series with the Chicago Cubs yesterday.

Bottomley and Grantland led the Cardinals' batting attack against Bob Smith, Cubs' pitcher, getting six of the nine hits off him.

He's Rugged at Least

By HARDIN BURNLEY

Seven years ago Benny Leonard retired, the undefeated world's lightweight champion, and, ever since, the Jewish fight fans of this and there are hundreds of thousands in New York City) have been looking hopefully for his successor in popularity. It seemed for a time as though Al Singer was the lineal heir especially when he won Leonard's former title by stopping Sammy Mandell in less than a round last Summer. But about four months later Tony Canzoneri knocked out Singer in the opening session, a few weeks after Jimmy McLarnin had scored a K.O. over Al in an overweight match.

Previously, Leonard himself had hailed Singer as a real champ. But that went blooie soon after that. He just couldn't stand the hard going, the scraps, and that was the fault which ruined such other prominent New York ring lights as Sid Terris and Ruby Goldstein. How these Ghetto whirlwinds could shine against second raters, but when Sid collided with McLarin and the Ruby Boy Hudkins, they were flattened by rug fashion as soon as the thumping got too rough.

Now the Ghetto glorying in the Leonards, Leach Crosses, Bernsteins and Gaels rigged ilk of the past mourn the fragility of Singer, Terris and Goldstein, who flame only to crumple before the onslaughts of tougher battlers. Al could hit magnificently. Sid was a boxing wiz, and Ruby could do both, but—none of them could take it when clashing with real class. And now—

The Ghetto is watching hopefully the career of Ben Jeby, Huddle-weight, whose most important test thus far was a clear cut win over Lew Harvey, British champion. Vince Dundee had won the popular decisions over the skilled Englishman, but few conceded the rather green Jeby a chance against the experienced Tar tey. However, Ben gave Len a convincing beating, during which he proved, in part, that he could stand a grueling pace. Jeby looms as Ghetto boy who is rugged enough not to take it, and so his backers are expecting that he may get proper ring merits mention in the same breath with Benny Leonard.

RUTH'S HOMERS WON FOR YANKS

Boston Reds Sox Went on Spree Against Senators

New York, April 21—Two home runs by Babe Ruth, both of which scored a runner ahead of him, gave the New York Yankees a 5 to 4 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics yesterday in the second contest of a four-game series. Ruth hit his first homer in the fourth inning with Lazzy on first base.

Ruth came to bat in the eighth inning with one man out and Lazy again on first base as a result of a single. Ruth took two strikes, and then connected for the third homer of the season, and his second of the day.

Big George Earnshaw was the victim of both of Ruth's homers. Except for the fourth and eighth innings when Ruth was on hand to lead the attack, Earnshaw held the Yankees in check. He allowed only eight hits and looked like a sure winner, until Ruth decided the game with the second long swat.

Washington, April 21—The Boston Red Sox staged a slugfest at the expense of four Washington hurlers and took the second game of the series 13 to 5. The Red Sox six errors in the set.

Crowder and Russell engaged in a duel for six innings, the former weakened in the seventh and the Sox put across seven runs off his and Thurber's slants. Russell was effective although he allowed the eight scattered blows.

The Sox collected ten doubles out of their 18 safeties, Barry, Rhyne, Pickering and Gerber doing the attacking.

Cleveland, April 21—Cleveland's Indians swung their clubs once more yesterday and wrecked through the Detroit Tigers for a 10 to 4 victory.

The Indians, headed by Luke Sewell, collected six hits apiece and Hogsett, while Hudlin went the entire distance to win the eighth. Sewell got a triple in the sixth, scoring one run and doubled in the seventh to chase in two more.

Joe Vosmik continued his bang-up game of the last few days, but failed to do any serious damage with his stick. He managed getting two singles in the fourth, but retaliated with a triple on Hoyt's error in the eighth.

Stone, Detroit left fielder, smashed out a homer in the eighth.

NEWARK DEFEAT TORONTO LEAFS

Jersey City Register Third Victory Over Rochester

Newark, Apr. 21. — The Toronto Maple Leafs gave a semblance of an baseball flicker in the ninth inning here yesterday and allowed the Newark Bears to beat them 3-2.

One reason, perhaps, why the Leafs did not score in the game probably was Arthur Mills, the youthful southpaw who grinded slowly and stayed on the job all route.

On two occasions during the game Manager Steve O'Neill went to the pelot of deriicking the said Mills but he let him linger. The Bears' ex-pilot ed Mr. Mills for 12 blows while the Leafs could do only six with Al Vacin, the Newark flinger, on the mound for him for six safeties.

Even though Mills was on the loose in the box at times the game really foulless he managed to nick, although the official records will be satisfied with the final analysis. Mills could the pace escaped unscathed but for a bit of saffron fielding in the final canto.

The ninth inning was just one of those things that makes a pitcher kick over ash can back in the home town.

The score was two-all in the ninth, fourth time, which is something of a record for one game.

Loop's Lucky Mit.

Then came Loop to plant one of those tantalizing slow flies which went about 30 feet behind second base. Sliding came leaning in from center, Rogell went out and so did Morehart.

Yes sir, you guessed it.

Two days previous he used to swat the fly and the ball fell safely right in front of center.

Even at that the hit might have been held to a mere single but the galloping Loop popped to where the second sack sector and found no one covering the bag.

Naturally a player will go after a long bag if he sees that it is lonesome and waiting for a customer. Loop got to second and was in scoring position.

Bejin, the Newark first sacker, who has not fired the league with his hitting, has purposely passed to get at Herb Thomas, who is hitting furiously and who is trying to shake the unemployment situation, which has been bothering him, by displacing the youthful Bobby Stevens.

Reading, Apr. 21.—Reading lost its sixth straight game of the season here yesterday when Montreal rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Keys, 4-2.

Chet Van Alstyne, Reading right-hander, will-displaced the tying run across the plate in that inning and Ripple then homered with a man on base.

Barrett hit a home run for Reading in the fourth.

Jersey City, Apr. 21—Bouncing up to a trio of Rochester hurlers for a total of 13 singles, Jersey City's batterers registered their third consecutive victory by amassing exactly a row over the Rochester Red Wings by a 13 to 2 count. Rochester got its score of 12 to 2.

Benny Kaufmann was the mound for the Skeeters, pitched a masterful game, doubling the slugging Wings, to but four hits over the nine-inning route.

Baltimore, Apr. 21.—The Baltimore Orioles made it two straight over the Buffalo Bisons by amassing yesterday's game, 7 to 5.

Home run clouts by Gill and Stronberger accounted for four Orioles' runs, Stronberger hitting one out of the lot for Buffalo.

Tree specimens found 120 feet below the surface in Death Valley have been identified as coast red-wood, estimated to be 40,000 years old.

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

It is expected that the Central League tangle will be cleared up within the next couple of days. Of course three teams are better than none at all.

It is expected that the Seniors will be out to practise early next week. Everybody's welcome.

The Junior League meeting scheduled for tonight at the Y may bring some surprises, as there are at least four teams ready now.

The Juniors had quite a few out to practise on Saturday and reports are that they look for a bumper season.

It is high time that something was done in regards to the old Ontario field, for the minor league boys to practise on. There is not a better location in town. With four O.A.H.A. teams in the city, it is a surety that they all cannot practise at the Fair grounds.

When the Danforths and the St. Georges hooked up in Toronto last Saturday it was the earliest opening of baseball in the history of the Queen city.

Wrestling is the most ancient sport. It is not hard to conceive of the very earliest of people settling their quarrels by engaging in a wrestling bout in which they exchanged wrist holds, headlocks, half-nelsons and perhaps some pulling of hair in the bargain. In modern times, wrestling has developed into three distinct forms. The first is the combination of Greek and Roman—a grappling which is most popular in France and Japan, was originated in Japan, and still holds sway there, although it has not attained immense popularity in other countries. The second is the style prevalent in the United States is the catch-as-catch-can, which is a combination of the other two, and has found devotees throughout the world. It is by far the most popular of the forms of wrestling, and is rapidly taking the place of the other two.

John K. Tener, former National League president who played the game in the bare-handed days, doesn't think fielding is much of a job now days. Present-day fielders ought to have tried catching the ball in they put, but we used, he says. However, John didn't have a lively ball to handle, either.

If Wes Ferrell of the Cleveland Indians reaches the goal he has set for the season, he will turn in a record that very few pitchers even of more experience, can boast. Ferrell has set the modest mark of 25 victories of his two major seasons and plans to account for that many more this year. Wes pitched 22 victories for the Tribe last season.

In the opinion of President Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators, he is a $150,000 baseball property who will be in the majors before long. Boze is one player in a million," declares the Griffith outfit, "and he was injured both times. The kid has learned to hit and another season in the minors should fit him for the big time.

Can a batter bunt on the third strike? A batter can bunt on the third strike, but he is out if the bunt is foul.

Pat Monahan reports the following as having occurred while he was looking for talent for the Red Sox at a small town in the South—with the said one, by way of introducing himself. "I'm a pianist—Cavendish's water colors." "Indeed," chimed in another. "I'm an artist, too. Write with a brush." "Well this is fine," exclaimed the third, "I'm a sculptor—I have a nice little job waiting for the first gravestone I see." "Gee, I'm a baseball scout—I work in ivory."

CHERRY OUT WITH KINGSTON SQUAD

Kingston, April 21—Twenty-eight players have turned out when Frank Smith's Ponies held their first workout. Manager Smith is most enthusiastic over the prospects. Players are playing, and is confident that they will make a gallant fight. Intermediate teams Kingston has had in the past few years, but never one of the greatest leaguers in the Central Ontario Baseball League, was betting them out and seemed to have lost his ability to pound the ball to all corners of the lot. A couple of new pitchers are in line and, with the batting power they have shown, the twirling problem should not be a serious one.

James Henigan Won 35th Boston Marathon Yesterday

Boston, Mass, April 21—After failing ten times, James P. Henigan, little 39-year old Medford runner yesterday annexed the premier event of the Boston Athletic Association marathon from the best field that famous classic has attracted in many years.

Sporting Jimmy, father of five children, ran and walked the 26 odd miles from Hopkinton to Boston in 2:46.40 2-5, the slowest winning time since Henry Renaud, Kaahua, N.Y., won the thirteenth pace, in 2:25-min affair, back in 1897. Henigan broke the tape two minutes ahead of Fred C. Ward of the Millrose A.A. New York, who made a gallant, finishing drive coming up from fifth to second place in the last mile and a half. Karl Koski the New York Finn and one of the favorites to capture the world, finished third as he did last year, this time was more than six minutes slower than last of the victor.

David Pagerlund, Koski's Finnish-American A.C. team mate, placed fourth and Clarence De Mar, the 42 year old Keene, N.H., teacher-and seven times winner came home in fifth place. De Mar, the popular favorite, could not explain his failure.

"It was on the heat," he said, "I liked that. I can't explain. Nothing seemed to click for me and I had no fight. Was getting better better than ever before just a week ago."

Heat Helped Henigan

Henigan was the only runner in the pack of 187 who did not complain about the temperature, which ranged from 77 to 82 in the shade along the sun baked course. Jimmy ran the same kind of a race he did a year ago, in fact he was a bit slower but the unseasonable weather so affected the field that his efforts yesterday won first place instead of the eighth they gained in 1930 race, won by De Mar.

Two Canadians, the best of the Maple Leaf delegation of 20, followed De Mar home. Tiny Percy Wyer of Toronto coasting in sixth in 2:56.01 and he was followed more than two minutes later by his fellow countryman, David Rommoen, one of the early leaders. Paul Debruyn of New York, was eighth and the only other finisher under three hours.

SCOUTS, GUIDES ATTEND CHURCH

Rev. E. W. Rowland of St. Paul's Had Special Message

Stirling, Apr. 21 (By Mail) — On Sunday, April 19th, over 150 1.V. Scouts, Girl Guides and Wolf Cubs paraded to attend services in the Stirling United Church. The parade started from the Stirling Theatre and proceeded to the United Church, where assistant scoutmaster, Rev. E. W. Rowland, Pastor, gave a very interesting and beneficial sermon on Scouting. At the close of the service the group returned to the theatre where a photographer took a group picture.

The Girl Guides were under the command of Mrs. (Col.) Ponton, District Commissioner of Girl Guides of Belleville, while the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs were under the command of Mr. Francis L. Short of Stirling.

Besides the Stirling Troop of Boy Scouts, Company of Girl Guides and Pack of Wolf Cubs there were detachments from the Trenton Troop of Boy Scouts under Scoutmaster Howard Campbell and Assistant Boy Scouts under Scoutmaster Sergeant; Trenton Company of Girl Guides under Captain Mrs. Keeler; Belleville Company of Girl Guides under Commissioner Mrs. Ponton; Marmora Company of Girl Guides under Captain Mrs. Fenton and the Campbellford Wolf Cubs.

The Stirling detachments were under the command of Assistant Scoutmaster Fred Hubbs, Assistant Scoutmaster Fred Hubb.

The Stirling Company of Girl Guides was under the command of Captain K. Mundy, Lieutenant Dorothy Hardy, Mrs. McPhail and Mrs. R. Coulter.

Upon reaching the Church under Scout James Ward, Cub Instructor. Miss L. Bowerman took as her text Numbers 13:16-17 comparing the twelve spys to the Scouts and urging them to be faithful, courageous and loyal to their principles. The congregation then joined in singing, entered to the infant children of Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock and Mr. and Mrs. Mason, Harry Douglas and Clifford Rogers respectively. The choir rendered a fine anthem in which Mrs. P. Jeffrey sang a solo and Miss Betty Conley also contributed a solo.

Leopold Stokowski is conducting the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra and "Cedric Parkenson" is going to be presented. Phil Spitalny at midnight. Morton Downey will be heard at 10.30 over WABC with the Paramount Public program tonight and Lolo Bonacelli at 11.30. Omar Nelson is back on the air tonight with his orchestra from WABC at midnight.

Mayor Tompkins and the Real Folks of Tompkins Corners (WJZ 9.30 p.m. Eastern Standard) containing a "shot" in the pugilistic world, "Red" Mitchell, who is trained for a championship fight, has also pitched his camp in the suburbs of Tompkins Corners and the scene has discovered the camp and attached them selves to the group. Realism in the manly art of self defence and the great American game of slamming the slangwidge. "Red" Mitchell is given a reception by the Real Folks and a exhibition of skipping the rope and shadow boxing then uses Gus as a punching bag shows how champions are made. Unfortunately for "Red" Gus packs a healthy punch himself and when he puts him on the nose promptly slugs him back and "Red" is down for the count and then some. That naturally breaks up the reception, with profuse apologies from Gus and Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Ophie Watts, et al, but no apologies from Gus and are recommended for a sparring partner by Mrs. Jones, but "Red" has had enough of his and says he has more sparring partners than he can use now and cannot possibly use the services of Gus, much as he very wishes.

FUND FOR POET

London, April 21 (CP)—The testimonial fund on behalf of Sir William Watson, the aged English poet, has now been officially closed at $10,000. In addition to this money, there are also the title-deeds of Lamb House, Rye, presented to him. This house was lent to the poet by the late Lord Ashbourne and three years ago when illness compelled Sir William to leave his Winchelsea home. Rye and Lamb are the gift of Charles and Dorothy Una Ratcliffe, co-operators of the late Lord Brotherton.

The special committee will administer the fund for the poet, his wife and their two children, Mrs. Watson and their two children on behalf of the late Lord Brotherton. Mrs. McKenna, chairman of the Midland Bank.

The house of Mozart, where he resided while in Rome, is soon to be demolished.

RADIO FANS CORNER

A trifle reminiscent of a bailiff field last night, sounds like the popping of guns broke out in the studio when Graham Mc Namee announced the spasms the programs came in all right. The announcer of the Tabernacle Choir Program last night gently reminded us that next Monday night we will be tuning in on their program by Daylight Time.

This looks like a big week for Canadian Parliamentarians last night Premier Bennett was heard over a wide network of stations and Friday night of this week during the Chase and Sanborn program Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader of Ottawa is to be guest speaker. Elgar's noble processional "Pomp and Circumstance" will be played by the orchestra as an opening number.

The C.O.E. hour tonight feature stations from "Chu Chin Chow" and the Vagabonds offer in comic stance and baritone solos and favourites as "The Cobbler's Song," "Anytime's Kissing Time" and "Sweetheart's Chorus." Also from the musical corner of the Hotel Roosevelt, "Irene" and "Alice Blue Gown." "Nola" is going to be played as a violin solo number tonight and the "Russian Fantasy," Cheerio station at 9 o'clock.

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit at 8 from WEAF tonight and at 9 at the Pennsylvania Hotel means Coon-Sanders orchestra. The happy pair start at 8.30 from this station and at 10 B.A. Rolfe and his boys. Cab Calloway at 11.30 and Jack Albin at midnight.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

When father had been gone a little more than six months I put on a wonderful new dress that I got from Mrs. Miers and Thad took me for a ragtime blowout, dinner, theatre, and swell finish—out on Westchester way.

It was like the old days again, and he was wonderful with me, making mad love, kissing me, telling me how much he loved me. A few weeks of this and I knew that he would be asking me to marry him. I dreamed of it almost every night—of the swell city home, country home, servants, cars, trips abroad. Oh, I dreamed and imagined every sort of luxury, a long happy life of just playing around!

And then my sister Cora married her old-time friend, Mr. Parker.

I didn't blame her. He owned a store in Garden City. He had a home and he loved Cora. Cora had been a widow nearly seven years for she married when she was eighteen.

I arranged with my chum, Viola Carson, that we would get a little kitchenette apartment and live together.

We would be able to save a lot of money, I thought, and it would be a swell place for Thad to call. Besides I felt that before long Thad would insist that I marry him—as if he would have to insist very long or plead very hard to get me to consent when all I dreamed of was the time I would be Mrs. M. Thad Parsons, with my name in a social register.

PETER DROPS IN

After Cora was married, Peter Thompson dropped in to see me. Cora had whispered that I ought to marry Peter. Evidently he had asked her to put in a good word for him. I laughed at Cora's suggestion.

"I'm going to propose again, Kitty," Peter said when he had me alone for a few minutes.

"Oh, Peter, no—don't let's go through that again," I pleaded. "I don't want to marry now," I went on tellin's part of fib. "I want to have a good time, to play around."

"Kitty," Peter said, with great earnestness, "don't think so much of that sort of thing—or else one of these days you will play around once too often!"

"What do you mean?" I demanded.

"You are no saint, you're just human like any other girl," he answered, indignant now with his great keen eyes as if trying to read my mind.

If you think—" I started to speak shrilly.

"Now be sensible, Kitty, you know you wouldn't be the first good girl to go wrong!"

I drew back my hand to slap him. I was almost seeing red. I was so furious at Peter Thompson.

I could hear his words still ringing in my ears: "You wouldn't be the first good girl to go wrong!"

My lady impulse was to slap him—I drew back my hand and certainly would have handed him a good one if he hadn't caught my hand and held me.

"Listen, Katie—don't get me wrong. I didn't say you would go wrong—but I told you a big story, you are just playing with fire and you know it. Let me advise you, even if you do despise me. At least I can remember that once you loved me," Peter pleaded.

"Love you!" I exclaimed, still burning with rage.

"You did once, Katie," Peter persisted.

"Once is far from now."

Hate me if you wish, but I want to survive you. Cora will be away from us here. You kind and wise father has passed on."

He went still holding my hands.

"Oh, well, Mister Squawker, ladle out your advice and let me go." I said grimly.

"I want you to be happy, dear," he said, slowly.

"So you think the best way is to call me a—to say—" I stammered and stopped.

TROUBLED ABOUT THAD

"I called you nothing wrong. I said many a good girl had been dazzled by riches and overstepped. What troubles me is that this man Parsons hasn't even proposed.

"How do you know?" I demanded.

"He isn't the sort to propose and not give you a ring. He doesn't seem to intend to marry you—but just to occupy his time pleasantly, or perhaps he is one of the palsied sort and—" Peter couldn't go on for a moment. Then he said rather bitterly, "Don't let him break your heart, Kitty."

"Thanks, but he won't. He is madly in love with me. We have a perfect understanding," I boasted.

"That is fine, Kitty. Forgive me for being anxious about you. You are practically alone—and I still love you —I shall always love you. I have bought a plumbing business out at New Gardens and am going out there to live, but I'll ever you want me—"

Again he hesitated.

He was so forlorn, so miserable that I felt sorry for him, but—

"Forgive me, Peter, I didn't mean to lose my temper. I'm all right, only sorry it can't be you—we'll always be friends," I promised.

"Katie," Peter said, and relieved over the way I had calmed down.

"Yes, Peter," I said, and I found the cutest little furnished kitchenette apartment imaginable.

Cora had given up work on the Miers establishment when she married Mack Parker, much to Mrs. Miers' regret. I settled down to work again after the excitement of the fashion show, the marriage of Cora and my first gay outing with Thad Parsons after my six months of quiet following father's death.

A CALL FROM MALVERN

One day Mrs. Miers had me that some relatives wanted me on the telephone.

"It's Cora," I cried, for she was the only near relative I had left.

"It's a man—it may be her husband," Mrs. Miers said. She discouraged personal telephone calls and I didn't blame her, for otherwise most of the models would be on the telephone half the time.

When I answered the telephone I said, "Hello Mack."

"This is not Mack, calling me Mack, you little Deuteriff!" the voice replied.

Astonished it at once. It was Peter Malvern.

"What's the idea of saying you are a relative?" I demanded.

"Thank heaven you are there because then I can remember me sufficiently to know my voice," he cried.

"What do you want, Mr. Malvern?" I tried to be quite severe.

"I want to know who the fortune-favored first name of Mack may be."

"He happens to be my sister's husband. I was told that it was a relative—"

"Had to say that. I know the rules don't allow a wrestle during business hours, but can't it it's one of the family," and he chuckled.

"Change can, Mr. Malvern; you are all wrong. I am not your wrestle —and, please, what is it you want?"

"You—that else is all the world is worth wanting."

"Good bye. Call me again Sunday, when I'm 'at.'"

"Wait, Katie—don't be like that. I wanted to know if you would let me take you out some evening?"

"Thanks, Mr. Malvern, but no can do. I'm dated up for the next three hundred years," I laughed, said a quick 'goodbye' and hung up the receiver.

Thad would be sore if I went out with Forrest Malvern. I knew enough to realize that. But I wasn't angry with him. It was rather nice of him to remember me and call me up. I hoped he wouldn't be too sore about it.

THAD OFF TO PALM BEACH

It was getting along toward May, then Thad brought me home from a party and spoke of it.

"I've got to join a party of friends at Palm Beach for a few weeks—it won't be long, only it will seem long to me," he said.

Even as he said it I was thinking that another Easter would find me at Palm Beach myself as Mrs. M. Thad Parsons. Having a good time along with the same party of his friends.

"I'll just too bad, Thad," I said, "that you have to leave this snow and slush and freezing weather, and put in some miserable weeks down there in the warm sunshine."

"I had rather be with you, Katie," he answered me.

"All of which explains why you are going a thousand miles away from me," I cried.

"No, dear girl. I simply have to keep my word and join my friends. I've a couple golf tournaments on and I promised some chums to go tarpon fishing with them."

Have a good time, Thad. I am going to Palm Beach myself some day," I declared, hoping he would take the hint.

"Of course you are—don't worry about that," he cried.

How I wanted to tell him that he might marry me right then and take me with him. A girl can't do that sort of thing. At least I couldn't.

I didn't ask Thad for any address. He always sent me one when he went away.

A whole week passed and no word. I read the Sunday papers for the society news, but I didn't see a word about Thad in the society gossip from Palm Beach.

Cora's husband invited me out over Sunday.

As I rode through New Gardens I wondered, idly, just where poor Peter might have his plumbing shop. Doubtless it would be a dusty, stale-colored little shop on some side street.

A CHARMING HOME

Cora's home was charming. She had a lot of ground and I could see that in Summer it would be wonderful for her kiddies. She looked ten years younger, so red cheeked and so happy. Her husband was a splendid sort, and from the furnishings and his swell car and everything I decided that he was pretty well off.

Cora asked me how I was getting on with Thad. I told her everything was lovely and that he would soon be back from Florida.

She shook her head as she looked meaningly at my engagement ring finger—still undecorated by any solitaire.

"Don't rush me; Thad won't go to Palm Beach without me another Easter," I assured her.

"Did he say so, Katie?" Cora asked, with a little sigh. I answered evasively.

Cora was never one to nag. I am sure she realized that it annoyed me to be embarrassed me to have her continually asking when I expected to be formally engaged to Thad. I was glad she changed the subject.

I went back to the city that evening. Viola was evidently out with some boy friend. I was tired, and so I got into bed and sat up to read the Sunday papers. I had been too busy to look at them all day. I was out at Cora's.

I looked at the society pages. Surely there would be something about Thad and his crowd in the Palm Beach society gossip.

There was!

I stared at it—I read it over—the room seemed to swim around and around. I crumpled down on the bed, sobbing.

I didn't hear Viola come in, but I felt her arms about me and looked up.

"Katie, what is it—are you sick?" she cried.

I tried to turn away; I didn't want to speak; I didn't want to see any one; I didn't want to live!

"Thad—Thad is married!

"This Thing Called Love" Extremely Entertaining at The Capitol

Marriage has many weird and woeful tragedies set forth both in truth and in fiction. One reads and sees divorces, separations and the like involving such vulgarisms as alimony and allowances, that to see or hear of a new idea on wedlock turning out satisfactory to both parties is indeed a pleasure.

A man just back from fifteen years' exile in the wilds of Peru, where radios are almost unheard of, meets the sister-in-law of his broker. Both of a simple living nature he looks upon a happy marriage as both many and woman's ultimate goal, and in this girl he quickly recognizes the honourable value of her make-up. To him she presents his ideal, and without preamble he immediately proposed to her. She, having so far led an independent life, has her own ideas and ambitions this susceptible young man as to her career—a man can scarcely support married life, invites him to din with her and meet her aunt with whom she lives all would be off. Our hero accepts.

The first few days go well but he decides to step out to make his proposal and so does she.

Misunderstanding after misunderstanding, unfolded in divers and novel ways eventually lead them up to the final climax and everything ends splendidly, that is we suppose, until the last quarrel.

Edmund Lowe is the hero, and a fine hero he makes too. Constance Bennett plays his wife, and puts over a fine piece performance, whilst Zazu Pitts as the sister-in-law provides hysteria almost as if she were subject to the very troublesome complaint—troublesome for the husband, that is. The rest of the cast is well chosen.

In addition to the feature, the first of a new series of golf instruction pictures starring Johnny Farrell, the new champion player, was shown entitled "In the Rough", the time was devoted in the main to an excellent explanation of getting out of the rough. The series will prove a great interest to both golfers and spectators.

Slim Summerville in "A Royal Bluff" once again put one over "Bergen" during their Russian sojourn, and an Aesop Film Fable rounded off all round an splendid show.

This programme ends tomorrow and Bill Haines makes a welcome re-appearance for the remainder of the week in "Way Out West", something different in western talkies.

"People could be aroused to fight as loyally for peace as they are for war."—General John F. O'Ryan.

"Children can be trained to laugh instead of cry when they fall down and get a hurt."—Dr. Emil Jurs Hughes.

WITCH DOCTORS MUST GO, SAYS CROWN, CADI

Susan Jane Maracle Must Cease Practice on Reserve

As an aftermath of the trial of William Maracle and his sister Susan Jane Maracle for assault on Mrs. Peter Dereen in connection with alleged witchcraft, practiced on the Indian Reserve in Tyendinaga Township, Susan Jane Maracle appeared before Magistrate Bedford of Deseronto yesterday afternoon charged with practicing medicine for gain, without having a license to do so. She pleaded guilty to the charge and was given a suspended sentence of one year and ordered to pay the costs of the action $25.00 within one month or in default, three months in the common jail. The fine will be paid.

Her counsel John D. Simpson of Napanee spoke in her behalf before sentence was pronounced. He stated to His Worship that the woman believed she had a right to practice medicine as handed down to her by her ancestors and her grandmother in particular. After explaining that while man's law to her, she said she was quite willing to cease the practice. There is no doubt but that the accused did give medicine to Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm and their children for which she received payments, and it is also true that she went to the home to see the children and worked over them in an effort to drive away the witches that were thought to be surrounding them.

B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney was present with a suspended sentence but made it plain if similar cases were brought to the Crown's attention, a complete investigation would be pronounced. Magistrate Bedford made it plain to Maracle and Donnan that the practice had to stop. He said witch doctors as a profession and will not be tolerated in this age. The woman, on leaving the court promised that she would cease the practice of witchcraft and on the Indian Reserve. As in all the other cases held in Deseronto, a large sum for from the Reserve were in attendance at the court but the proceedings were quite short.

THE BETTER WAY TO PREVENT CONSTIPATION

You MUST look out for the health of your family. Often a faulty diet leads to constipation. Headaches, dizziness, loss of energy follow. Husband and children become irritable. Serious disease may develop.

You can prevent this by including roughage in the diet. A pleasant way to supply this roughage is with Kellogg's All-Bran, a delicious ready-to-eat cereal.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, for each person, will prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases, use with each meal. Do this instead of giving them habit-forming pills and drugs.

ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron to enrich the blood and lend color to cheek and lips. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

COMMUNISM IS ERADICATED BY THE JAPANESE

Dr. J. C. L. Bates Was Speaker at Belleville Rotary Club

Japan as an obstacle to the spread of Red Russian Communism was pre sented to Belleville Rotary Club Monday by J. C. L. Bates, D.D., Principal of the Canadian Academy at Kobe, Japan, who said that Japan had passed a law which made it a capital crime to spread communistic propaganda in that country. Facing punishment by death communist missionaries dropped out of the picture and concentrated their activities on the schools and colleges where communism finds fertile soil. The attempted assassination of the Crown Prince of Japan by a Communist created great excitement and anxiety. The assasin was a son of a member of the legislative assembly and the father after the affair withdrew from public life and for three years remained in voluntary exile.

Japan is progressive and ambitious and is getting closer to Canada, being a very good customer of Canada and not a competitor, for Japan has the things that Canada needs and vica versa. Now that Canada is represented there by a Canadian minister, aside from the British legation, relations are still closer and the Canadians in Japan are very much pleased to have a legation of their own presided over by such a good representative as Hon. Herbert Marler.

In China all nations are competing for trade and Russia is building factories along the border to catch China trade first hand.

Japan's modern life dates from 1867, and the transformation has been complete in industrial and political life. In agriculture Japan is still a century behind the time as far as tools are concerned but is giving great study to agriculture in the public gardens. Government of Japan is strong, efficient, sane and progressive, and there is a religious movement under way which has for his main objectives, one million souls for Christ, a co-operative society in every village, and a mutual aid society in every church.

Speaking of present conditions and the spread of communistic doctrines, Dr. Bates said that the situation was rapidly getting beyond control and financiers and philosophers alike say they don't know the cure, but it is the revolution or the cross, either accept the Kingdom of God and His righteousness or the alternative looks to be Russian Communism.

FACTS ABOUT WATER

A supply of pure water is an essential to all living things. Especially when residing in country districts should we be most careful of the water used for drinking, cooking and bathing, because, even if water looks as from a pure source, it may become contaminated before we use it and vo may convey disease.

Under the pressure of ordinary living conditions, the body especially colorless, transparent and without odor. It is 770 times more dense than air. At 32 degrees Fahrenheit or zero degree on the centigrade scale, it freezes to a solid and suddenly expands to 1.0002 which is an increase of one-ten-thousandth of its liquid volume. That is why, in cold weather water pipes burst and even rocks containing moisture in the crevices will crack.

The amount of water used daily in one way or another varies in individual cases. In London, for instance, the average is 38 1-2 gallons daily while in Edinburgh it is 42 gallons, in Berlin 15 1-2 and in Paris 44. An adult drinks from 36 to 40 ounces daily which amount does not include the water taken in with the food and present in the food substance itself. Women and children generally drink less water than men.

Our water supply comes mainly from rain. Water vapor arises in an invisible form, due to the action of the sun's rays, from the ocean, lakes and from the land. The moisture, of course, forms the clouds. Later, due to temperature changes, it descends to the earth again in the form of rain, snow, dew, sleet or hail. Some of this water gets into the earth and returns to the surface again as springs.

When rains falls it carries down with it impurities found in the atmosphere. The first rain water, therefore, is not pure. If collected near the sea it contains chlorides and sulphates. Rain water is soft water because it does not contain lime and magnesium salts. Often the impurities of the first rain water to descend amounts to as much as two grains of solid matter to a gallon.

River water, as a rule, is not safe to drink. Its mineral constituents usually are less than those in spring water but it contains more organic and inorganic matters, living and dead, which may be bad for health. Especially is river water unsafe if sewage is dumped into it and if it passes through a town from which considerable drainage is probable.

Springs usually are pure if dwellings and out-houses are not contaminating them. Some springs contain dissolved mineral matters which may render them unfit for general drinking purposes but valuable for medicinal purposes.

Any diseases may be derived from impure water. Among these are typhoid, cholera, enteric fever and dysentery, indigestion in a chronic form and acute diarrhoeal disturbances. Goitre and certain parasitic diseases may also arise in this way. Likewise certain metallic poisonings. If water contains an excess of the salts of lime and magnesia, digestive troubles may arise.

Water may be purified by filtering and boiling. Both processes should be carried out. A microscopic examination of your water supply as well as a chemical analysis should always be made when there is even only a mere suspicion as to its absolute purity.

DR BISCH'S DAILY HEALTH HINT

People who feel awkward or oversensitive should not shun society. On the contrary, they should try to overcome their handicaps by mingling with people and fighting that shy feeling.

Miller's Worm Powders are par excellence the medicine for children who are found suffering from the ravages of worms. They immediately alter the stomachic conditions under which the worms subsist and drive them from the system, and, at the same time, they are tonical in their effect upon the digestive organs, restoring them to healthful operation and ensuring immunity from further disorders from such a cause.

Operating on the principle of the stethoscope, an instrument invented in London enables a tester to detect leaks in water pipes and also to determine in which way the water is flowing.

DAMAGES OF $120 CLAIMED

Suit of R. Holgate Against Tumbler Sales and J. S. Lowden

Two cases were presented before His Honor Judge Deroche in the Division Court yesterday. The first case of Roy Holgate vs. The Tumbler Sales Co. and J. S. Lowden. Holgate testified that while driving on the highway his truck ran out of gasoline and that he pulled off to the right hand side of the road so that only two feet of the truck projected onto the highway, Mr. Holgate stated that the accident occurred about 10 p.m. and that the night in question was very dark. He also swore that his lights were lit and could be seen distinctly.

Mr. Lowden, who was driving in the same direction as Mr. Holgate came up behind the truck and ran into the said truck, claimed that there was no tail light visible on the truck and that the truck was entirely on the pavement directly in front of his car. Mr. Holgate asked for $120.00 damages as the result of the accident while Mr. Lowden counterclaimed for $120.00 damages to his car as the result of the accident. His Honor Judge Deroche reserved judgment in the case.

Suit Over Note

The second case was the action of Chancey Ashley against M. Sine. The Green Mouse Stores and W. J. Green for the collection of a promissory note. Mr. Green obtained a blank promissory note from M. Sine for $500.00, which Sine claimed was for $300.00 no amount of which appeared in the note but the figures "$500.00" are in the upper left hand corner of the note. Sine claims that Mr. Green was to get the money from a Mrs. Lloyd but as Mrs. Lloyd it is said did not have the money, Green went to Mr. Ashley, who agreed to give him the money and Mr. Green filled Ashley's name in, as payee, on the note writing in the words five hundred dollars. As Ashley did not have the ready cash both Ashley and Green went on a note and got the money from the Dominion Bank. Mr. Green paid $135.00 and was given credit on the Sine note, Ashley paid the balance of $375.00 to the bank and sues three the parties that are on the note. Mr. Green does not defend the action. Mr. Bowden appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Cameron for the defendant. His Honor Judge Deroche also reserved judgment on this case.

All Canada Acclaims Essex as the Value Sensation in This Year of Sensational Values

Comparison point-for-point, dollar-for-dollar, proves Essex the outstanding low-priced car

Essex quality naturally creates an expectancy of high price. Compared with what others give you at greater cost, it would be strange indeed if many did not fall into that error. Thus, actual price comparison emphasizes Essex value by sharp contrast.

But facts that prove Essex ability and quality give even greater testimony of the value than price comparison alone. Viewed from the standpoint of performance, beauty, riding and driving comfort—or whatever feature you consider most important in a motor car—Essex possesses advantages over many cars priced several hundred dollars higher.

Canadians no longer accept the doctrine that higher-priced cars mean correspondingly finer cars. They are weighing one car against another, basing their judgment on actual performance and all the other qualities that they must have for lasting satisfaction. A few dollars difference in price means little if the value is not there. And this price difference applies to cars priced above Essex as well as below it.

Modern conditions are compelling consideration of Essex advantages. Today's roads and streets demand cars that give lively traffic performance, that possess endurance for sustained high-speeds. Present-day economy demands low operating costs and ability to give dependable performance for added thousands of miles with a minimum of attention. These requirements are focusing the eyes of all Canadians on Essex—the finest performing six Hudson ever built.

With its price so low and its quality so evident, Essex quite naturally appeals to all whose means dictate the purchase of any low-priced car. It likewise reveals the folly of seeking Essex quality in a higher-priced six. The proof of these statements is in your own good judgment. Go to your nearest Essex dealer and ask for a demonstration—today!

DOWN BUT NOT COUNTED OUT

A bad fall and a good photographer provided the above picture, taken at the Kingsclare, England, during the Vine Hunt Point to Point races. Miss Betty Gerard, skilful woman rider, is shown taking an awkward tumble from "Jonglieur," at one of the sticky woman after the race, in which she finished second, having remounted after a fall that would have put most men hors de combat.

NEW RUTH CHATTERTON DRAMA IS HAILED AS STAR'S GREATEST

"First Lady of the Screen" Surpasses Own Amazing Achievements

LUKAS IN "UNFAITHFUL"

Before marriage she joined in the adulation the world gave to the man she loves—after marriage she knows the hero-husband she married is unworthy of her love.

Such is the tense situation which lures Ruth Chatterton from a lovely and loving bride into a reckless, thrill-seeking globe-trotter in the latest dramatic sensation, "Unfaithful."

Last night the story of "Unfaithful" unfolded to a large audience at the Belle theatre, where the picture began its two day local run. Hushed, spellbound, lifted to heights of dramatic emotion, fulfilled its every expectation, in the greatest portrayal she has given in all her remarkable screen career.

Supported by suave Paul Lukas, the star who make "Sarah and Son," "Anybody's Woman," "The Right to Love," three of the greatest pictures of the year, in "Unfaithful" clinches her right to the title of the screen's first lady. She is beautiful, appealing, commanding, superb. Chatterton has retained her most surprising talents for this master picture.

The story of "Unfaithful" is one of love and conflict and pride; of a husband who reveals himself faithless on his honeymoon, of a good woman whose wounded pride whips her to reckless actions which make her the most slandered woman in Europe. She watches her husband's spurious good reputation with a bed reputation of her own, equally spurious. And to save her from her mad abandon, Paul Lukas, who performed so superbly with Chatterton in other roles, comes to love her.

Directed by John Cromwell, the cast of "Unfaithful" proves itself equal to all the exacting situations which the play imposes. Paul Cavanagh, as the husband, is a believable and sincere actor handling a difficult role skilfully. Juliette Compton is the "other woman," a beautiful and accomplished actress.

TRUE BLUES AND GLEANERS GATHER

The True Blues and Gleaner's S.B. classes held their monthly meetings on Friday evening. The former holding their meeting at the home of their teacher, Mrs. W. Prentice and after the regular meeting, a weiner roast was very much enjoyed by all.

The Gleaners held their meeting at the home of Miss Vera Wall and all members were present. The meeting opened with a hymn and the singing of the class song, followed by the scripture lesson by Miss Alyce Knight and prayer by Mrs. Hodges. Community singing was led by Miss Vera Wall after which the business was taken up by the teacher and some work discussed relative to Mother's Day service. Another hymn was sung and after the lesson in the Study Book was taken this part of the meeting closed by repeating the Lord's prayer in unison.

Candy was served by the hostess and a social half hour spent in games, etc. and the evening ended after giving the class yell.

MOIRA W.M.S.

The Easter Thankoffering Service of the Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ketcheson with a large attendance of members and visitors. Among the visitors from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lapcrew of Stirling. In accordance to the plan adopted at the beginning of the year a different leader is appointed to preside over each monthly meeting during the year. After calling the meeting to order the chair was taken by Mrs. Charles Ketcheson, who followed the "Easter Service of Worship" leaflet. All joined heartily in singing the Hymn "Jesus Christ is risen today" followed by prayer in unison. Then Scripture reading with responses. Then hymn, "Break Thou the Bread of Life". A few brief readings were given by a number of ladies. The Secretary, Mrs. D. Thompson called the "Roll" each member responding with a Scripture text containing the Keyword "Grace". The pianist Miss Lily Ketcheson gave an instrumental selection and Miss Norma Ketcheson gave a solo "An Evening hymn". After a few words along the line of how best to increase our finances by the President, Mrs. Thomas Elliott, the meeting was brought to a close. The "May" Auxiliary meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George Post. Mrs. Ketcheson served a very dainty lunch and a happy social hour was enjoyed by all.

INHUMANITY TO ANIMALS

A Quebec man has been sentenced to three months in jail for having beaten a horse to death. There were no mitigating circumstances in the offence, apparently but the fact that he had a large family dependent on him, and that it was his first offence. influenced the judge into giving him a short term.

Most people will agree that the term of three months for beating a horse to death is no punishment at all for an offence of that nature. If ever lashes were deserved it was in this case. A man must be brutal indeed to beat to death the animal that has been known as "man's best friend". There was nothing in the remand's telling of the case to indicate whether the humane society's interference in that part of the country, but if not, it is badly needed, for inhumanity to dumb animals is one of the things properly civilized people will not tolerate.—Oshawa Times.

FOREST FIRES SUBDUED IN HASTINGS COUNTY

FOREST FIRES MENACE IN NORTHERN PART OF COUNTY

Fire Rangers Must Have Co-operation From Settlers

WOODS ARE DRY

Farmhouse and Barn in North Consumed by Flames

(Canadian Press)

Peterboro, April '22.—Several forest fires of serious nature have been reported to District Forester Crosbie of Tweed from lookout tower near the Blue Mountains in Hastings County. Last night in Monmouth Township fire destroyed a farmhouse, barns and outbuildings and spread into the bush before being brought under control. A number of fires also broke out in Wicklow Township yesterday were reported under control today.

The outbreaks in Metheun Township, Peterboro County, during the past few days are believed to be incendiary and the Provincial police have been asked to investigate. The woods are very dry at present and although the situation is under control the fire rangers fear that unless they are given full cooperation by the settlers, that a serious situation may develop

AWARD WIDOW $800 AND COSTS

Mrs. Eliza Rew of Peterboro Entered Suit in Husband's Death

PETERBORO, April 22.—Judgment for $800 and costs was awarded to Mrs. Eliza Rew of Peterboro yesterday by Mr. Justice Logie here yesterday afternoon, in her action for $10,000 damages against George Gillespie, Otonabee farmer, whose daughter, Jean Gillespie, driving the family car on October 1st, 1930, fatally injured the plaintiff's husband, William Rew at the corner of Lansdowne and Lock streets.

Two other civil cases on the docket of the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario were postponed to the next sittings of the court. There are no criminal cases on the brief list.

The details of the accident which cut short the life of William Rew, an employee of the Dominion Canners, Ltd., as he was returning to his work for the factory during the noon hour, were told at the coroner's inquest. Most of it was repeated yesterday afternoon. Mr. Justice Logie found that Mr. Rew was partly responsible for the accident in failing to look to see what traffic was approaching when he stepped from the sidewalk on to the crossing from the north to the south side of Lansdowne street. The Lordship found that none of this contributory negligence at one-third, and then accepting the evidence of doctors who expressed the opinion that Mr. Rew would not have lived more than two years longer, and estimating at $1,000 the damages which should be assessed on that basis, Mr. Justice Logie reduced that amount by the one-third which he assessed with the fatal abstraction of the victim, and allowed the plaintiff the remainder, $800 and costs of the case.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff and G. N. Gordon K.C., for the defendant.

FLAMES CONSUME TENEMENT HOUSE

New York, April 22—Flames that consumed a tenement house as if it were a match box, killed one man, injured seventeen and left a hundred homeless just before dawn today. A policeman dashed into the burning building and aroused the sleeping tenants, many of whom terrified at the smoke and flames, leaped from beds and the windows. The others dashed madly through the roof top. The body of a man was found in the charred ruins on the top floor.

MANY PROJECTS FOR CONSTRUCTION

Business among contractors is not as quiet as reported conditions in the world at large would incline one to believe. A representative of a firm of contracting firm in was in Belleville today and stated that there were in the office of the firm more plans than there had ever been in any season this individual has a great deal of construction under contemplation.

JONES LEWIS DIES AT 74

Well-Known Hamilton Editorial Writer Passes

Jones L. Lewis, well-known newspaper editor of Hamilton, died today at his home in Duke Street, Hamilton. He was a native of Belleville and was in his seventy-fourth year. For several years he had suffered from heart trouble which compelled his relinquishment of his editorial position.

The late J. L. Lewis was a son of the late James Lewis, who was in business man of this city. He entered journalism on the staff of the Intelligencer and worked his way up step by step. For some time he was on the staff of the Ontario. For a time he published The Belleville Free Press which he founded and owned. Going to Hamilton he continued his editorial activities, was managing editor of the Herald for some time and served on the staff of several of the newspapers of that city.

The late Mr. Lewis was an ardent advocate of principles which he adopted and possessed a facility of expression which made his work very effective.

He was a member of the United Church. He is survived by one son, John of Hamilton and one daughter, Dora, also of Hamilton. His wife predeceased him. There are also two brothers, Arthur of Victoria, B.C., and Frank of Vancouver, and one half sister, Mrs. C. F. Wallbridge of this city. Mr. Lewis was a visitor in Belleville about two years ago.

News of his death was received at noon by friends in this city. No definite plans have been announced as to the funeral.

NIAGARA FALLS HOME BOMBED

Fire Followed Explosion in Italian Area of City

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 22—The home of Louis Gatto, located in a section of the city largely populated by Italians, was damaged today by an explosion which was felt throughout the city. The fire followed the explosion and swept through the building, causing damage to adjoining structures which also were considerable damaged. There was no one in the house at the time and Mr. Gatto, who was in bed, was taken into the place through a cellar window.

Police say they have no enemies and were unable to account for the outrage.

A house on the same street was partially wrecked by a bomb some time ago.

FIVE CUPS OF TEA A DAY

LONDON, Eng. April 22.—Exceeding 430,000,000 pounds, the consumption of the British Isles averaged five cups of tea a day during last year, the Imperial Economic Committee reported. The report says the popular size cup of tea is the equation of tea gardon of the world.

Increased use of the beverage is attributed to the spreading custom of taking tea in the middle of the morning in addition to the usual afternoon "tea time".

A LITTLE COOLER

It was slightly cooler here today and for a while it looked as though it might rain. The highest point recorded by the meteorological office according to official readings at the Belleville waterworks was 50 above. Readings for the past two days—

Yesterday 72 48
To-day 73 52

CONDITION THE SAME

The condition of John Howard, who was removed from a local restaurant on Monday morning suffering from a stroke is just about the same, the hospital reported today.

WILL ATTEMPT 126-M ILE-AN-HOUR SPEED

Kaye Don, the Intrepid English speed driver who recently established a new world's speedboat record of more than 103 miles an hour under unfavorable conditions, states that he will endeavor to break his own record in English waters. The Parana River, where his first record was made, was unsuitable for speedboat racing owing to intense heat which melted some definite parts of the Miss England II.

HAMILTON KIWANIS CLUB PAY BELLEVILLE RETURN VISIT, DISTRICT GOVERNOR IS HEARD

Blames "Unbalanced Production for the Present Era of Depression

Kiwanians from Hamilton, Picton and Belleville joined together in an inter-city visit last night, the Belleville Club being the hosts to the visitors. The occasion was the official visit of Bill Mayall of Hamilton, District Governor of the district, to Belleville and Picton clubs. The visit was the first of the kind for one made by the Belleville Club to Hamilton last Autumn, and to say that all enjoyed themselves, would be putting it mildly. The address of the evening was given by the District Governor on "Down to Cases and Need", dealing with the prevailing economic conditions. It was thoroughly appreciated by every person present. The luncheon was held in the Queen's Hotel and Mayor Gordon John Ryan, again as on many other occasions, satisfied the "inner man" with a splendid repast.

The Hamilton quintette, eleven in number, arrived in the city at six o'clock and were met on the north city limits by the Belleville members with cars and escorted to the Queen's Hotel. The Picton club reported by the luncheon, 35 strong, headed by Dr. Ross Guiler, the president. After the luncheon, the directors of that club met the District Governor for a business meeting and to make an official report. The official business was carried out with the Belleville Club and the District Governor found both clubs in a healthy state and serving the needs of the community in their capacity as builders. As the conclusion of the luncheon, the party was guided by Chesley Foohan, manager of the Belle Theatre, where a private showing was given of all Roger's in the "Connecticut Yankee" and a splendid picture. The Hamilton members, after the show, were escorted to their train for the return journey and everyone voted it the best ever.

John W. Newman, past president of the Hamilton Club, took over the duties of Toastmaster, introducing Cole, at the commencement of the luncheon and conducted the meeting in an efficient manner. Colin Carter of Picton and William Freeman of Hamilton, were appointed sergeant-at-arms, while James Bankier conducted the community singing. Jas. E. Biggs, president at the piano, while Charlie Chaplin and his Ben Tons gave the party a number of popular airs during the session. Matt Taylor of Hamilton sang a popular song, "The Kings Horses" and all joined in the chorus, while Jas. Bankier gave an old favorite, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie". The attendance prizes went to Bill Hazard and Bert Hilton of Hamilton and Lee Palmateer and Rod Haddon of Picton. The presentations were made by President George Cole.

Dr. Ross Guiler, K.C., president of the Hamilton Club, also made a presentation to Jas. Bankier, district Kiwanis International, suitably framed to the Belleville and Picton Clubs, and George Cole and Don Gullet, respective presidents, made suitable replies. The speaker of the evening was introduced by Thomas Holmes, of Hamilton, and Kiwanis Appreciation was expressed by "Bill" Mikel. "Bill" Mayall, the district Governor, has been a member of Kiwanis for seven years and

HASTINGS VILLAGE WILL HAVE HYDRO

Hastings, April 22—From good authority, it is learned that the Hydro have overcome the last obstacle in bringing the line to Hastings. It is some months since the return passed the by-law, but both the Council and Hydro have had their hands full to get over the many making the start. The material has been here for some time. The officials were here last week and made arrangements with the property owners for placing the poles on their properties. They intend to bring the line along the highway as far as the four corners, then enter the town. Work will start, it is rumored Tuesday.

PUMP WATER FROM THE BAY

Seagrave Apparatus Demonstrated to Large Crowd

Climaxing a splendid exhibition of fire fighting possibilities with one of the new pumpers, the Seagrave Motor Equipment Company, of St. Catharines, showed just what the machine would do yesterday afternoon when it pumped water from the bay. Two huge, glistening streams of water, apparently capable of bringing under control the most raging blaze shot out over the water that separates the mainland at the Imperial Oil company's docks and Victoria Park.

Officials of the company explained that it was possible to pump through eight hundred imperial gallons the minute with three hundred pounds pressure. This is not quite as good as when the water is coming from the hydrant, when thirteen hundred gallons the minute can be pumped. The engine of the pumper has a triple ignition system. It has also a steam generator with which to thaw out hydrants in the winter time. Officials explained that the advantage in owning a piece of equipment manufactured by their company lay in the fact that it was possible at any time to procure extra parts, no matter what year the model.

TANKER CALLED AT LOCAL DOCK

Yesterday for the first time this spring the huge tanker "John Irvine" steamed into the Imperial Oil Dock and discharged a cargo of gasoline for the British-American Oil Company here. The "John Irvin" is a McColl-Frontenac tanker, but was carrying a load for the B.A.

They pumped out four hundred thousand gallons into our storage tanks," Mr. Roy Stafford stated to the press. It took the tanker only about five hours to discharge her load. She sailed from the Imperial Belleville at fifteen minutes after five o'clock yesterday afternoon.

SCHOOL CADET CORPS READY FOR PARADES

Annual Inspection Will be Held About May 1st

With the approach of inspection, the local cadet corps are extremely active these days. There are over three hundred and fifty cadets enrolled at the collegiate but there are not nearly enough uniforms to equip the members. This is unfortunate but the Board thought it best to wait a year or so. It does not enhance the appearance of the boys to see some in uniform and some in civilian clothes when on parade. Capt. J. Howard has the boys in charge of the armouries two afternoons a week at which they are taught the idea of discipline. Mr. Howard is one of the best set of officers and corps in the Dominion. Mr. R. Hunter is in charge of the boys' band and under the cadets will be on parade. Mr. Hunter has built up a wonderful boys' band at the collegiate and with their smart airs and natty appearance are a decided asset to the city.

Cadet shooting is concluded for the season and the medals and cash prizes for their good marksmanship during the season. These prizes are awarded by the Dominion Government and the record set up by the local cadets is one to be proud of.

At the public schools the cadets are training for the coming inspection and the annual rivalry between the school cadet corps adds to the interest. The exact date for holding the inspection will be held on or about May 1st.

COMMISSION TO UNITED STATES

Highly Technical Data Piled up for Sir Josiah Stamp

(Canadian Press)

Winnipeg, April 22.—Extensive testimony, complicated charts and tabulations and highly technical data were piled high on record here today when Sir Josiah Stamp's royal commission terminated the Canadian inquiry and hurried the west inquiry into the grain future trading. Late this afternoon the Commission left for the United States for an informal session at Minneapolis and Chicago.

In yesterday's lengthy session the commissioner heard the opinion of a nationally known Economists, two leading farmers' agencies represented, while another favored restrictions to prevent the possibility of price manipulation.

BASEBALL MEETING

A meeting of the Hastings County junior baseball league was held at the Y.M.C.A. last night. Three teams were represented while Wellington telephoned in to the meeting that they would be ready to go ahead with the drawing up of a schedule, etc., at the next meeting that is to be called early next week. B.A.A.A. juniors were entered along with the Moose juniors last years' champions. Point Anne juniors are ready to face the barrier with almost the same team that they had last season. Free "Bob" Redmond spoke to the meeting on the advisability of trying to interest at least two more teams so an invitation was extended to Trenton juniors and the Quinte junior club of Belleville. If these two new entries can see their way clear to come in, the league is likely to be a success. The next meeting will be held in Wellington for the purpose of drawing up a schedule passing out certificates to general members. It is expected that the gathering will be called the latter part of next week.

A.Y.P.A. MET

Last evening Christ Church A.Y.P. A. held their last social evening and a delightful programme was put on for the amusement of the members present. Miss M. Lang opened the meeting and carried on the usual routine of business, which was followed by a short programme, piano solo—E. Asselstine; reading—Jean Croft, Chesterfield Day"; piano solo—John Clark (when Irish Eyes are Smiling); reading—Mrs. Hickey, and a piano solo by Miss M. Symons. After this there was a general discussion regarding their play "Trusty Jim." Dainty refreshments were then served by the ladies present, which was followed by an hour of dancing. The meeting broke up about 12 o'clock p.m. every person having had a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

MOTORING TO OSWEGO

Mr. and Mrs. A. Burgoyne and children left this morning for Oswego this week end to visit friends.

"TRADER HORN" WILL BE SHOWN HERE

"Trader Horn," the film founded on the famous book, made a tremendous hit in Montreal and Toronto and it is understood that it is about to be shown at the Belle Theatre, Belleville.

EUCHRE PARTY.

The Daughters of England held a successful euchre on Monday evening despite the many counter attractions in the city. The prizes for the euchre and spot dances, which followed the play were donated by Kingston chapter of the Daughters of England and were much appreciated. Dancing followed the euchre drive, Miss Bennett winning one spot dance and Mrs. Jeffs the other. The prize winners in euchre were, Ladies, Mrs. Lancaster, Mrs. Lazenby, Mrs. George Jones, Trenton; Mrs. Cook and Mrs. R. Turney; while the Gents were, W. R. Emerson, Mr. Turney, Mrs. Saldree and Mrs. A. Jones. The rummy winners were Mr. R. E. and Mrs. E. Stapley.

PROPERTIES DAMAGED

"Neighborhood gangs of younger boys" are causing residents of the East Hill considerable annoyance, information received. These boys have been breaking down line fences between properties, disrupting flower beds and otherwise creating a general nuisance. Apparently some of the boys think this is play, but to

Two or three complaints have been made to the police of these depredations and in case the police pick up a few of these boys, the result in the police court may not be to their advantage. This is a timely warning sent out and the police, if they receive another complaint, are going to make every effort to apprehend those responsible.

GOES TO PRISON

Leo Green was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary by Magistrate Bedford of Deseronto one week ago, has been taken to the penitentiary to commence his sentence. The man was taken to Kingston by Chief of Stokes. Had Green so desired, he could have asked for his County and the right to speak against the sentence that was imposed, but he made no such request and he right and the authorities here immediately delivered him to the penitentiary. His sentence started from the day he arrived. Green then pleaded guilty to four charges of breaking and entering and also a charge of shooting with intent.

PLANS ARE LAID

Plans for the official opening of the Bay of Quinte County Country on the 15th of May next were laid at a meeting of the ladies section of the club held last night. It was decided to change opening this year from the 24th to the 16th as a great many of the members of the club are away over the holiday. A ball will be given to open the official golfing season.

TO ADDRESS GROUP

Mr. E. C. Fyfe, librarian at Queen's University, Kingston, will speak to the Belleville study group tonight. This will be the last lecture to the study group until it resumes in the fall.

BATHING AT DOCK

Yesterday afternoon it might be said that the local swimming season was officially opened in Belleville. A number of youths, some of them from the Collegiate, collected up their bathing suits and took a dive off at the Institute dock. "Come on in, the water's fine" was the old familiar cry. It was not too cold for comfort. The Ontario Intelligencer was told this morning.

Financial Stringency

"At the present time," said Mr. Mayall, "we are suffering from an epidemic of financial stringency and depression, and it appears to me to be high time for us, as leaders of thought and action in our community, to seriously consider the cause; to analyze the germ, so to speak, and in addition to alleviating the sufferings of those, who have contracted the disease, take immediate action to isolate the contagion or of our citizens to render them immune from the ravages of this ghastly plague. During the past year we have heard a great deal about the so-called "industrial depression" and have had a number of theories advanced to account for it, and many suggestions for rectifying our platient. Quite a number of our leaders have attracted the theory of over-production. Personally, I do not believe that there is any such condition as over-production" than over production". With all due deference to the opinions and sincerity of everybody concerned, I think that it would be better if we sent troubles are of our own making. Many of them are directly responsible, together with thousands of others like us, and that the underlying reason for all present trouble and misery is our own stupid thought processes. I do not believe in fatalism. The remedy for these troubles lie in our own hands."

The speaker enumerated the sever al advantages that Canada possessed stating that Canada should never know adversity where there is abund ance of natural resources and can produce every single item that is necessary for comfort and welfare. Granaries Overflowing

"But we have brought ourselves to the point where our granaries and elevators are overflowing with wheat," continued the speaker not only the wheat produced last year, but millions of bushels of the year before and whilst our Premier was away in England making a frantic effort to sell that wheat thousands of our citizens were unemployed and literally starving for a few handfuls of that wheat, which is a glut on the market and being offered for the lowest price in our generation."

"While the price of wheat and price of manufactured articles, to say nothing of stocks and bonds is the lowest in years, there are few buyers for the reason that our potential buyers have no money and even those in steady employment fear to buy and because these people who buy textiles, radios and automobiles do not do so, the workmen who should be manufacturing these things are idling our factories in which other men manufacture these things are out of work. Because these men are out of work they are unable to buy the necessaries of life and being under nourished and despondent they talk hard times. They talk to some one else and they in some alarmed and business is at a standstill but our modern methods of living entitle us to more than the bare necessities of life."

Labor Saving Machines

"During the past years we have harnessed to our use thousands of horsepower, equivalent to tens of thousands of man power of electrical and steam energy without making an organized effort to furnish other employment for those so displaced. Just as in the Great War the brightest minds of each nation were devoted to the production of implements of destruction, so in the industrial days our brightest minds have been devoted to the production of labor saving thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Left to mourn, besides the sorrowing husband, are two sons, Murney at home and Harry on an adjacent farm on the third of Elsevir; two daughters, Mrs. William Cassidy, on the third line, and Mrs. Frank Alexander, Jr., in Quemsboro, and nine grandchildren.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Charles and John Mallette, Harry Massey, Simon Clarke, Abraham Bentley and Fred Rollins. Interment was made in Quemsboro cemetery.

MRS. WILLIAM CLEMENTS

Queensboro, April 22—The funeral services for the late Sarah Bird, wife of William Clements, general merchant at Tamboro, who passed away Friday evening in her 50th year, were held in the United Church at Tweed, on Monday at one o'clock and were conducted by her pastor, the Rev. James N. Lowden.

The deceased was a native of the Bethlehem district where for many years she had kept house for a brother. She had been severely ill for some nine weeks but hope was held out for recovery until a few days before her death when she was very painfully afflicted. Mrs. William Keene of Queensboro is a sister. Interment was made at Cooper cemetery.

LATE R. E. BEDORE

The funeral of Elias Edward Bedore, who died on Sunday afternoon from his late residence, 27 Church street, to St. Paul's Church, where Captain Payne officiated at an impressive service. Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery, the bearers being—D. Blackburn, C. Hinch, Wm. Bedore, G. Keller, J. Calberry and C. Hibler. There was a very large attendance of mourning friends. The floral offerings were:—Sprays. St. Paul's Church; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown; Mr. Louis Rushlow and family; Mrs. Till Rushlow and family; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Keller; Mr. and Mrs. A. FEW CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

There are only three cases of contagious diseases in Belleville at the present time, Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H. stated to the Intelligencer. These include one case of scarlet fever, one of diphtheria and one of mumps. "This does not include any whooping cough there may be," the doctor said. "it is practically impossible to keep track of this disease."

machinery and devices for eliminating human workers without any systematic effort to absorb the men displaced by machines, and without any co-adjustment of hours of labor. As a consequence of this we have lost up to the present, most of the advantage which should have been ours under methods of production. New periods of depression due to unbalanced or over-production are not a new innovation; unfortunately we experienced something of this kind every seven years but in 1914 the Great War absorbed thousands and the situation was not as acute as in 1907 and 1921. In this country in this day and generation, there should be no starving people or unemployed. Relief work, doles and unemployment insurance are not a remedy, excellent though they may be, they are only a makeshift. What is the remedy? First, that we maintain an intelligent optimism; secondly, bring our influence to bear on those with money; thirdly, bring influence to bear on the question of overtime employment; fourth, that we advocate a substantial portion of the enormous savings in the banks be utilized for development of our natural resources or in establishing credit and purchasing power in China and India, which stand in great need of our products, and fifth that we discharge our obligation to those who fought in the Great War."

The speaker dealt with soldier's insurance advocating that they be given pensions and granted two years deduction for every year of service, also that those dependents upon them should come into pension earlier. Our citizens are doing a great and noble work in the alleviation of distress, but why not go a few steps further and remove the cause rather than alleviate the effect.

"We discover mechanical flaws by subjecting a machine to excessive strain. Might we not also discover human frailties along the same lines?" —Kaye Don.

PROF. TICKELL ISSUES BOOK

Prof. Fred O. Tickell of Berkeley, California, professor of petroleum engineering in Stanford University, has just had issued from the Stanford University press his book "The Conservation of Natural Resources," a copy of which he has sent to his brother, Miss Josephine Tickell, Prof. Tickell is a son of George W. Tickell of Berkeley and a grandson of the late Ex-Sheriff Tickell of Belleville.

The work is an outline of the physical properties of modern scientific agents and of their mineral constituents. It is a laboratory manual and a guide for students, geologists, mining engineers and mineralogists —in fact for all those interested in a practical treatment either of identity or of size and form characteristics of fragmental rocks. This is the only book of the kind on the market, treating both of the bulk and grain properties. There are mineral tables which make comparatively simple and rapid the identification of the species commonly found in clastic mineral aggregates. Illustrated include 33 line drawings and 36 halftones.

CAR ACCIDENT IS REPORTED

Navigation is Opened at Picton—Farmers Busy Planting

PICTON, April 21—(Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — Two cars were badly damaged in an accident at the corner of Main and Bridge streets at noon yesterday. A Ford coupe owned by Mr. Finley Lester was parked near his office and Mr. Ira Storms of Greenbush was proceeding up the hill with his Oldsmobile coupe. In some way Mr. Storms lost control of his car and it crashed into the parked car with great force. The Ford had one wheel smashed and other damage done. While the Oldsmobile escaped with less damage it was also badly bent around the front.

Farmers in different sections of the county are now at work on the land and a good deal of grain is being sowed. In some sections the land is too wet to work but there is less moisture this spring than last. The recent rains were very beneficial and fall grains are looking much improved.

Shiloh—Collage

A quiet wedding took place at the United Church parsonage, Picton, on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock when the pastor, Rev. F. M. Wooton, united in marriage, Miss Frances Emily Colledge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Colledge of Picton, to Mr. William Arthur Shiloh of Picton.

Miss Dorothy Small of Chesgin, Ontario, now a student of the Ontario Ladies' College at Whitby, was a holiday guest at the Bloomfield parsonage with Rev. C. S. Reddick and Mrs. Reddick.

A number of new road maintainers —combined power scarifier and grader—have been purchased in Prince Edward. The County purchased one and the townships of Hillier, Sophiasburg, and Ameliasburg also acquired similar outfits Ameliasburg operated one last year and was very pleased with results. It is expected that other townships will also purchase them. It is hoped with these graders to cut down the expense of maintaining the roads.

Picton April 21—Navigation is open here and closed to Toronto, when the Canada Steamship Line freighter 'City of Hamilton' left the local harbor bound for Hamilton. She came to Picton from Kingston where she spent the winter. While here she was loaded with thirty thousand cases of Prince Edward County canned goods. Part of these will be transferred to another freighter at Toronto to be shipped to the Canadian West. The rest will be taken on to Hamilton and when the canal is open the 'City of Hamilton' will go to Montreal and take it there. Part of it will be shipped across the sea to England and to South Africa. Prince Edward County canned goods go to all parts of the world, and this canning is just one of the many that will be taken from this part this season. The loading of these freighters gives work to many hands and is very welcome at a time like this when there is not much else doing here that will aid the laboring man.

This week will see most of the cheese factories in Prince Edward County in operation. Those at Bloomfield and Cloverdale began making cheese last week. The cheese makers are arranging for the weekly meetings that are to be held at the different factories in the county. These meetings are attended by both These meetings are attended by both the cheesemakers of the county and the patrons. NEWSPAPER IS THE BEST MEDIUM FOR ADVERTISING

Sales of Corporate Trust Highest in Years

After a survey, lasting several months, of the advertising medium best suited to financial advertising, officials of the administrative and Research Corporation, sponsors of Corporate Trust Shares, announced yesterday their decision not only to continue to place the larger part of their advertising appropriation in the financial pages of the newspapers of the country, but to augment the amount of space heretofore used.

Added significance is given this announcement by the fact that this company is already the largest user of advertising space in newspapers among financial advertisers in the country and that much pressure had been brought to bear upon the Administrative and Research Corporation to divert their large appropriation to other advertising channels.

The fact that the company has depended almost entirely upon 'newspapers to publicize its securities and that in 1930 it developed the greatest sales volume in the history of the investment trust business, naturally had much to do with the decision of the company.

Discussing the step just taken by his organization, John Y. Hopkins, President of Administrative and Research Corporation, said yesterday:

"For sometime past there have been persistent rumors in financial and advertising circles that this company would discontinue its newspaper advertising and adopt another form of publicity. In order definitely to set at rest these rumors, I would like to state that not only are we continuing our newspaper advertising but as a result of a recent study of the advertising situation made by us, have decided to increase our present newspaper appropriation.

"Last year, the sales of Corporate Trust Shares exceeded those of any investment trust, averaging more than a million shares a month. In the first quarter of this year, also ran substantially ahead of the 1930 average. It has long been our conviction that the consistent use of space on our part in the financial pages of representative newspapers throughout the country has had much to do with this widespread distribution. This conviction has been fully attested by the survey referred to, which had for its purpose a ther ough and disinterested investigation of the type of publicity carrying the most weight with investors.

"Investing money is a serious business to everybody. Next to a man's family, perhaps it is his most important consideration. It is not something to be done lightly, and our survey revealed that investors today are not parting with their funds without familiarizing themselves with the different types of securities and the character of the sponsoring organizations. Nothing can supplant the business and financial pages of the daily press to give them the information they want.

"As a matter of fact, we found that the amount of space devoted to financial news by the influential newspapers in the country, constitutes one of the prime reasons for the purchase of these papers by the more intelligent element of their circulation and provides a medium upon which our modern system of securities' distribution rests. Furthermore the printed word permits of a detailed presentation of a financial service's message which no other form of advertising makes available.

"This verification of our past judgment is all the more gratifying for the reason that we were the pioneers among fixed trusts in the use of newspaper advertising. From our original appropriation, our advertising has grown to a point where today it is larger than that of any other trust.

"Under the circumstances it would certainly be short-sighted on our part to drop this aid, and experiment with a new and less tried medium. On the contrary, it is our intention to expand our newspaper advertising materially, supplementing this, we will continue to use talking motion pictures which we were the first investment house to use as an aid to our selling efforts. It has been our experience that next to newspapers, the talking screen is the most effective medium available to the distributor of securities today since it both visualizes and explains for the investor the security back of his investment."

TORONTO WANTS THE RIVER DEEPENED

Toronto, April 21. (CP)—The objection by the City of Toronto against the passing of legislation by the Federal government, which would, prejudicially affect the ultimate deepening and use of the St. Lawrence River as an ocean going water way, and opposition to the further disposal of any hydro-power rights to private corporations was voiced today in a letter from the Board of Control, a copy of which was sent to every Toronto representative in the House of Commons.

DO SPECULATORS CAUSE MOVEMENT

Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, Grain Economist Gives Evidence

Winnipeg, April 21—(CP)—Enormously large trading operations are detrimental to the best interests of the grain futures market, declared Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, noted grain economist, testifying today before the Royal Commission, probing the effect of the Options market on prices to the producer. He believed the futures market fulfill a definite function in grain handling but that it has its defects.

Both Dr. Josiah Stamp, the chairman, and his fellow commissioner, W. Handford Evans, queried the economist closely, endeavoring to ascertain whether the speculators dealing were the cause of the market movement or merely the effect.

EDMONTON, Alta., April 21.—(By The Canadian Press)—In the ninth exhibition of the Canadian Handicrafts Guild Alberta's own resources were manifested in baskets of willow withes, strong, serviceable, and of good shape. Short lengths of thick spruce and poplar were carved into figurines, easily familiar farm types and slightly tinted, that showed conscientious ability and power to seize on the essential lines of the subjects. In other cases garden and sun-porch furniture was constructed from many twigs and sections in combination. There were exhibits of cast concrete in colour, of wrought iron, of cabinet work, with most delicate marquetry of different colored woods.

PREMIER BENNETT'S MESSAGE

The Canadian premier speaking in Toronto on Monday night before the largest Bible class in the world, said, "the great thing is to have faith and sincerity of purpose in following the course that you have mapped out for yourself". Further on, he said, that education in this age of specialization is a requisite for the present age demands of men, knowledge. Knowledge added to firmness, courage and persistence may bring the achievement of almost the impossible. But over all stands wisdom. Premier Bennett pointed out the great danger of the air of cynicism which pervades effect and added, "The Kingdom of God is within you." "I have a firm conviction that unless we lay firm hold of what is abiding, life becomes a bare and poor affair the longer it lasts; and the only evidence of what is abiding is the materializing of the spirit of God and of His Presence—not far away in the skes but in the hearts and minds of each of us."

Man cannot substitute speculation for work and hope to succeed. Nor can science be substituted for religion, for science has only discovered what already exists and has not yet discovered the soul. In the last analysis the present age is thrown back upon the faith of childhood for all the learning in the world cannot explain either philosophically, scientifically or otherwise that which rests on faith.

Such a statement of life values from the premier of Canada discusses many of the problems which every one is facing at some time or other. The greatest thing is that wisdom which is faith.

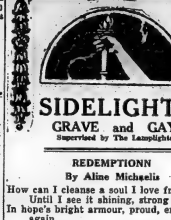
It is well that a pronouncement of this kind should come from one who is held in highest regard throughout the continent as executive and thinker. It reveals the fact that one who governs all men, whether he be premier or the man of little influence, the rich or the poor—the law of wisdom and of faith.

Many will think more of the supreme values of life after hearing and reading Mr. Bennett's message.

ONTARIO'S RURAL SHORT COURSES

Rapid spread of winter short courses in agriculture throughout the rural parts of Ontario is indicated from the fact that during the past winter, such courses were extended through 28 counties in that province, serving more than 1,000 rural young people with an average of 38 for each course, says the Canadian Colonizer. First instituted in 1912 there have been altogether 666 one-month courses in agriculture with an enrolment of 18,901, held since that time. Short courses in home economics are of more recent origin. They embrace foods and cookery, home nursing and first aid, sewing and millinery, and are invariably held concurrently with courses in agriculture for boys. In 1931 one-month courses in agriculture were held in twenty-eight different counties. The enrolment of regular students was 1045—an average of 38 per course. Thirty one-month courses in Home Economics were also held in as many different Counties in 1931. Young women to the number of 1,186 enrolled in these courses.

Three-month courses in agriculture and home economics have also been a feature of the more recent activities of the Ontario Department of Agriculture since 1921-22. The curriculum of these courses includes the regular principles taught at the one month courses in Agriculture. The three-months course permit a much more developed course of study and also allow the inclusion of such subjects as arithmetic, English, and music. Eight such courses were held in as many different counties in December, 1930, and January and February, 1931. The total enrolment in the boys' classes was 336 or an average of 42 per course, while 265 young women enrolled in the 8 courses in home economics.



PUBLICITY

Does a citizen of Belleville ever wonder why the city uses publicity to any of its advantages and of its immediate surroundings as likely to appeal to tourists? If there is one such he probably thinks that no larger city goes in for it.

It will be a shock to this type to find that so great a city as New York with its teeming millions, which might be expected not to appreciate visitors, has a board of strategy to raise funds for publicity for an energetic publicity campaign designed to attract tourists to the city during the usual summer slump in business. Railroads, industries and theatres will cooperate.

In times of war and depression the theatres open on. It is well that they do, for they make people forget their worries for the time being and make it more easy to bear the load of idleness and unemployment which some are carrying.

In spite of socalled hard times, these fine days bring out the motorcars as thick as flies upon the highways. Cheaper gasoline doubtless helps in continuing the motoring pastime.

REDEMPTIONN
By Aline Michaelis

How can I cleanse a soul I love from stain
Until I see it shining, strong and true,
In hope's bright armour, proud, erect, erect again,
The brave and lovely thing that once I knew?
How can I lead it back to paths of light
From those strange byways where it wanders now,
How plant within its deeps a love of right
That will redeem, at least, each broken vow?
Why, I shall put so much of faith therein,
Weight it with such a burden of my trust,
It must renounce the quest of every sin
Must turn once more to courses wholly just.
If mine is the courage to be strong,
I can redeem the soul I love from wrong.

BEAUTY PARLORS are among the developments of this bizarre and byzantine age when so much money is being spent on personal adornment. Former Belleville barber, now in Cleveland, has charge of the tonsorial department and beauty department of a big department store there, which is now spending one million dollars adding two more stories to the building so as to handle more business. Seven men barbers are busy all day, the trade being women and children exclusively. Our Belleville friend specializes in finger waves for which one dollar is charged, and is kept busy on this class of work alone. The entire staff of this beauty annex, including manicurists, etc., comprises forty. This craze for beauty, artificial and improved, is sweeping around the world and even China and Japan are infected, according to the New York Times which has this to say on the subject:

"One might suppose that in Japan and China, where hair is allowed to grow naturally and fashionably straight, there would be no demand for a permanent waving machine. Yet an American girl, with a one-heater device and a keen desire to see the Orient, found more than enough clients who longed for curly hair to provide work and traveling expenses for herself and her mother.

Business came so rapidly in Japan that an order was soon sent for a larger machine. Wherever the lure of unseen countries took the journeymen hair-dressers, trade followed the permanent wave. Many who asked for curly locks were the wives of European and American business men and planters station ed in far countries. But numerous Japanese and Chinese women also were delighted to submit their long black, glossy tresses to the "miracle" machine.

There were various interesting and illustrious clients, among them a Tibetan princess and the grand-daughter of a Javanese Sultan. A young prince of the island was torn between deep love for curly locks and fear of the "tortures" of the machine. When the curlers were all in place upon his royal head he asked to see how they looked, and proclaimed: "You are taking my scalp the way your Indians do." Finally he was completely reassured and waved.

The first instalment of Miss Guehring's adventures appears in the May issue of the magazine section. Her combination of touring and waving she probably owes to the advance publicity of American movies."

CHECK-UP ON THE BRAKES

A motor accident occurred on Friday near Whitchen when a man was struck from behind by a car driving his horse and buggy and he was badly injured. It is hard to know what the cause of this accident was fatally to the man, that the driver of the car was not able to stop when he without. But whether this was the cause or not is is most important that there should be a check-up on all motor cars in order to see that their brakes are working properly. Fatal accidents caused by brakes failing in poor condition have been quite numerous in the past, and no chances should be taken.

The laws are exceedingly strict with regard to licenses, headlights, etc., and brakes this was the trouble has been that the enforcement has been weak, that the check-up has been spasmodic and indifferent with the result that too many people are willing to take a chance, perhaps in luck to keep themselves out of accidents and when they discover that they are safe from official attention so long as they avoid being involved in a mix-up.

There are also too many people driving motor cars who have never taken out the necessary license. Thousands of people during the past fiscal year capable of driving a motor car who do not possess a car or there is not one in their family, but they are very often driving other people's cars and without a license. A check-up might be made on all such people, and they should not be permitted to drive a car without a license. The law with regard to children under age being behind the wheel of a motor car should also be made. There are plenty of these, and while they may drive safely enough under certain conditions, if an accident occurred in which they were involved someone will have to pay.

More frequent check-ups will do away with a lot of this carelessness and teach the offenders that the regulations have teeth, something which has not yet sufficiently impressed itself on the minds of the public. There would be fewer accidents under proper enforcement.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

A KING AND HIS PET DOG

Another evidence of the delightful humanity of Britain's Sovereign had come to light. Every man worthy of the name loves his dog, but the general impression has been that the ruler of an Empire would have little time to devote to such a pet. The death of "Snip" shows that this is all wrong. "Snip" was a well-bred Cairn terrier, and evidently knew his master himself in the full company of royalty. At all events, he was the inseparable companion of King George in the country and about the grounds of Buckingham Palace, and wherever his Majesty travelled to other sections of his Kingdom "Snip" was sure to go.—The Toronto Globe.

TEARING UP ROADS

It seems strange that nobody has yet devised a scheme which will prevent roads being torn up when it is necessary to lay pipes or lines or perform some other subterranean operation which is of almost daily occurrence in Toronto. The road surface when it is relaid is never as good as before it was torn up. Would it not be possible that when a pavement is being put down in the first place a hinged iron grating should be laid over the curb? Undoubtedly it would be expensive, but in the long run might be an economy.—Mail and Empire.

QUICK WORK IN SPAIN

The Republican authorities at Madrid are disregarding the Spanish proverb which says: "He who goes slow goes far." They are moving with great rapidity. Under the previous plan, the election of a Constituent Cortes was to have been held in June or July. Now it is announced for early May. Doubtless one motive is not to give time for the enthusiasm for the Republic to cool. Also there may be the reason to demonstrate to Alfonso XIII that the municipal elections a week ago were not an accidental and temporary blanket out of public opinion, but were a true index of the determination of the Spanish people to make an end of the monarchy. Further significance in the speedy new Republican Government is the announcement that it will proceed at an early day to effect a complete separation of Church and State in Spain. This step, however, promises to be as daring as it sounds. There has been evidence during past years that many Spanish ecclesiastics have been drawn into the revolt against the dictatorship and in favor of a republic. In like manner, the Republican movement is now seen to have gained many adherents in the army —a fact which helps to effect the quiet acceptance of the new regime by most of the military authorities. —New York Times.

NORMAL ABNORMALITIES

Many curious tricks of the mind exist which, incidentally, may make their possessor worry, but which are quite within the range of the normal. Applicable is that true of obsessions scores of which fell within this category. Persons who harbour such ideas often believe, though erroneously, that no sane person could possibly be that way.

An obsession, of course, is a thought which keeps coming to one again and again, and of which the individual cannot rid his mind. Often it seeks an outlet through compelling the individual to perform some act and said individual will have no peace of mind until he does actually give way to the impulse.

Men and women find themselves impelled to add up the numbers on all the automobile plates they happen to see. Others have a strange feeling of impending danger if they step on the cracks in the pavement. Others again want to touch every gate post they pass. Still others find themselves expectorating needlessly. Well, the list of obsessions is long one and embraces all sorts of strange ideas.

Now the cardinal characteristic of all obsessions is that the individual who possesses one realizes it is foolish. But do what he will, fight it as he will, the impulse still remains. Nothing happens, to be sure, if such an obsessed person absolutely refuses to give way to the obsession and actually succeeds. Only a sensation of uneasiness or a vague feeling of things not being right is experienced. And the chances are that having fought down a compulsion act, he will give way to it again later on simply because of having given way. It feels more comfortable.

Obsessions are part of a neurotic make-up but unless they get so bad as to interfere with one's work and peace of mind, they may be neglected safely. If, on the other hand, the obsession is one too harassing to others keep developing, then a nerve specialist should be consulted and the root cause—some unconscious mind disturbance—removed.

Another abnormality, which may be listed as a deviation among normals, are certain kinds of delusions.

A delusion is merely a mistake of judgment. One may make a mistake in the date, for example, and not be mentally deranged. One may even make a more serious blunder and yet possess normal faculties.

If, however, no appeal can be made to an individual's common sense—if he insists on his wrong idea even after ample proof has been brought forth to prove his error, then something serious may be amiss with the thinking mechanism.

Poor memory is another of those mind difficulties which may not have an alarming significance. Occasionally one forgets before the eyes or seeing strange pictures apparently flash before the eyes are other instances of normal abnormalities.

In other words, our mental side may not be functioning always at top speed or at its best. A physical indisposition may account for this. Fatigue can play many tricks. We should note that our mind needs a specialist's attention only when some quirk or other gets worse or becomes permanent and annoying.

Ignorance plays an important role in the worries we experience over the many possible deviations from the normal which, nevertheless, are well within the limits of average normality.

And he turned around to look back just when the man was turning around to look back at him, and they both stopped and started to wawk tords each other with their hands out to shake, the man saying, Well, well, I thawt I recognized you but for a moment I wasent quite sure.

I was in just the same fix, thats quite a coincidents, pop sed. Have a cigar, he sed, and the man sed, Tip top thanks, how have you been?

Oh K, I cant think of a thing to complain about except a genrel shortness of breth and money, pop sed. Well im glad to see you looking so well, he sed.

The same here, youre looking fit as a fiddle, the man sed. Neither one of them saying each others name, proving they dident remember who they was even yet, and they kept on looking at each other like 2 men wondering what they was trying to remember, pop saying. Is your family all well?

My grandfather is all the family Ive got and he's quite well, the other man sed, and pop sed, O, I beleve I remember, quite an old gentleman, izzent he?

Well yes, he's passed his prime, Im afraid, the other man sed. By the way, you dident always wear that little mustash, did you? he sed, and pop sed, Well, I wasent born with it, but I aquired it the first day I started on the market and Ive had it on ever since.

Do you meen to say youre not Sam Tibbits? the other man sed, and pop sed, On the contrary, Im Willyum Potts. Do you meen to say youre not Fred Jarvis? he sed, and the other man sed, Quite the reverse, Im Phil Acton.

And they both held out their hands again, pop saying, Please to meet you, Mr. Acton, and the other man saying, Enchanted to make your acquaintance, Mr. Potts, see you again some time.

Rite O, pop sed, and we kepp on going, me saying, Who is Fred Jarvis, pop? and pop saying, I never herd of him, but I wasent going to let that crap think he knows more people than I do.

It seems absolutely unbelievable that, for a deposit of approximately $25.00 a year, a father (age 30) can guarantee such far-reaching benefits as education for his young son or daughter. It can be done the London Life way:

A "Son's Inheritance" policy,* in case the father's life were cut short, would furnish funds for support and training covering the periods of primary education, high school and university, as follows:

$150 a year until your boy is age 11
$250 a year from ages 12 to 16
$500 a year from ages 17 to 21

(These amounts may be increased in proportion.)

*Also issued for girls on the "Daughter's Inheritance" plan.

Reward your boy's faith in you. Get particulars for your specific case now.

Warns Christians of 'Dynamic' Faiths

NEW YORK, April 22.—The annual Spring meeting of the Protestant Teachers' Association of New York City, representing 7,000 public school teachers, was held at the Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. More than 200 members of the association were present.

Stanley Hiatt, editor of The Christian Herald and recently identified with a rumored proposal to establish a "dry" daily newspaper in New York, spoke on "To-day's Christians and Tomorrow's Religion." Unless Christianity becomes an objective force instead of a subjective one as it is now, he said, it is doomed to be overcome by other faiths which "inspire a zeal we cannot match." These faiths, he said, include Communism, the Christian and Islam movements as the one headed by Gandhi in India.

"Fascism, above all," Mr. High declared, "is the combination of the every-country-right-or-wrong philosophy. Communism represents one of the world's missionary faiths, one of the world's dynamic forces, one of those centres of intense fervour which the people of the world are gathering.

"Communism appeals to economics and materialism. It has gone out to people who are starving, and the world is full of starving people. It has gone out to the world's underdogs and they have embraced it as the following Communism deals in the fundamental meats of humanity.

"Christianity should dedicate itself to combating the current fetishism as exemplified in Fascism. Christianity is also counter to Communism, because Communism is dedicated to a material objective which Christianity is bound to repudiate."

He added that while Christianity as many people in this country was merely "incidental" among individualistic objectives, there is nothing incidental in the loyalty of the followers of Mussolini and Gandhi and the leaders of the Soviet Republic. Christianity, as a loyalty, is less effective in organizing its followers' lives.

Mr. High praised the tactics of Gandhi, who, he said, had forced the British Government to the whole World to acquiesce in his demands without resorting to the sword or bloshed. He also warned that nationalism is the greatest present day obstacle of a peace-loving Christianity.

Though all your plates were lost and all your prints
There would remain one triumph of your art
Etched through the ground of promises long slain
Dried on the naked surface of a heart.

This you could show without regretfulness,
Your masterpiece of euphemistic strife,
Bitter with acid of forgetfulness
And printed on the paper of life.

High Tea — a Pleasant Way of Entertaining the Bride

By Hannah Wing

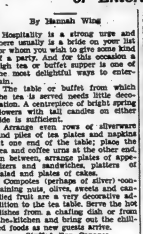
Hospitality is a strong urge and there usually is a bride on your list for whom you wish to give some kind of a party. And for this occasion a high tea or buffet supper is one of the most delightful ways to entertain.

The table or buffet from which the tea is served needs little decoration. A centrepiece of bright spring flowers with tall candles on either side is sufficient.

Arrange even rows of silverware and piles of tea plates and napkins at one end of the table; place the tea and coffee urns at the other end; in between, arrange plates of appetizers and sandwiches, platters of salad and plates of cakes.

Composes (perhaps of silver) containing nuts, olives, sweets and candied fruit are a very decorative addition to the tea table. Serve the hot dishes from a chafing dish or from the kitchen and bring out the chilled foods as new guests arrive.

Stuffed Egg Canapes



3 hard cooked eggs
1 tablespoon grated cheese
1 tablespoon grated onion
Salt and pepper
2 teaspoons
2 sardines
1-2 cup mayonnaise
1-2 tablespoon minced green pepper
1-2 tablespoon minced olives or onions
1-3 cup chili sauce
1 tablespoon minced pickle
6 stuffed olives

Cut eggs in halves. Remove yolks, mash yolks, mash and mix with cheese and onion. Season with salt and pepper. Fill whites with yolks mixture. On a round of toast place a slice of tomato spread with a thick coating of mayonnaise. Place egg in centre. Add a dressing made of mayonnaise, pepper, chives, chili sauce and a few drops of Spanish olive: Yield: 6 servings.

Cream Cheese Sandwiches

1 package cream cheese
2 tablespoons evaporated milk
2 tablespoons chopped nuts
Mayonnaise

Mash cheese, add evaporated milk and blend. Add nuts. Spread thin slices of bread, buttered first with mayonnaise, cover half the slices with the cheese mixture and the remaining half with lettuce leaves. Put together in pairs. Yield: 6 sandwiches.

TO WED CHURCHILL

On a lecture tour of the United States and at the same time studying, Mr. Randolph Churchill, son of the famous British statesman, is reported to be engaged to Miss Kathleen Halle (above) daughter of a noted Cleveland financier.

Frozen Cheese Salad

1-3 cup evaporated milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 package cream cheese (3 oz.)
1-4 cup mayonnaise
1-2 cup sliced dates
1-2 cup crushed, drained pineapple
Lettuce leaves

Chill milk in top of double boiler. Cool. Then chill in a bowl surrounded by chipped ice and salt. Whip until stiff with egg beater. Add lemon juice and continue beating until very stiff. Mash cheese. Add mayonnaise slowly, blending well. Add milk and fruit. Pour into a mold and pack with a 1:3 salt-ice mixture or freeze in an automatic refrigerator. Serve on lettuce leaves, with or without salad dressing. Yield: 6 servings.

Perforations are preferred for the new Spring shoes, and are even being featured for shoes worn at home. A new hostess sandal is in red suede piped with gold kid and finished with a gold buckle. The all-important perforations are grouped in the triple rows in authentic effect.

Holding the bag in pleasant when the bag is smart. Ideal with black or black and white would be a large bag of white kid and black patent strips in basket weave effect to make a check design. There is a new composition, ivory edged with black enamel.

Sing something simple about one of the new frocks that are so simple but, oh, so effective. Ideal for a small girl's dance frock is a model made of black taffeta, cut with a very full skirt, and trimmed with bands and bows of white organdie.

The scarf is tied up with the latest frocks. An afternoon model of navy blue silk crepe has a scarf of ruffled pink chiffon pulled through the slits of the frock's wide revers. The sleeves are made of tiny chiffon roses. Flat peplum ties extend into a cascade down the skirt.

Get into print and be smart as well as cheerful. Grand for Spring wear is a red and white printed crepe frock with a red leather belt and white touches in the form of piping and borders marking the sleeves and shoulder capelets.

Rough treatment is being accorded some of the new straws with fine results. Smart is a small model of brown rough straw with a rolled back brim. Over the side brim are tiny feathers in coral tones.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

Dear Readers,

Paris jewelry ensembles have grown to such popularity that they are no longer limited to a matching bracelet, necklace and ring, or brace let and brooch, but are made in sets which include as many as eight pieces. A prominent style authority appeared in one of the new dark red wool frocks that Paris suggests for spring worn with an eight-piece jewelry ensemble, of garnets and yellow gold.

This particular ensemble included the following pieces: Three bracelets (two on one arm, one on the other), a thirty-inch necklace, with three huge gold beads poised on the left shoulder, a garnet buckle worn just at the front of the right hip, in the manner of Vionnet, two garnet pins worn over the right ear of a small knitted hat, and a garnet clip on a bag of fabric matching the dress.

Economy is surely at the back of the minds of the jewelry designers who are competing with one another seemingly, to see who can produce the greatest number of jewels from a single pendant. The latest achievement is a marvelous affair set all over with diamonds. This pendant was worn by a famous society woman at the Embassy Club a few nights ago and when enumerated upon its beauty, the fair owner removed it from her neck and promptly proceeded to give a sort of exhibition performing display. When she had finished the pendant with its magnificent diamond drop had been converted into three bracelets and four rings.

A cynic declares in the London Daily Mail that of all living things the last to be civilized will be women. Well, be that as it may, she keeps jazz alive; woman who looks herself with the help and shares jewelry of the savage. Necklaces, says a correspondent, are to her heavier than frocks! In a Kensington establishment they are showing monster necklaces. One of glass beads, each about the size of a large pigeon's egg, is about 11 inches long and weighs just over seven ounces. A blue crepe suede evening gown of average size and length was found when weighed, to be a fraction lighter than the necklace. Another necklace weighed nine ounces. It is stated that huge solid pearl beads, carved glass and wooden beads with twisted glass beads alternating will form the coming necklace fashion.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE.

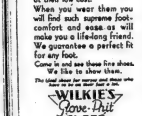
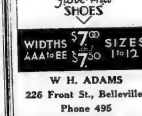
Some Pointers in Correspondence

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Dear Mrs. Beekman:



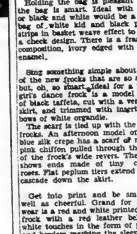
When sending greeting cards or letters to friends and you do not want to sign them Mr. and Mrs., but want to use the given name of each which is customary to use the husband's name then the wife's, or vice versa? I always write our Louis and Pearl. On Christmas we received several which were signed for instance, Mary and Ray, and another Jack and Jean. Now because each of these men are doctors, but we are all friends and call each other by our first names. One card was signed or printed the same, but we do not know them well enough, so addressed them as "Doctor and Mrs." I would like to settle a little argument as to which is right.

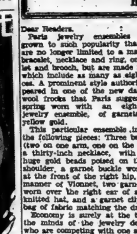


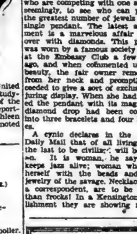
2. When I write letters to my own people, or personal friends, I always end with "From Louis and Pearl." Please tell me if this is correct or not?

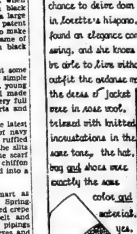
3. Also I am called upon to write a few lines of thanks to a doctor's sister whom I do not know so very well, but who attended a very nice courtesy to us. I know her husband very well. When I write I want to thank them both for this kindness.

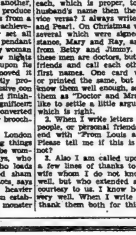
Elaine and Her Ideas From Paris

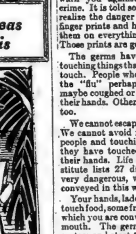


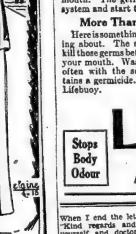


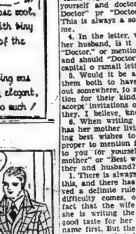


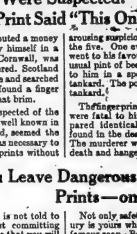


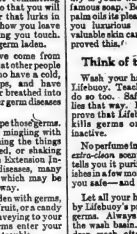


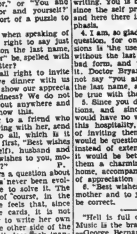


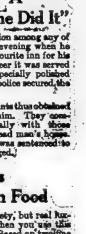


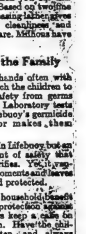


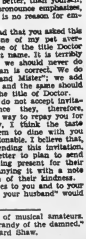












In a Lonely House in Cornwall, England a Man Was Murdered

Five Men Were Suspected. A Finger Print Said "This One Did It"

An old man, reputed a money lender, living by himself in a remote part of Cornwall, was robbed and murdered. Scotland Yard experts came and searched for clues. They found a finger print on a dusty hat brim.

Of five men suspected of the crime, a poacher, well known in the neighbourhood, seemed the most likely. It was necessary to obtain his finger prints without arousing suspicion among any of the five. One evening when he went to his favourite inn for his usual pint of beer it was served to him in a specially polished tankard. The police secured the tankard.

The finger prints thus obtained were fatal to him. They compared identically with those found in the dead man's house. The murderer was sentenced to death and hanged.

So You Leave Dangerous Prints—on Food

This true story is not told to warn you against committing crime. It is told so that you will realize the danger that lurks in finger prints and how you leave them on everything you touch. Those prints are germ laden.

The germs have come from touching things that other people touch. People who have called the "flu" perhaps, and have maybe coughed or breathed into their hands. Other germ diseases too.

We cannot escape those germs. We cannot avoid mingling with people and touching the things they have touched, or shaking their hands. Life Extension Institute lists 27 diseases, and very dangerous, which may be conveyed in this way.

Your hands, ladies with germs, touch food, some fruit, or a candy which you are conveying to your mouth. The germs enter your system and start trouble.

More Than Safety

Here is something worth thinking about. The safe way to kill those germs before they reach your mouth. Wash your hands often with the soap that contains a germicide. That soap is Lifebuoy.

Not only safety, but real luxury is yours when you use this famous soap. Based on two fine palm oils its pleasing lather gives you luxurious cleanliness and valuable skin care. Millions have proved this.

Think of the Family

Wash your hands often with Lifebuoy. Teach the children to do so too. Safety from germs lies that way. Laboratory tests prove that Lifebuoy's germicide kills germs or makes them inactive.

No perfume in Lifebuoy, but an extra-clean scent of safety that tells you it purifies. Yet it vegetates in a few moments and leaves the hands safe—and protected.

Let all your household benefit by Lifebuoy's protection against germs. Always keep a cake in the wash basin. Every time the children wash often, and always before a meal. Keep germs off the hands. A bath with Lifebuoy beautifies the complexion and makes one free from body odours for many hours.

Order a good supply of Lifebuoy now from your dealer.

When I end the letter should I say, "Kind regards and best wishes to yourself and doctor," or "You and Doctor" or "Doctor and yourself"? This is always a sort of a puzzle to me.

4. In the letter, when speaking of her husband, is it right to say just "Doctor," or mention the last name, and should "Doctor" be spelled with capital e on second letter?

5. Would it be all right to invite them both to have dinner with us out somewhere, to show our appreciation for their kindness? We do not accept invitations out anywhere and they, I believe, know this.

6. When writing to a friend who has her mother living with her, and to her best wishes to all, which is it proper to mention first, "Best wishes to you yourself, husband and mother" or "Best wishes to you, mother and husband"?

1. There is always a question about this, and there has never been ever yet a definite rule to solve it. The difficulty comes, of course, in the fact that the wife feels that since she is writing the cards, it is not good taste for her to write her own name first. But the other side of the argument is that, it does look impolite to have the husband's name first. But apparently husbands have so vigorously maintained that the wifes name should come first, that this is usually the custom now — from Pearl and Louis.

2. Here again I think that it would be better, for the reasons that have in the first question, for you to write your name first.

3. Friendship's greetings and good wishes to you and Doctor Bryan" is a good form. There is a definite rule about this; that we mention first the person to whom we are writing. You is better, than yourself, for the self pronouns emphasizes, and here there is no reason for emphasis.

4. I am, so glad that you asked this question, for one of my pet aversions is the use of the title Doctor without the last name. It is simply bad form, and we should never so do. Doctor Bryan is correct. We do not say "you and Mister"; we add the last name and the same should be true with the title of Doctor.

5. Since you do not accept invitations, and since they, therefore, would have no way to repay you for this hospitality, I think the taste of inviting them to dine with you would be questionable. I believe that instead of extending this invitation, it would be better to plan to send them a charming present for their home, accompanying it with a note of appreciation of their kindness.

6. "Best wishes to you and to your mother and to your husband" would be correct.

KINGSTON WILL NOT OPERATE SENIOR BALL

KINGSTON TEAM WILL NOT PLAY SENIOR BALL

Limestone City Will Confine Activities to Intermediate Group

Kingston, April 22—Belleville and Peterboro sport writers have been writing several articles, dealing with the O.B.E. and the chances of a four-team league this summer, and have been counting on Kingston coming into the league again.

For the information of the Peterboro and Belleville sport scribes, it can be stated, absolutely definitely, that Kingston will not be in the O. B. L. this season. Most of the players have spent with the Ponies who will play intermediate ball, and who have no desire whatever to enter in senior ranks. It is pointed out by the Ponies that if the O.B.E. team lost $5,000 on their operations last year, the chances are that practically all would be lost this summer. The expense of taking teams to Belleville, Peterboro and perhaps Oshawa, is far too much, and unless the O.B.E. wants to break its heart with generosity and pay part of the expenses, there isn't a chance in the world of Kingston being in senior ball this summer.

As a matter of fact the local baseball fans saw much better ball last season when Kingston were playing exhibition games, than they did in the playoffs against Belleville.

The Peterboro scribe says that the situation in Kingston has not cleared up yet, but where he gets the idea, no one knows. The situation here is absolutely clear! Kingston Ponies will play in the intermediate series, and that will be the only baseball team to represent the city.

KI-Y BASEBALL LEAGUE PLAN 1931 PROGRAM

Notification of the organization of the Ki-Y Baseball League on Monday, April 27th, has already gone forward to the various public schools, churches, Sunday Schools and others interested organizations throughout the city and it is expected there will be a large representative meeting on that night when Walter Crowder calls the meeting to order.

With the exception of the age grouping no restrictions are being placed on the entry of teams in the Ki-Y Loop. They do not need to represent either church or school. Any group of boys wishing to band together and form a team will be encouraged to do so but they are asked to secure an adult as their mentor.

The ages for the Ki-Y League will remain the same as previously. These are as follows:

Hard Ball

Bantam—13 years and under May 1st.

Midget—15 years and under May 1st.

Juvenile—18 years and under May 1st.

Softball

Bantam—13 years and under May 1st.

Midget—15 years and under May 1st.

Juvenile—18 years and under May 1st.

Indications point to a healthy expansion in the Ki-Y Ball League this coming season. A marked renewal of interest in hardball in this section coupled with the prospect of additional suitable grounds being made available and day light saving being adopted, all give promise of making 1931 a banner year for the Y.M.C.A. throughout the city who are still in their teens.

Penn's Glowing Hopes

By HARDIN BURNLEY

On the eve of the historic Penn Relays (April 24-25), thoughts of athletic-minded Americans naturally turn to Barney Berlinger, long acclaimed as "the one-man track team" of the Blue and Red. Last year he was the chief illumination at this blue ribbon eastern classic which is an annual feature at the Penn Stadium, Philadelphia, as Barney won the decathlon with a score of 7462 points. This year, he is expected to repeat, his victorious form as the record 4-4 games at New York indicating that Barney's Cheer Leader, the Shrewsbury Academy lad, he achieved 27 1-4 points, breaking the former intercollegiate record of 25 made by Sol "Happy" Furth of N. Y. U.

The versatile Berlinger is especially skilled at the 16-pound shot put, 220 yard swim, running high jump and broad jumps. He's been a remarkable all-round athlete ever since he went out for track at Penn Charter and Shrewsbury Academy in his prep school days. And—the end is not yet.

In addition, Coach Lawson Robert

duced to a mile and a quarter, at which it remained till 1804, when it was further reduced to a mile and an eighth, at which distance it now stands, H. Gidding's St. Sam, winner in 1911; J. E. Seagram's Belle Mahone, victorious in 1917, and George M. Hendrie's Springside, which won in 1918, are each holders of the 2.08 4-5 record for the mile and a quarter distance. Ryland H. Hewy's Tranby, winner in 1927, has the best time to date for the mile and eighth distance, her mark being 1.55 4-5.

SIXTY-ONE HORSES ENTERED FOR HISTORIC KING'S PLATE

72nd Running of Classic at Woodbine, May 23rd

TORONTO, April 22.— The 72nd running of the King's Plate, the oldest turf fixture run continuously on this continent, will take place at Woodbine Park, Toronto on Saturday, May 23. There are 61 horses entered for this year's race and the many candidates for the rich prize are in hard training at Woodbine and Thorncliffe tracks. The favorite for this year's Plate race is the 3-year-old brown colt, Froth Blower, by Cudgel-Chrysoberil, owned by R. W. R. Goode of Oakville and trained by Harry Giddings. Froth Blower wintered well and has developed into a splendid-looking colt and after a successful 2-year-old campaign, two of his chief opponents in his brilliant year the Seagram stable's Spherette and Greentree Stable's Nars Jewel, died during the winter, so that he is conceded to be the outstanding candidate for the race—much as Man Beau was in the Agua Caliente Handicap and Gallant Fox in the Grand National.

Money Increased to $10,000

Last year the King's Plate was won by ex-Oakville horseman, Ryland H. New, with the 3-year-old Aymond with the Thornecliffe stable's Whale Bay (since deceased) second and J. C. Fletcher's Ichitaro third. The winner was ridden by Jockey H. Little of Toronto. The Ontario Jockey Club added $15,000 to last year's race, which amount this year has been reduced to $10,000 of which the winner will receive $7,000, the stakes and the 50 Guineas donated by His Majesty King George V, the second horse $1,500 the third horse $1,000 and $500 to the breeder of the winner.

Origin in 1859

The royal donation of 50 guineas was originally made in 1859 by Queen Victoria, upon the petition of the Toronto Turf Club, through Sir Edmund Head, the then governor-general. The headquarters of the club were at W. G. Kerr's farm at Carlton and the secretary-treasurer was Colonel R. L. Denison. The prayer of the petitioners was for a Queen's Plate of £50, which was granted "to be run for at Toronto or such other place in Upper Canada as Her Majesty might appoint. That was the origin of the race and for four years 1860-1863, it was run at Carleton and subsequently under political pressure, at Guelph, London, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Whitby, Kingston Ottawa, Barrie, Woodstock, Prescott and Picton. In 1886 Her Majesty Queen Victoria, at the instance of the present Duke of Argyll, gave her sanction to an understanding with the founders of the Ontario Jockey Club, that the race should thenceforth be established permanently in Toronto. The race has steadily grown in importance and the royal donation being continued by His Majesty, King Edward the Seventh, has been run annually without interruption; so that when His Majesty, King George, the Fifth, decided to continue the gift, the King's Plate was already established as the oldest fixture run continuously in North America. The race was known as the Queen's Plate from 1881 to 1901 inclusive when it was changed to the Kings' Plate.

The conditions of the King's Plate make it a truly Canadian turf classic. The race is for 3-year-olds and upward, the property of a British subject resident in Ontario, foaled, raised and trained in Ontario, that have never won a race on the flat or across the country other than a race exclusively for two-year-olds, never left Canada and have never been for a period of more than three months out of the province. The distance of the race was a mile and a half till 1887, when it was re-

"BAWLS and STRIKES"

The local Ki-Y League meets next Monday night at the Y, and it is expected that a full turnout will be on hand, as the league is expanding this season.

It is proposed that a baseball school be started for the managers, coaches and umpires of the Ki-Y League. At these meetings the rules, etc., will be fully gone over with the new men.

These classes will start next Wednesday and it is hoped that all interested in baseball will try and be present. All are welcome.

If Oshawa and Kingston are thinking of going back to Intermediate ball, the question is, Where can they get a grouping? as the smaller towns can't begin to compete with these stronger clubs.

Why any city over 15,000 can't support a senior ball club is a mystery to us, providing that it is run properly.

There is more local interest in minor league baseball this season than there has been in years, which is a bright sign for the future of baseball in Belleville.

Did you know that there are nearly 60 lighted parks in organized professional ball, where they play night baseball, now.

Runner on third base with two out. Pitcher starts wind-up and man on third dashes for home. Pitcher continues winding up until batter crosses plate and then delivers ball, batter popping out to first baseman. Does the run count? The play starts with the pitcher's wind-up and ends when the out it made. No runs can score on a play of this kind when the out is the third one. Had there been less than two out, the runner could have been doubled off third.

Naming the outstanding rookie of the 1931 major leagues baseball season to date appears to be a simple task. Joe Vosnik, 30-year-old Cleveland outfielder, is the boy and should be hold anything like his blistering batting pace of the first week, along about September you can knock off that "to date" business and name him the "find" of the year.

Grover Land, veteran catcher and former coach of the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs, has branched out into the umpiring profession and will make his appearance in his new role with the Cotton States League.

Stories of the late Rube Waddell will never cease. The eccentricities of the famous pitcher live on forever. During a never-to-be-forgotten game in St. Louis when Rube fanned 16 batters for the American League strikeout record, he was not going so good in the early rounds. In fact, Rube made his record after the second inning. During the first two frames the fans were yelling to have him taken out. Then, in the third, the Rube fanned three on nine pitched balls and went like a house afire the rest of the game. First up at bat for St. Louis in one of the latter innings, Rube connected for a home run. As he neared second base, the cheering had subsided and the Rube stopped at the bag, remarking to the baseball "dumbbell" at his side, "Now, you see what I can do." Waddell made a majestic bow, and then shouted to the bugs in the right bleachers: "Who the hell can't play this old baseball game?"

Y ALLEYS

The play off game in the Ladies Afternoon League, between Ramblers, winners of the winter series and the Arenas, winners of the fall series resulted in the Ramblers taking three points to Arenas one in a well contested game between two real teams. Arenas had Ayres 513, Simmons 517 for Ramblers and Mrs. Tice 419 for Arenas. This completes the bowling, in this league after the best season it has ever enjoyed. Following is the order in which the teams finished the winter series, however we might say that several of the teams were beginners and they made an excellent showing in the first campaign.

Ramblers, Ever Ready, Arenas, Smile and Try and Hustlers, (equal), Athletics, Aviators and Aranas.

We hope to have them all back with us next season stronger than ever.

In the Ladies League roll, Miss M. Grant was the prize winner. The alleys will close until fall tonight after a successful season and will be opened only to parties who may reserve them.

The management desires to thank all who co-operated in the various leagues, players and captains, as they were largely responsible for the success enjoyed.

The Rush League averages for all the players will be published this week and should furnish a surprise to the players in this league.

LIKE the "Bluebird", the speed with which Turret Cigarettes won the favour of smokers, established a record for popularity.

The constantly growing demand for Turret Cigarettes is the best proof that they please the big majority of smokers with their quality, their mildness and fragrance.

After all, nothing can replace good, honest tobacco; grown and ripened right out in the field under nature's own sunlight—nothing artificial about that—and the high quality is "inbred."

RADIO FANS CORNER

Quite explosive again last night but it cleared up nicely after ten o'clock and we were able to hear B. A. Rolfe and his orchestra and the following programme. Sorry that we couldn't bring in the stations badge that, we could not literally squeeze in with static. And who likes that?

During the Revue tonight the radio fans will hear two more specialty numbers as sung by the California Croon ers, now featured as a Toronto Revue unit. One of your specialties will be "Hello Beautiful." The Revue orchestra will play the latest numbers "Smiles and "April Blossoms" and Jimmie Pepper tells us that, "My Canary has Circles Under Its Eyes." The Singing Duo also offer "I Sing a Love Song" and "L'Amour, Toujours, L'Amour." CFRB carries the program. The time is 8.30.

The Musical Crusaders come to the end of their musical tour tonight and as the programs open tonight we find them on the deck of the C.P.S. Montcalm steaming towards Quebec. The nature of the songs will be French and they are sung by Jeanne Dusseau, famous Canadian soprano. Starting on April 29 the Crusaders are to make a musical tour of Canada. The program is heard at 8.30 over Toronto tonight.

Tune in on WGY tonight at 11.15 Vincent Lopez, Mary Zoller, dainty xylophonist tap out some tuneful music for her delectation.

Uncle Abe and David tonight, Wednesday night, and the time is 8.45 WEAF. The Varieties at 8.30 same station, and at 9.30 Olive Palmer, Paul Oliver and the others. Leonard Joy's string orchestra at 10.30 and at 11.15 Vincent Lopez, followed at midnight by Florence Richardson and her orchestra. During the Pleasure hour tonight at 8.30 from WJZ the fans will be given an opportunity to hear David Barnday, negro impersonator and his "Three Deacons." Regina Resnick and Warren Ber tone will also be featured. Arthur Pryor's band will be on the WABC network at 11.15 tonight followed at 11.30 by Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians.

The zero hour for income tax returns is very near and no "restensions" in sight. As a reminder of the necessity of filling out returns at once and to supply information which may be valuable there will be a radio broadcast sponsored by the Dominion Income Tax Department Thursday night at 11 p.m. over the Canadian National network, the speaker being C. YANKEES EASY VICTORS OVER THE ATHLETICS

New York, April 22—Herb Pennock pitched the New York Yankees to a 12 to 1 victory over the world champion Philadelphia Athletics here today in the deciding contest of a three-game series.

Pennock allowed only seven hits, five of them being scratched in the final inning, when the Athletics scored their only run.

Leroy Mahaffey started for the A's and allowed two runs in the first inning. He was removed in the second after the first two hands hit safely. Carter, rookie, relieved him.

Carter faced only six men, walking four, allowing a single and returning one on a sacrifice.

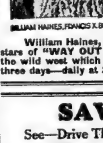
The veteran Ed Rommel was sent to the rescue. He walked Lazzeri and Chapman and allowed Cooke his one and hit of the game before retiring the side on a fast double play.

The second inning rally, which included four hits and six walks netted the Yanks eight runs.

Rommel was effective for the balance of the game, but was touched for homers by Cooke and Lazy.

Cleveland, April 23—The Cleveland Indians made a desperate but futile comeback yesterday and nosed out the Detroit Tigers 5 to 4, in the third and last game of the series here.

The Indians breezed along for eight innings with victory almost assured when the Tigers broke loose in the ninth and scored four runs to tie the score. Stone swung into one of Clint Brown's offerings and slam med it over the right field wall to score three runs after Alexander had singled to bring Johnston in with the fourth run of the inning.



Washington, April 22—The Washington Senators yesterday returned the drubbing received at the hands of the Boston Red Sox Monday, winning 12 to 3, to make it 2 out of 3.

The Nats lost no time getting to Gaston, scoring one run in the first and driving him from the mound in the second but putting across four, three in the third, a man being on each time.

third and one in the fifth. The Sox bunched hits to put across two in the fourth and another in the seventh. The Nats nicked Murphy for two more in the eighth.

Capt. Joe Judge took the sick honors with three out of four trips and Burge and Myer his for the circuit, the third, a man being on each time.

Just Playing Around

BY LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

"What is the trouble, Katie?" My chum Viola demanded sitting on the edge of the bed and putting her arm about me as I shook with sobs.

"I don't want to live," I whimpered.

Viola Carson leaned down and stared hard into my eyes.

"What has happened to you?"

I couldn't speak at the moment.

"Have you been a fool" She asked the question softly.

"Yes—an awful fool," I managed to say.

"Oh!" She exclaimed and then, after a hundred seconds, "Was it Thad Parsons?"

I nodded, too hurt at the mention of his name to articulate.

"Well, there is nothing generally a way out—you aren't the first girl—"

"What—a—if?" I stuttered.

"Now, don't act like that. It won't do you any good to get hysterical—"What do you think?" I demanded.

"You just said—"

I thrust the paper under her nose. "Thad got married yesterday—and that's everything wrong with me—I isn't it enough?" Oh Viola, how could you think—think—"

I couldn't find words.

VIOLA RECEIVED

Viola read the short article about the marriage of Mr. Thad Parsons and Miss Alice Sargent, daughter of the late Kirk X. Sargent of New York and Newport.

She dropped the paper and started at me.

"Well, I'm a so-and-so!" she cried. And then in my surprise, she hugged me.

"Oooh, but you had me cold for a minute. I thought—you said you've been a fool—naturally—"

"I was a fool to think that an aristocrat like Thad Parsons would ever marry a little mess model—Thaddy after he took me about so much, made such passionate love and yet never once mentioned marriage," I declared.

Viola beside me, had a comforting effect.

"It's tough, Katie—mighty tough. You had every reason to believe he would marry you—but you haven't been worse. At least you have nothing to hate yourself for."

Viola brought a bowl and some water and bathed my face.

"Well, I'm not going to die of a broken heart," I said.

"Yes you would if you really loved him. You were just dazzled by his riches," Viola disputed.

That hurt. My sister Cora had said the same thing, repeatedly.

What would Cora say now? What would peter say?

As for the others, I didn't care much.

"Well, there's one thing Viola," I said, "Thad sure married an awful little snob, even if she is a society girl—" and then I began to laugh.

"That's the girl!" Viola cried. "letting let down like that is like pulling a tooth, it hurts the back for a moment and then you feel better."

"I ain't hurt—I laughed at the way she put it. "I just thought of Curt Lawler—she was crazy about her remember?"

"Oh, that's the girl, is it, that is the Arlies Sargent!—she was trying to win Mr. Lawler right under his wife's nose, eh? bet Mrs. Lawler will be glad. She was awfully nice to us out at her place."

I started to dress but Viola stopped me. Perhaps she was afraid I was bluffing and might do something desperate.

"I'm going to send a wire of congratulations," I told her.

"I'll throw a scare into him." I found paper and pencil and wrote:

"Congratulations—and thanks, for all of your letters."

Viola didn't laugh as I expected she would, but only stared thoughtfully at me.

"Letters Did he write many?"

"A couple dozen, last year when he was at Palm Beach, and from Bar Harbor and Canada, wonderful letters."

"Would you show me one?"

"I don't have all of them," I said carelessly.

"Oh, honestly, I'd like to read one."

"What is on your mind?"

"Nothing—only new. And I'll take the wire out and send it."

Viola's sudden change from deep interest to indifference puzzled me.

She took what I had written. The newspaper story had mentioned Thad's hotel and I knew that the wire would be forwarded if he left.

BITTER THOUGHTS

I put on a kimono and sat huddled up by the window, and my thoughts were as very sweet or soothing as I looked out on the street with the remnants of muddy snow and ice.

A thousand miles away was Thad Parsons—in a sunny warm land, where fringed palms waved against the starlight and probably a great moon made a silver tapering ladder on the water. Thad was there, having his honeymoon with that snobbish Alice Sargent—the cat-eyed girl who so boldly made love to Curt Lawler almost under his wife's eyes.

She was getting away with it.

Thad was happy.

And here was I up North. Tomorrow I would go to work and tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow—

I found myself crying again. I had sense enough to know that self pity was the worst thing for me. And I didn't want Viola to see me break down again.

But I was hurt—terribly hurt.

So far as I could see I had loved Thad. He was handsome and gay and splendid company. He was generous, he took me out to play around, and he had always been gentlemanly.

It looked to me as though my playing around days were over.

Work and more work, and most of the men who wanted to take me out were the sort who thought they had a first and second mortgage on a girl if she let them buy a dinner for her.

I saw Viola down below struggling against the wind as she crossed the street to our apartment block. I hurried to the bath room and washed away the second lot of tears, used some powder, and was just warming into our one easy chair, I grabbed up a colored comic page and put on a sort of grin as Viola came in.

A colored comic page and put on a

"Reading the funnies, eh? I guess you'll live," she said, pinching my cheek as she passed to the closet with her coat.

"I want to read one of those letters—I've been thinking it over," she said as she came back to me.

I went to the closet, got down my hat box and took out the whole package of them.

Viola began to count them.

"Whoopp, my dear, twenty-eight of them—may I select one at random?"

She rested her finger against the edges of the envelopes, opened her eyes and pulled letter out from the packet.

She grinned, she did a little wag dance, she stopped and read aloud:

"Never again so long as we live shall I drift so far away from the only girl truth while to me."

"Whoops!" she cried and read more passages, even mushier than that.

"Are they all like this one?" she asked.

"Sure—only some are more so," and I had to grin at her excitement.

"Sit down," she said, pushing me back in the big chair. She drew up a hassock and sat at my knees, still gripping the packet of letters Thad Parsons had written to me.

"Katie, I didn't send the wire yet —I got to thinking it over—it would n't look well; he might use it to show that you didn't care and wired him congratulations."

"What are you talking about.

"These letters, my dear, they are worth a fortune to you—in a breach of promise case—" she shook her finger impressively at me.

"She him, Katie—sue him for a million dollars!" she said solemnly.

"Viola?"

"Sue Thad Parsons" I said, paralyzed.

"Oh-huh," and Viola nodded emphatically, "for a million dollars."

"That isn't such a funny joke."

"Of course you never get all you sue for—you know that, if you ever read the papers, but you'll get a lot —you might get half of it. I'm sure sure you'd never get less than fifty thousand," she went on.

I saw that she was serious.

"You mean for me to go into court and admit before everybody that I let Thad Parsons make a sap of me?" I cried.

"Forget it—the glove is on the other hand, Katie—you'll be making a sap of Parsons."

"I couldn't sit in court—I couldn't listen to all those letters being read —"

Viola interrupted me with a fit of giggling.

"Zowie!" she exclaimed and giggled again. "You couldn't listen to them—they'll read? That's a hot one —think of Thad Parsons sitting there and hearing them read. Probably his little snobbish bride would be there with him—she could choke him and call you alive all at the same time?

"You have a swell sense of humor, I said, the easiest way out is to toss them into the fire."

PLENTY OF WITNESSES

"You sure could buy a lot of glad rument for fifty thousand," Viola said, as if talking more to herself than to me, "and your lawyer would see to it that he got enough extra to pay his own fees. Listen, dear, that Lawyer Curt Lawler who won Cherry Murphy's breach of promise case would just eat this up. I've seen you mushing with Parsons and heard what he has said to you—it made a swell witness.

"You've got plenty of witnesses. He used to call on you when you lived with your sister—and you told me about the time some old sweetie of yours went to him and asked him point blank if he was on the up-and-up with you and he said that he was. There's a swell witness for you.

"Peter Thompson!" I cried. "Why I'd die first—I'd die before I asked Peter to testify. You don't know—"

The mere thought of it made me speechless for the moment. It wasn't so long ago that Peter warned me that time he proposed again. He said that Parsons was no good, that he didn't believe Thad had any intentions of marrying me.

And as for dragging Cora into it! Her husband would be furious at me and at her.

"It's out—I wouldn't sue him if I knew I'd get a billion," I declared.

"Aw, don't be a dummy, Katie," Viola pleaded.

I have always thought that she was anxious to have me sue and to get into the case as a witness, just for the notoriety.

I shook my head and reached for the packet of twenty-eight love letters Thad had written to me.

"Think of the publicity," Viola urged: "you'd get all sorts of offers —movie offers, stage offers—you'd make a fortune in a year."

"I'LL NEVER SUE HIM."

"The publicity is the reason why it's all wet—forget it. I'll never sue him."

Viola looked at me and sighed.

"It's too bad, I see you mean it. A swell chance gone. I wish I had it. I'll go and send that wire now," she said.

I told her I would send the wire in the morning. Viola was one swell pal, but she was so excited over this that she might send any fool telegram.

The next day I wired one word. "Congratulations," and I also sent by registered mail a little packet. It contained all of his letters.

Cora telephoned me on Monday terribly anxious.

"It's all right by me, Sis," I lied rather glibly, "I was fed up on him anyway."

"Splendid—I was afraid you would be sort of heartbroken," Cora said, in what I had half inclined to throw it away without reading it because I suspected that it was a sort of "I-told-you-so" letter of half condolence and half gloating.

ANOTHER PROPOSAL

It was wrong. It was a short note "Short and snappy describes it, for all on Peter's business stationery. He had written:

"Dearest Kitty—What evening may I come in for an evening and make my third proposal?—Always your Peter."

His letter was on my mind all day. At night I talked it over with Viola.

"He's a go-getter, anyway, was her comment, and a diplomat. By no sooner reads of Thad Parson's marriage than he phones after you again, and he's too darn wise to men Thad at all."

"When does the wedding of the peach and the plumber take place?" she teased.

"I'll smack your ears down if you call me a 'peach'," I said, kidding with her. But I became serious at once.

"There will be no wedding bells for Peter Thompson and yours truly —I've got a fifty-cut oil painting of myself unveiled by a plumber and living in three rooms over his shop!"

"Not a little girl in my class," Viola said as if talking to a third person.

I've started playing around, you can bet on that. From now on I'm going to be a regular devil of it," I cried, leaping up and going to the little desk.

"And you are the cute little cutie who can always have a swell time by merely crooking a finger or giving some rich John one of your come-hither looks," Viola declared.

I didn't answer her, for I was busy writing a little note to Peter. I told him frankly that I appreciated him and his honorable intentions, and that I wasn't ready to marry or even think about it, but he must go and find himself some nice domestic ruddy little house-wifey sort of girl and marry her.

Poor Peter.

NO ANSWER

He must have been hurt, for he never answered it at all.

Every day throughout the week I expected a wire, or at least a letter or card, from Thad Parsons. I felt that the least he could do, after my word of congratulation wired to him and after getting his mushy love letters back, would be to send me a note of thanks and perhaps a little apology or word of explanation.

As Viola and I came out of Mike's establishment Saturday afternoon she plucked my arm.

"Look at Moon-Face and his new shiny car," she whispered.

It looked and saw Chubb Osmund. I'll say it was a shiny car; it looked as if it had just arrived from its foreign factory, Chubb lifted his hat and smiled a wider smile.

"For cat's sake—some new victim of yours?" Viola asked.

I had no time to answer for Chubb pounced over as if to grab me.

"How's beautiful?" he chuckled.

"How's the living skeleton?" I came right back, and Viola laughed in his face. I introduced her.

"Let's go places," Chubb suggested.

I hesitated and looked at Viola.

"Bring your boy friend along, Miss Carson," he invited, catching my inquiring glance at her. She told him that she had no engagement for that evening.

"I'll find a little playmate for you," he promised.

I came home and promised to call two hours later.

"That's the big idea—going places, playing around," I told her as we were getting ready. A wonderful dinner.

"Two hours later Chubb called. This time he had a big closed car and chauffeur. He also had a chap named Dutton, to be Viola's escort.

An hour later we were having a wonderful dinner at some raider swell place up on the Boston Post Road.

Chubb was always good company and he never drank too much.

Despite his weight he danced beautifully. As we stepped out on a verandah that overlooked a little arm of the sound Chubb started to get sentimental.

There was a moon and a lot of bedding whispers. We didn't feel the chill of the Spring night because the verandah was glassed in.

"Listen, Kitty," Chubb said, suddenly, patting an arm about me as we leaned on the wide rail, "let's get married."

"Let's walk over to Paris," I retorted.

"Kitty—honey girl" Chubb said, seriously, "this is no hooey, It's a real honest-to-God proposal—I want to marry you."

I looked at him.

MONUMENT TO ORLEANS MAID

Anniversary of Martyr's Death to be Observed at Quebec

Toronto, April 21 (CP). — "The 500th anniversary of the martyrdom of Joan of Arc is not to pass unnoticed in Canada," says Fred Williams in The Mail and Empire. "It will be celebrated at Quebec some time this Summer; the monument to be erected at Bergerville. In Sillery parish will not be ready for the actual date, it was on May 30, 1431, that the Maid of Orleans gave her life for France; but it is hoped to have the ceremony take place before the Autumn.

"The monument to be erected is quite a pretentious one. Joan of Arc will be shown mounted on a white charger, saluting Canada with her spear. Around the base of the statue will be large figures representing women and men who have been their part in Canadian history. On one side will be Mgr. de Laval, the first Bishop of Quebec; the Venerable Mother Marie de l'Incarnation, foundress of the Ursulines; Mother Catherine de Saint-Augustine, the first of the Augustines; Father Dolbeau, the first Recollect priest in New France; and Jeanne Mance, foundress of the Hotel Dieu, of Montreal. On the other side will be figures of Jacques Cartier, the discoverer of Canada; Samuel de Champlain, the founder of Quebec; Louis Hebert, the first farmer in Canada; the Venerable Mother Marguerite Bourgeoys, found ress of the Congregation of Notre Dame; Maisonneuve, the founder of Ville Marie (Montreal); Jean de Brebeuf, the martyr; and Abbe de Queylus, the first Sulpician. The figure of Jacques Cartier has been supplied by the Province of Quebec; that of Maisonneuve by the city of Montreal; and the others by he residents desire concerned or by private donors.

"A special commemorative volume is in preparation to mark the occasion, among the promised contributors being Oscoges Groux, of the French Academy; Mgr. Henri Deboul, the great historian of Joan of Arc; Canon Theiller de Poncherville, of Paris; Mgr. Camille Roy, of the Quebec Seminary; Hon. Thomas Chapais, Jean Bruchesi, of the University of Montreal; and, it is hoped, some clerical and civil leaders of Protestant life in Canada, for it is believed that many broad-minded English-Canadians will, in this move true light of history, join in thus honoring the Maid of Orleans, who became French-Canadian author has done by saving France enabled Canada to be founded.' Many Ontarioians will doubtless witness the ceremony, the date of which will be announced later."
